CAUGHT ON THE RUN ABOUT TOWN

There was plenty to attract folks out of doors yesterday and there was plenty of weather for the enjoyment of those who went out; it was a joyous day, just as every Sunday has been since Easter, as if the weather man was endeavoring to make good for his blunder on that day.

Flowers had blossomed forth in profusion everywhere and there were hundreds of people who found them and appreciated them; the long procession of returning stragglers who came back from the fields was flower-laden and sunburned. For the first time this year, the sun struck what might be called a good raft; in the afternoon Old Sol was fairly on his stride and was going some. In all directions the people of the city scattered; some of them went in automobiles and some were behind good horses; there were others who went afoot, but they were not the ones who got the least amount of enjoyment out of the day. It was a day of happiness and comfort and enjoyment and if the weather man intended it as a sample, he may be assured that it was entirely satisfactory and that the public will be satisfied if he sends some more of the same every day this week.

The work on the defenses of the Van Buren street bridge attracted a good many visitors during the day. Most of them, naturally, watched the work at the bridge, but a few who had more strength went up the canyon to supervise the work of loading the rocks upon the cars which brought the rip-rap down to the bridge. It was the fortune of these to witness what might easily have been a serious accident, but which merely furnished plenty of excitement without any bad results. On the mountain side above the old Moore ranch a gang of men was engaged in getting out the big rocks for the fill at the bridge. Two or three of them had been assigned by the foreman to a place where there were some good big rocks and been told to roll them down to be loaded. They started some of the rocks and they came down in good shape; then they struck one that weighed about three tons and was nearly enough round to roll well. It started with a rush and was soon moving with the velocity of a fast train; then it acquired the momentum of a runaway automobile and was getting into the canyon ball class when it was spied by the engineer of the work train; he promptly jumped his engine out of the way and gave the big rock clear sailing. The great boulder bounded from the hill to the track, broke a tie, bent a rail and then bounded into the river. But it would have been a different story if the engineer had been less prompt in action.

The interior department is preparing to declare the reservation ready for opening as evidenced by letters that are received at the land office these days. The last one of this class came from the superintendent of drawings and openings and is addressed to the register and receiver. The superintendent asks a long list of questions, most of which could have been answered by a man a few desks away from him at Washington, as the government employed a corps of experts a good many months, finding out just what he wants to know. But he sends back to Missoula to find out how much grazing land there is in the reservation, how much is fit for cultivation, how much is timbered, how much is waste and how much has been allotted to the Indians. All of these figures have been compiled by the Plathead commission, whose report is in Washington. But the superintendent wants to know some things which were not covered. He asks when the farming season begins and he would like to know what crops are best suited to this region. He would like information as to how many townsites the needs of the people demand. He wants to know how many people there are in Missoula and, in anticipation of his own visit here, he inquires the names of the mayor, the chief of police and the sheriff. He would also like a tip as to whether or not there is any gambling in town. The names of railroads and the time cards can be easily furnished, but the rest of the information calls for considerable correspondence.

APPOINTS AGENT.

UNCLE LARRY LAVEY IS DEAD

VETERAN OF EARLY DAYS SUCCESSFUL TO SEVERE ATTACK OF PNEUMONIA.

Lawrence Lavey, one of the best-known pioneers of western Montana, died yesterday morning of pneumonia, after an illness of a fortnight. During the past winter he had had two attacks of the same nature and had recovered; Friday and Saturday his condition was such that it was believed he would regain his health, but Saturday night he weakened and yesterday morning his spirit took its flight. The body was taken in charge by Undertaker Marsh and is now lying at the residence of Hugh B. Campbell on West Spruce street. The funeral will be held there Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Lawrence Lavey was a native of Ireland; he was 68 years old and came to America in 1861. Moving westward, he came to Montana in 1868, stopping first at Pioneer. In the fall of that year he went to Skalkaho in the Bitter Root and in that valley the remainder of his life was spent with the exception of the last few years, when he had lived in Missoula. He was well known all over the western part of the state and had a host of friends through the Bitter Root and in Missoula. The Knights of Columbus will attend his funeral.

He leaves a widow and two stepsons. Mrs. O. P. Jackson, mother of Hugh B. Campbell, and Mrs. Robert Carlton of Carlton are his sisters.

REV. J. A. BARNES FINDS HOMES FOR CHILDREN

After spending several days with children of his acquaintance in the Bitter Root valley, Rev. J. A. Barnes, of the Children's Home society, returned to Missoula yesterday, afterwards going to Bonner, where last evening he held services. Mr. Barnes says that he has found homes for five or six children during the present week in response to the article in The Missoulian of last Wednesday. When he leaves for home this morning he will take with him Flora Anderson, a nine-year-old orphan whose mother died here last February and who has since been in the care of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wilson. The little girl has a brother at the state orphanage in Twin Bridges, and Mr. Barnes plans to place both children in a good home together. Tomorrow Mr. Barnes will go to Twin Bridges to get five or six children, whom he will take to various homes throughout the state.

The grave-diggers of New Work have recently formed a labor union.
