

J. SULLIVAN LOSES HIS TEETH

PERIPATETIC TAKES RECOURSE TO PUBLICITY TO RECOVER UNUSUAL LOSS.

LOST—One set of false teeth. Finder leave at Missoulian office and save the life of J. Sullivan.

It was no ordinary calamity that befell J. Sullivan yesterday. It was no small matter to wake up and find that exactly one-half of one's teeth have disappeared, to find that one's upper jaw is entirely unpopulated, but that is just what happened to J. Sullivan, peripatetic, yesterday morning. Mr. Sullivan, who claims French descent, woke up shy on molars, bicuspids, grinders, canines and all the rest of the things that the dentist talks about when he is dealing frantically with your very soul. Still, it wasn't the first time that Mr. Sullivan had awakened without his teeth being in his mouth, but the unfortunate part of the affair was that the teeth were not anywhere near and could not be found after a painstaking search.

There followed a day of hunger for Mr. Sullivan, who scorned soup of any kind and yearned with a deep longing for meat, potatoes, hardack and other foods of a substantial sort. Breakfast time was passed over lightly in the fervor of strenuous search; noon came and the optimism of Mr. Sullivan promised that the teeth must surely be discovered before dinner, and the afternoon came and waned. At 6 o'clock J. Sullivan was so chagrined that he didn't even take time to dress for dinner. In his desperation he took recourse to publicity.

Walking into the business office of The Missoulian he mumbled the words of a classified advertisement and naively expressed his hope that the teeth would be recovered. He explained their loss as follows:

A Day of Hunger.
"I drank two glasses of beer, and when I woke up I didn't have 'em. They were good teeth, and cost $7, and I got 'em in Spokane five years ago, and I never lost 'em before. I think I must have dropped 'em on the ground. They're no good to anybody else, and I don't see why the guy what finds 'em shouldn't bring 'em back to me. I haven't lost all of 'em"—Mr. Sullivan gave ocular demonstration that he still retained his lower set, which had also cost $7, and had likewise been purchased in Spokane.

Mr. Sullivan affirms that he will starve to death if his teeth are not returned forthwith, for, as he puts it himself, "I needs 'em to digest my food." Thus Mr. Sullivan has put it up to the honesty of Missoulian to find his teeth and save him from starving to death.

TOLAN ADVISES CLASS OF GRADUATES

ious young. Why, young ladies and young men, if you keep yourselves well-poised and well-balanced, use tact and judgment, and lead clean, honorable lives, the sweetest things in life are in store for you. Sacrifices you will have to make, but make them like American men and women should make them, and when you do, you will be all the stronger, better and broader for your efforts. And I say to you again and again have courage and do not go through life with an apology written all over your countenance, but by your actions you must demand from your fellow-men the proper respect for what you are. Do not forget that the thousands who need our services have only this way of finding you out. The influence of a healthy optimism penetrates with its rays the gloom which sometimes overpowers the human heart; just as the morning glory of the rising sun dissipates the lowering clouds which hang around the gates of dawn.

Truth and Honesty.
Cultivate the spirit of benevolence. Try to influence your associates to be honest, humane, noble; to develop the spiritual forces which make for the most satisfying success. Deal mercifully with the man beside you, for he, also, has a hard battle to fight. Perhaps the light he sees is as pure and clear to him as yours is to you. "Thinks alone can not make a great period. The glory of Christ was not that He knew much, but that He loved much." And the name of sad-faced Lincoln does not creep into our hearts and souls by virtue of his great power of his mind, but on account of his intense love for his fellow-men, and he laid bare his heart and his whole life-work when he said: "Oh when I may, I want it said of me by those who knew me best that I always tried to pluck a thistle and plant a flower where I thought a flower could grow."

Gold Not Power.
Do not become the slaves of the power of gold. Do not measure your success in this life by any monetary standard. And above all, no matter how poor and humble you may be, never stain or taint your names with the touch of a dishonest dollar, for nothing will hurry you along the road of destruction so rapidly and surely. Wealth is almost omnipotent today in our beloved land. Greater than the eloquence of Greece, the legislation of Rome, or the cunning of kings, it lifts a man to the mastery of his fellows. That power is neither moral nor immoral; it serves the noblest end and it lends itself to the most vicious purposes. But America will show to the world that great wealth under the sway of free and equal laws may be made to serve the general happiness of the people of this mighty democracy of ours. This age will bring the will and the way to adjust and utilize the riches and resources of society, so that the worthy poor may receive their share of the light and beauty of civilization. Again I charge you, fill your souls with hope, for all that we have and are, pride, ambition, greed, justice, virtue, benevolence, cares and strifes and schemes, all that is noble and all that is base will pass to the unknown tomorrow, and in it all will work the lesson of a great and kindly spirit, of a new energy and truth.

Heroism in Duty.
In the simple sphere of common duties are opportunities of real heroism. Often he is a true hero who rests a loving hand on the fevered brow of pain; who inspires him with faltering step to fill his soul with hope anew. You all cannot become great writers, great men and women, or mighty conquerors, for after all the brutal glory of conquest must give way to the greater glory of adherence to the simple virtues. A famous orator in speaking of the great modern Caesar well says: "It rather has been a French peasant and to have worn wooden shoes and to have lived in a little hut with the vines creeping over the door and the grapes growing purple under the kisses of the autumn sun, with my children sitting on my knees and my wife by my side as the day dies from the sky—aye, ten thousand times, than the imperial impersonation of force and crime—Napoleon the Great."

The University.
To those of you who contemplate a still higher education do not attach too much magic to the famous but overcrowded schools of the east. Pastures far away look very green, for "distance lends enchantment to the view," but as a philosopher has well said, "You cannot get away from here, for when you go there, you'll find that it's another here." Similarly old institutions renowned for their learning beckon us to enter their halls, but my sincere belief is that there is now a school in the west, full of educational promise and power, with a good man and a great educator at its head, and one who has a higher education equal to that which you can receive in the east, and as a citizen I am proud tonight to stand within the shadow of its imposing structure—the University of Montana.

Your Parents.
I congratulate your parents on the successful termination of your high school course. Too often youth apt to forget the many sacrifices which parents make in giving their children the benefits of an education, but from now on you are the sunshine or the darkness of their lives and your happiness is their happiness and your sorrow their sorrow. And as time runs on through sun and shade, and seasons come and seasons go, and in the quest of success you become separated from home and kindred kindly remember to drop a line to mother and father and make the sun-set of their lives as beautiful and happy as lies within your power. And as you leave here tonight let memories of your teachers go with you forever. No one knows better than you of their hard work and struggles and toil. The philosopher may have gathered a few faithful and intelligent followers; the departed poet has made men dance to the music of his lyre; the statesman may have made a nation his debtor; but the work of a good teacher is as enduring as the sculptured monuments of Parian marble for she is molding to intelligence and virtue immortal minds.

The World.
And now you are to receive your diplomas—the record and reward of four years of continuous study. In to the great world of work some of you will enter; while others of you will prosecute your studies to a higher degree. That you all may meet with smiling success and glorious reward is my heartfelt wish. Now as ever, in fact, the world needs good men and noble women. May it be your proud privilege then to generously respond to the call of your country. And thus, though perhaps in a very slight degree, you will give momentum to forces which will prove of enduring benefit to all mankind.

The foundation of robust health is what is allowed to enter the mouth. The more simple the diet, the more perfect the health.

TROUBLE IS FEARED IN ASIATIC TURKEY

Alexandretta, Asiatic Turkey, June 4.—There was some firing by Turkish soldiers last night in the village of Decaryul. No information regarding the casualties has been received. It appears that the commander of the troops two days ago demanded that the villagers deliver all their arms to him. The Turkish officers, who are greatly distrusted, have been acting in a most arbitrary manner with the villagers, and there has been dread of a repetition of the Adana tragedy.

THAW MUST REMAIN IN INSANE ASYLUM

He then applied to the appellate division, which today sustained the lower court and dismissed the writ.
