GET READY.

It is the testimony of all who have had experience in former reservation openings that Missoula should make special preparation for the registration period which is about to open. Should the thousands of visitors who will be here next month suffer inconveniences and find a serious lack of accommodations, Missoula will receive some undesirable advertising. On the other hand, if the crowds are well cared for and if ample preparation is made for their comfort, the city will receive the appreciation which is due. There is a grave responsibility resting upon the people of Missoula at this time. It is wrong to listen to the words of those who say that we can take care of these crowds without special preparation; this is not so; the most painstaking and careful preparation is necessary and must be made at once. Judge Witten has emphasized this need in his letters to the mayor and in his bulletin to the land officers. The personal testimony of men who have participated in other openings is to the same effect. There must be sleeping and eating accommodations provided; provisions must be made for lavatories and toilet rooms. There are many details which must be looked after and that at once. The chamber of commerce should take up this matter; there should be a general committee named at once and the co-operation of the city and county officers should be given. The matter is of great importance to the city; its consideration should not be further delayed.

MAKING US OVER.

The editor of Harper's Weekly deplores the fact that the reports of the proceedings of congress do not give more detailed accounts of the debates in order that the public may be brought to a realization of the way things go on in congress; the admission is made, however, that it is doubtless the fault of the reading public rather than of the newspapers, that the stories of the debates in congress are made readable rather than mere verbatim reports of the proceedings. If the people realized, says Harper's, what goes on in Washington there would be a change made that would improve the country and give it better laws and better statesmen.

"As things are, however, people not specially interested in what congress is doing follow the proceedings only in the most superficial way, or not at all. That means, of course, that our public opinion is not properly informed; and that makes misgovernment easier. It is not the debates that control votes—although they do sometimes, in flashes, disclose some of the motives that actually control. All Washington is a camp; and the real battle is too often not on the floor of the senate, but in the lobbies and committee-rooms of the capitol, and in hotels and clubs and private houses. Bargains and agreements made outside and in secret largely determine the divisions in the senate, and the speeches too often merely give plausible reasons for votes which are cast for reasons entirely different. It is because these things are so, and always so when a protective tariff is working, that we detest the whole system. We do not, of course, expect to see it overthrown in a day or in a year; but every exposure of one of its specific inequities brings us a little way onward toward the righteous indignation which ought to overwhelm it."

This, of course, is an exaggerated picture, but there is much truth in its portrayal. It does not, however, indicate that we are any worse off now than we were when the government was younger. Ever since the constitutional convention, there have been "bargains and agreements made outside and in secret." The location of the capitol at Washington was a bargain and the country is the better for the deal that Alexander Hamilton made when he conceded to the southern statesmen the site for the capitol in exchange for the incorporation into the constitution of some parts of our governmental system which have since proved to be our salvation. As long as humans disagree, "bargains and agreements" will be necessary for successful government. When we all agree, we shall have that ideal form of government which the socialists set forth so alluringly; there will be no trouble then. But when that time comes we shall have been a long time dead or human nature will have been entirely made over.

A DECADE OF FIGHTING.

The Philadelphia North American celebrates the tenth anniversary of its existence under its present management by the publication of a special edition, the leading feature of which is a symposium prepared by the friends and foes of the great newspaper, setting forth varying views of the position which the North American occupies and the influence which it wields. The anniversary issue is interesting; the North American has evidently published the criticisms of its foes as completely as the laudations of its friends. The result is that the reader, summing up the evidence, comes to the conclusion that the Philadelphia newspaper has fought a good fight and that its community is better for the work which the North American has done. We do not believe there was ever anything exactly like this special edition of the North American. It is unique and instructive and it places the North American where it belongs, in the first rank of American journalism.

James J. Hill makes epigrams as well as he used to build railways. He says, "Law enforcement is not keeping pace with law enactment" in these United States. And that is a good way to put it.

From Washington comes the news that President Taft has increased his diet from two square meals a day to three. This is the last lingering doubt removed as to the return of prosperity.

As predicted, Mr. Roosevelt is finding the African pests much less troublesome than some of the American species with which he was familiar for a good many years.

John D. Rockefeller says he has no ambition to know finance, but he would like to know golf. Which verifies the proverb that man is never satisfied.

The census estimate is that there is $35 apiece for every man, woman and child in this country. We wish the fellow who has our share would let loose.

The advertising columns of The Missoulian reflect the progressive policy of the city's merchants—the best boost a town could have.

Even Coney Island will not tolerate the new pantaloen skirt. It is, therefore, up to Chicago to introduce the bifurcated garment.

At least, Missoula gave Deer Lodge better weather than she got when she went to the pen town.

There is absolutely no excuse for the Missoula man who buys from a mail-order catalogue.

The price of wheat vindicates Mr. Patten; it stayed up when he let go.

The Red Apple is having weather that is made to order this month.

The Bitter Root valley has earned its increased train facilities.

The state university's best advertisement is its graduates.

The new Red Apple train will be kept busy.

LIEUTENANT BAMBERGER

Washington, D. C., June 11.—The United States is rapidly waking up to the necessities of aerial navigation as a means of defense in an attack and the balloon is an important part of this service. Lieut. Raymond S. Bamberger has just been commissioned by the government to make ascensions and every day when the weather permits his ascensions are viewed by hundreds of people.

MRS. GLAUDE IS DEAD AT HUSON

WELL-KNOWN RESIDENT OF THE FRENCHTOWN VALLEY SUCCEEDS TO ILLNESS.

Special to The Daily Missoulian. Huson, June 12.—After an illness of over a year, suffering from a complication of diseases, Mrs. Emmigretta Glaude, wife of Napoleon Glaude, died at her home in Huson at 5:30 o'clock yesterday evening.

Mrs. Glaude was a well-known and popular woman of the Frenchtown valley and her loss will be mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives. She was born at Fall River, Wis., on December 8, 1859. She was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Sloan, the former of whom is living at Golden, Iowa. She leaves a number of children, a son, G. N. Glaude, and four daughters, Mrs. W. M. Forrier, Mrs. Della Boyer and Misses Sarah and Gertrude, all of whom are residents of Huson. Besides her husband, father and children she leaves a brother and three sisters. The brother is George Sloan of Paton, and the sisters are Mrs. Gertrude Koons of Ogden, Utah; Mrs. Mettie Crain of Missoula, and Mrs. Chloe Knapp of Leslie, Idaho.

The funeral services will be held at Huson at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, and burial will be at the Frenchtown cemetery.

Start the Day Just Right

You can get breakfast at Ye Olde Inn at 7 o'clock and on through the morning. Hot waffles a specialty. If you heat your knife slightly you can cut hot bread or cake quite easily with it. A little flour dredged over the top of a cake will keep the icing from running. There should be just as much conscience put into the dusting of a room as in managing an estate properly.
