Yesterday was indisputably the day of Butte and Anaconda in this city. The busy cities up the river were represented in greater numbers than has been the case on any previous day of the registration. From the mines and the smelters they came in blocks of a hundred and there were plenty of the blocks. It was a thrifty crowd and its members got the grand hand right and left when they arrived. It was like a visit from neighbors and the visitors felt neighborly, too. In the first place they were hungry; they found plenty to eat and they said they enjoyed it and that they found abundant opportunity for that; they were registered promptly and each one felt certain last night that he had the winning slip in his particular brown envelope. In the next place, there were Missoula friends to visit and there was a warm reception there.

No Anaconda crowd would be an Anaconda crowd if Frank Clinton and Doc Emmerson were not there; to attest to the genuineness of yesterday's bet, they were Johnny-on-the-spot. And the first thing they did was to hunt up John Tolan in order to get registered. They found him and when they found him he was hurried in the rush of those who wanted the lucky slips. The two formed a wedge and went through the crowd to the table where Tolan sat and gave him their names. He knew the rest but he made them tell it all, even their ages, before all that crowd. And he thought he was getting the best of them. Clinton had a soldier's certificate, so the two of them got three slips. When they had sworn and had received their documents, they bindily laid down a copper cent each, and then went their way. Tolan said he got two cents more than he expected from them and he furnished the stamps. But times must be hard in Anaconda when Clinton and Emmerson travel on an excursion with copper cents in their pockets. But they got their money's worth.

Then Emmerson and Clinton went out to look the town over before their train left. They had not seen such a crowd since the dog and pony show was in Anaconda, six years ago, and they rushed to cover as soon as they found a place where they knew they would be safe. They came to The Missoulian office, naturally, and there they recovered their breath and got their bearings. When they had quieted down a bit, they asked what was the matter in town that there was so much going on. When they were told that it is that every day, they opened their eyes in amazement and asked how soon they could get out of town; the excitement was more than they could stand. No amount of coaxing would induce them to stay. "This city has grown too fast for me and it is still growing at a rate that scares me," said Clinton, "and there is just one thing for me and that is the back trail. When does that train start?" He and Doc went over to the Milwaukee station and sat an hour before the train arrived. It was quiet there.

Dan Roach was another of the Anacondas in town yesterday. e didn't come down with the crowd; he stopped on his way from the Seattle fair and had spent a day here before the others came. The result was that he was acclimated enough by the time they got here to be able to show them around a bit. But he didn't; he just laughed at their embarrassment. He had been through the same experience himself.

Mark King was yet another. He came with three schoolmates and he had his hands full. He has a lot of friends in Missoula but they were all too busy to help with the entertainment of the ladies, as he had given them no notice of his coming and they were unprepared. But when he had shed his coat and vest and appeared in a blue shirtwaist, he didn't need any help from anybody.

"There's another democrat over at our house and he weighs nine pounds," was the cheerful announcement which Tom Marlowe telephoned to The Missoulian yesterday morning. "He is a dandy boy and everybody is glad to see him." There were warm congratulations from everywhere as the news became known and the new Marlowe has a lot of friends already.

After two days at home Charles Lemley is able to find his way about town; it had grown so during the month he had trouble when he first arrived. But with his acclimatization and the home cooking and the prospect of a fishing trip, he is gaining rapidly and is quite himself again. He has received a cordial welcome that most please him; everybody is glad to see him and to know that he is well. His strength is returning and he will go fishing this week.

At the fair grounds this afternoon there will be paced the last three miles of the 15-mile pacing race which has been engaging the attention of local horsemen for a month. John R. Dally's Obispo Jurlor has recovered from his lameness sufficiently to start again and there will be the original four contestants when starting Judge Darrige rings the bell. It will be a warm race. Senator Carter and Nellie Obispo are tied at six heats each in the 12 miles that have been raced. Today will settle the contest and the race will be a hummer. There will also be a lively skirmish between Obispo Jurlor and Mabelle for third money. The event promises to be the most interesting of the series.

CASE AGAINST CYR DISMISSED

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER
W. P. SMITH HEARS MUCH TESTIMONY.

At a hearing before United States Commissioner Wallace P. Smith, held yesterday morning, the case against Levett ("Foxy") Cyr, charged with permitting gambling and selling liquor to Indians, was dismissed. "Foxy" Cyr is a brother of George Cyr, who is proprietor of the Board of Trade saloon on West Front street, and is said to have sold liquor to two Indians and to have caused them to lose a small amount of money in a poker game. The evidence of the Indians was not very satisfactory at the hearing on Friday, but the commissioner took his decision under advisement until yesterday, when he decided in favor of the defendant.

John Gill and Sam Belmont, alleged to have been mixed up in some liquor transactions with the Indians, were given a hearing yesterday morning, both being bound over to the United States court. Gill was unable to furnish bonds and will remain in jail until his trial, while Belmont secured his liberty when he furnished the required bond of $500.

There was no hearing in the afternoon, as S. C. Ford, who acted as prosecutor for the government, was called out of town, but the next case will be heard Monday afternoon. This is the case against Felix Barnaby, alleged to have had a hand in some illicit liquor deals with the Indians. On Tuesday afternoon the cases against John P. Malurkey and W. W. Moore, two soldiers, will be heard. The men are charged with having introduced liquor onto the reservation.

FUNERAL THIS MORNING.
The funeral of J. D. Thomas, the brakeman killed in a wreck near Durant several days ago, will be held this morning at 9 o'clock at Lucy's chapel. The services will be in charge of Rev. Henry Van Engelen of the Baptist church. Interment will be in the Missoula cemetery.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO THE DEAD

WORDS OF PASTOR SPOKEN AT THE FUNERAL OF JAMES ALBERT MILES.

One of the incidents of the past week in which Missoula was more than ordinarily interested was the funeral of James Albert Miles. This interest had its origin in the high esteem in which Mr. Miles was held in the city that had been so long his home; this esteem and to tender affection which his closer friends felt for him, were reflected in the tribute which was paid to him by his pastor, Rev. Henry Van Engelen, who conducted the funeral service. Mr. Van Engelen said:

"James A. Miles was a quiet, unassuming, unobtrusive man, who ever sought to keep himself in the background as much as possible and we are, therefore, not at all surprised that before his death he made the request that this service should be conducted in a simple manner and should be held here at the home he loved so dearly. Few men loved home as did our dear brother. He appreciated his home so much and said it was a beautiful place to live and a beautiful place to die in and he thought it was the most desirable place to hold this service.

"While our brother shunned notoriety, yet such was his stalwart Christian character and such was his faith in God and in His word and such was his conservation and loyalty to the cause of Christ that like the Master whom he served, he could not be hid. His love for the church could not be hid. He loved the church better than any other institution on earth because it was Christ's own institution to save and bless humanity. He loved its worship, its ordinances and its activities. He was very tenderly attached to the Immanuel Baptist church of this city, of which he had been a member so long. For many years he served this church, both in the capacity of deacon and also, until quite recently, as superintendent of the Sunday school. These offices he filled with that quiet dignity so characteristic of him, which always added to the impressiveness of the services in which he participated. He always took a special interest in the young people and his wholesome influence upon the boys and girls and the youth of the church cannot be fully estimated and will take eternity to reveal.

"Although in all these varied Christian activities our brother sounded a trumpet before him, yet these faithful services, backed by a consistent Christian life, made it impossible that his influence as a Christian worker should be limited to the church of which he was a member, but he stood high in the esteem of members of all the churches and of those, also, who were not members of the church. During the weeks and months of his protracted illness the thoughts of the people of Missoula all focused upon his sick chamber and the tenderest sympathy and heartiest good wishes were extended to him by the people in general who all loved and respected him.

"His worthy life was brought to a close by a beautiful sickness. It did not come to visit him. The words that he spoke and the prayers he uttered made you a better man. He was always cheerful and hopeful and never uttered a word of complaint. During the early part of his illness he was very anxious to recover for he saw so much in life to live for. He enjoyed the comforts and blessings of nature, invisibly manifested on every hand. During his illness one could not help but notice how much he appreciated the tender and devoted ministrations of his faithful companion and up to the very end he always gave affectionate expression to his gratitude for her constant attention.
