WOMAN IS BURNED IN EXPLOSION

MRS. W. T. STONE POURS COAL OIL ON OPEN FIRE WITH AWFUL RESULTS.

With horrible burns all over her body, causing her almost unbearable agony, Mrs. W. T. Stone lies at the point of death this morning in St. Patrick's hospital as the result of an explosion following an attempt to pour coal oil from a can onto an open fire. The woman is in a terrible condition. From her knees to her shoulders there is nothing but a mass of burns, so bad that at the least touch the skin and flesh drop off. All day long the physicians extended no hope for her recovery, but late last night she apparently took a change for the better. She regained partial consciousness and rested fairly easily, so that the doctors attending her said that there was no immediate danger, at least, and that she might recover.

While Mrs. Stone lay suffering in the hospital last night her husband, who is a forest assistant on the Deer Lodge forest, was speeding down to Missoula as fast as horse and train could carry him with nothing but a brief telegram to give him word of his wife's condition, and bent solely on the hope of seeing her alive once more. The man was at work in the Deer Lodge forest near Anaconda yesterday when the word came to camp that his wife had been fatally injured. Messengers were at once dispatched for him. He took a horse and rode into Anaconda, where he caught a train, getting into Missoula at about midnight.

The alarm of fire following the explosion was turned in at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning from the home of Assistant Forester F. A. Silcox, where Mrs. Stone had been living with Mr. and Mrs. Silcox and the latter's mother, Mrs. C. E. Thatcher.

The Accident.

How the accident occurred is a mystery. The general and accepted theory seems to be that Mrs. Stone was attempting to hurry the kitchen fire by the use of coal oil, pouring it out of the can into the open fire. The flames apparently followed the stream of oil into the can and an explosion followed, covering the unfortunate woman with burning oil and setting her clothes on fire.

Dazed by the sudden shock of the explosion, and with her clothes blazing with the burning oil, the girl, for that is all she is, ran out of the kitchen into the arms of Mrs. Silcox and her mother, Mrs. Thatcher, who had run toward the room on hearing the explosion. Crazed with pain, the poor woman broke away from her friends and ran into the street, screaming with pain. Two neighbors, W. H. Wood and Louis Overturf, were passing at the time, and they immediately ran to the girl, wrapped their coats around her and, throwing her to the ground, began to smother the flames and tear off the burning clothing. They were too late, however. The girl was burned horribly, scarcely a spot on her body having been untouched by the fire, and her suffering was pitiable. Doctors were called at once and Mrs. Stone was removed to the hospital. Here she was placed under an opiate with the hope of easing her pain during what were then considered her last few hours of life.

No Eye Witnesses.

No one saw the accident, so far as can be learned, and as Mrs. Stone was unconscious until late last night, her story could not be learned. Mrs. Thatcher and Mrs. Silcox, who were closest to the accident, are prostrated by the shock of the affair and neither would speak of it yesterday. From what they said right after the accident, however, it appears that they were upstairs when they heard an explosion in the kitchen. They both rushed down, only to be met half way by Mrs. Stone, with her head and hair ablaze. They tried as best they could to put out the woman's blazing clothes, but she broke away from them and fled to the street.

W. B. Wood, who rescued the unfortunate girl from her plight and who put out the burning clothes, told a fairly clear story of the accident. "We were walking down the street past the house," he said, "when we heard a loud noise, and turning, saw Mrs. Stone come rushing out of the house with her clothes and hair ablaze, and apparently mad with pain. We immediately smothered the fire with our coats and attempted to relieve her by tearing off the burned cloth. The sight of the burns was sickening, and at the least touch the flesh dropped off where the injuries were worst."

R. J. Kitching, who lives near the scene of the fire, also saw part of the accident, and his story confirms those of the others. He was awakened at about 7:30 by the sound of an explosion, coming apparently from his own house. His wife immediately cried to him that the house was on fire, and, jumping into his clothes, he ran into the street, where he saw Wood and Overturf helping the injured woman.

The Fire.

The fire itself was but a small one, and the prompt arrival and systematic work of the department confined it to the kitchen, the damage not exceeding $200. The house is located at 227 Tremont street and is owned by George Steinhilberner.

The case of Mrs. Stone is unusually pitiful. She is but 22 years old and has been married only two years. Her husband has been stationed at Anaconda for some time past, and during his absence Mrs. Stone has been living with Mrs. Silcox. Now she lies unconscious in the hospital, her brief moments of consciousness made terrible by her pain, and with almost no hope of her recovery offered her. Mrs. Stone is broken down by the affair. The married life of the couple had been an unusually happy one, and the

TIM LEBEAU PLEADS NOT GUILTY

NOTORIOUS CHARACTER IS ARRAIGNED ON TWO SEPARATE COUNTS

Senator J. M. Dixon and Chief Engineer H. N. Savage returned yesterday from the reservation, where they had intended to inspect the Flathead reclamation project. Heavy rains interfered with the trip and it was postponed. Mr. Savage went on to Helena.

Tim Lebeau, one of Missoula's notorious characters, who was run out of town several weeks ago and went to Helena, from which place he was brought back by Sheriff Graham, was arraigned yesterday before Justice of the Peace Small on two charges. One charge is that of seduction under promise of marriage, the alleged victim being Laura Peterson, a waitress. The second offense charged is that of enticing an unmarried woman for the purpose of prostitution. To both charges Lebeau pleaded not guilty. He was defended by an attorney from Helena. His preliminary hearing was set for 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and bonds of $1,500 on each charge were fixed, making a total of $3,000 required to insure his appearance at the hearing. He was unable to furnish the bonds and will be held in the county jail.
