

KAUFMAN NO MATCH FOR CHAMPION

JOHNSON OUTFIGHTS, OUTHITS AND OUTGENERALS BLACKSMITH OPPONENT.

San Francisco, Sept. 9.—In a contest unique in local prize-ring annals, Jack Johnson, the world's champion, was accredited with a "newspaper" decision over Al Kaufman at the end of 10 rounds of fighting this afternoon at Coffroth's arena. According to the articles of agreement, if both men were on their feet when 10 rounds had been fought, no decision was to be given. Referee Eddie Smith, however, stated to the assembled newspaper men, after the contest, that Johnson had both outfought and outhit the Californian at every stage of the contest and, therefore, was entitled to the verdict. Smith gave out this statement:

"Johnson outfought, outhit and outgeneralized Kaufman all through the fight. He fought in his usual patient way, and I think that he did not hold back. In the ninth round, as well as in some of the other rounds, he tried hard to finish his opponent. Kaufman forced Johnson hard in the seventh and ninth rounds and landed some good body blows. He, however, was no match for the champion."

Kaufman Bewildered.

Johnson opened the battle as though he were determined to make a show of Kaufman. He employed tantalizing lefts and forceful right uppercuts with such frequency that the erstwhile blacksmith was fairly bewildered. Early in the contest his face began to show signs of the champion's punches and in the third round a well-directed, ponderous wallop started the blood flowing in a stream from Kaufman's face. Kaufman was slow and clumsy by comparison and his footwork was amateurish. It was not until the seventh round that one of his powerful swings found refuge on the champion's stomach, and it was this punch that wore up to this time to vanish.

All through the contest Johnson appeared to be holding himself in reserve and it took constant coaching by the spectators and an occasional punch from the blacksmith to start him going. And when he did let go he played with Kaufman as if the latter were a mere tot. Johnson's best blow was a right uppercut at close range, and when this found its mark Kaufman's head would bob back a foot.

Al Lands a Good One.

In the ninth round Kaufman found the champion's stomach with a vicious right swing. It was Kaufman's best blow and it convinced the champion that he had better be careful. In fact, the colored man slowed down perceptibly and did not display the same dash in the concluding round that characterized his early finished work.

All during the fight Johnson exchanged witticisms with the spectators and newspaper men. The contest proved one thing conclusively—that Kaufman has no business in short-round affairs. He appeared to gain strength as the battle progressed, while Johnson, who apparently had trained none too well, began to show signs of weakening.

Time was called at 3:04 p. m. The fight by rounds:

Round One.

Johnson opened the battle with a well placed left hook to the stomach. The men then mixed at close range. Johnson landed right and left short-arm punches to the jaw. Johnson smiled and shot right and left to the face. Kaufman looked a bit worried at this stage and sparred for fully half a minute. Johnson closed in, landing short-arm rights and lefts to the head. There was little sting in them, however. Just before the round ended Kaufman shot a straight left to the jaw, but the champion only smiled. Kaufman seemed very slow in comparison with the fast work of Johnson.

Round Two.

Johnson wrestled Kaufman against the ropes and a moment later drove a straight left to the face. He followed this with a left to the body and then quickly brought the same member to the blacksmith's jaw. They closed in and Johnson rocked Kaufman's head with short-arm swings that carried no steam behind them. Johnson rushed Kaufman into his (Kaufman's) corner but did not damage Johnson had the better of a time round. Johnson smiled and cracked jokes at the spectators.

Round Three.

They rushed in close, Johnson driving a wicked left to the jaw which he followed with a hard clout to the stomach. Johnson then appeared faced with his right to the jaw and mouth and blood spurted from Kaufman's mouth. Johnson planted an awful right wallop on Al's bleeding face and forced the blacksmith to stall. Johnson taunted Kaufman good naturedly and varied this with two fearful jolts to the jaw. The bell rang and Al limped to his corner with blood flowing in a veritable stream from his mouth and nose. It was apparent that Johnson with clearly Kaufman's master and could finish him at such time as he was ready to cut loose.

Round Four.

Kaufman after some sparring drove a hard right to the stomach. This angered the champion and he quickly bent the Californian against the ropes, planting right and left to the jaw. After some clinching Kaufman drove his right to the stomach and Johnson grinned and winked at his seconds. Both men eased up, Kaufman seldom leading. The round ended lamely and it looked as if Johnson deliberately slowed up. Up to this stage Kaufman failed to lead and had landed but two punches, both to the stomach.

Round Five.

"Keep quiet over there," Johnson yelled at one of the newspaper photographers. The men fought to close quarters and Johnson uppercut twice with his right, rocking Kaufman's head a foot. Johnson was quickness and nimbleness personified. The champion drove right and left to the stomach and had Kaufman constantly on the defensive. Kaufman made the most strenuous efforts to land and the fighters battled around the ring without any serious damage being inflicted.

Round Six.

Kaufman was short with a left lead and the men clinched. Johnson suddenly broke loose and sent the Californian almost into the press stand with a left hook to the body and a right cross to the jaw. "Mix it, Al," the crowd yelled and Al did so. But he found Johnson waiting for him and the latter showed that he was master of the situation at any style of fighting that Kaufman could bring to him. The round closed with ineffectual exchanges, Johnson having everything his own way.

Round Seven.

Kaufman tried left for the jaw but it was so easily blocked that the men clinched. Johnson suddenly broke loose and sent the Californian almost into the press stand with a left hook to the body and a right cross to the jaw. "Mix it, Al," the crowd yelled and Al did so. But he found Johnson waiting for him and the latter showed that he was master of the situation at any style of fighting that Kaufman could bring to him. The round closed with ineffectual exchanges, Johnson having everything his own way.

Round Eight.

Johnson opened up with a straight left to the jaw and as the men closed in the black swung right and left with considerable force to the jaw and mouth. Kaufman backed away, seldom if ever leading, despite instructions to do so from his advisers. Johnson again started the blood from Kaufman's mouth, hard right and lefts doing the business. Kaufman closed in and Johnson uppercut twice to the jaw with his left, for which he was rebuked by a hard right hook to the stomach, about the best blow Kaufman landed. Johnson kept up an incessant exchange of badgering with the crowd during the minute's respite.

Round Nine.

Kaufman forced the smile from Johnson's face by clouting him to the stomach with a pie-driving right. For a few fleeting moments the black fought back a bit wildly. He quickly regained his composure, however, and sent right and left with great force to the jaw. With the return of Johnson's smile he drove Kaufman against the ropes, landing twice at long range. The round ended with the crowd jeering Johnson and some of the spectators started to leave the arena.

Round Ten.

After considerable sparring Johnson hooked his right to the jaw. Kaufman came back and landed right and left to the face as they mixed it in the center of the ring. After Johnson, goaded on by these punches had shot a stiff left to the face, Kaufman landed twice on the body with left. A moment later he sent a hard right to the stomach and the men mixed it without damage. The crowd with both men slugging ineffectively jered. The round and fight ended with both men slugging ineffectively at each other.

MUCH DAMAGE.

Mexico City, Mex., Sept. 9.—The destruction wrought by the floods and tornadoes throughout the state of Tamaulipas has been frightful and may even rival that in Monterey, according to the statements given out today from the offices of the federal telegraph and the national meteorological stations. The reports tell of whole towns being swept away by water. Destitution has spread over great areas. Plantation owners have sent messengers into Victoria, telling the authorities of the pitiful condition of the inhabitants.

ATTACKS NATIONAL COMPANY.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 9.—Attorney General Denman today brought quo warranto proceedings against the National Cash Register company of Dayton, Ohio, asking that it be ousted from its charter, that a receiver be appointed and that its assets be distributed among the stockholders. The petition alleges illegal restraint of trade, combinations to prevent competition and misapplication of funds in the carrying out of alleged unlawful business enterprises.

FOUR WESTERNERS TO CONTEST

WALTER TRAVIS GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT AT THE HANDS OF ROBERT GARDNER.

Whiting, Ill., Sept. 9.—Four westerners will contest tomorrow in the semi-finals of the national amateur golf championship as a result of sensational golf today. They are H. Chandler Egan of Exmore and Charles Evans of Edgewater, Mason Phelps of Middlethian and Robert Gardner of Hinsdale.

Walter Travis, three times winner of the championship, went down to defeat before young Gardner despite his splendid golf of the afternoon.

Mason Phelps with an advantage of four holes over Paul Hunter on the morning round had considerable difficulty with his opponent in the afternoon, but won.

The match between Chandler Egan and New Sawyer went 38 holes before Egan won.

The morning round resulted two up in Sawyer's favor, with the score of 75 for Sawyer and 76 for Egan. In the afternoon Sawyer scored 76 and Egan 74.

COOK TO SAIL FOR HOME SOON

berg and Ellesmere islands and then northward over the ice to the pole. Peary probably carried the steamer Roosevelt to a point at or near the north coast of Ellesmere Land. From the ship he probably established provision depots as far north as possible, these would serve as reserves to be drawn upon on the return trip. Dr. Cook asserts he followed a route involving a journey of Ellesmere islands, presumably opposite the point to which Peary carried his ship.

A Whole Year?

Sydney, Cape Breton, Sept. 9.—Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic club, arrived here tonight to meet Commander Peary. He said he thought Peary would not bring Cook's two Eskimauks with him, as they might die. Cook could not get them, either, he said, before next year. Mr. Bridgman said he knew Peary would be satisfied to let the United States coast a geodetic survey arbitrate the controversy as to which explorer reached the pole.

In London's Eyes.

London, Sept. 10.—The immediate effect of the publication of Peary's brief account of his journey here is a change of feeling in favor of Dr. Cook and the adoption of a more impartial attitude. The Daily Telegraph says: "Dr. Cook has decided to face the music, and in so doing has greatly redeemed his position in English eyes, and in a large measure has made comment at the present stage both unfair and unwise." The Morning Post regrets the tone adopted by the extreme partisans and says that even Peary's telegrams savor of the injudicious.

"Both explorers may, for all we know," says that paper, "be mistaken, and until proof is forthcoming, must both be considered to stand on an equality, so far as the race for the pole is concerned."

One of the chief reasons for the revulsion in Dr. Cook's favor is the unexpected swiftness of Peary's sledge journey to and from the pole. This is regarded as having disposed of one of the strongest arguments against the probability of Cook's feat and has placed the possibilities of Arctic travel in an entirely new light.

The Post, in a special article, suggests that, owing to the known difficulty of securing accurate observations for latitude in the farthest north, and considering the rapid rate at which they traveled, both Cook and Peary may have miscalculated the positions.

A Substantiation.

New York, Sept. 9.—Scientists and explorers here today, comparing the latest dispatches regarding Peary's achievements, agreed that his findings seem to confirm Dr. Cook's story in several significant particulars. "Peary's rapid traveling," said Anthony Flah, "is the most important evidence thus far produced in substantiation of Dr. Cook's claims."

COMMITTED TO ASYLUM.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Alice Webb Duke, divorced wife of Brodie L. Duke, the tobacco magnate, was today committed to the asylum for the insane at Kan-kakee, Ill. The once-brilliant and wealthy bride of Mr. Duke appeared a complete mental and physical wreck and but 10 minutes were required to impress the jury with the need of restraint of and treatment for her.

EARTHQUAKE RECORDED.

Washington, Sept. 9.—A well-defined distant earthquake of moderate intensity was recorded by the seismographs of the weather bureau, beginning almost exactly at noon, 75th meridian time, September 8. Total duration of the earthquake was nearly two hours. The origin of the disturbance is placed about 1,000 miles distant. It is believed it was located in the vicinity of the Aleutian islands.

A NEW DEPOT.

Kansas City, Sept. 9.—In a special election today the new Union depot ordinance was accepted, 10 to 2.
