CAUGHT ON THE RUN ABOUT TOWN Despite the inducements which are offered, the effort to increase the membership of the Missoula Gun club is fruitless. OTIS WORDEN and Tom Hickey have canvassed thoroughly every prospective candidate, but they have not landed a victim. On the contrary, there have been several attempts at resignation; these, however, have been successfully resisted, and the club shows no loss of members, though it shows no gain. The solicitors cannot understand why a little matter like a pending damage suit should prevent men from joining the club when the shooting season is on and there is need for concerted action in preventing the devastating work of the game hogs. But there is a deeply-rooted objection to signing the roll, and not even the persuasive eloquence of Otis Worden can overcome it. So general is this feeling that a man looking at the collection of old guns in Gleason's window yesterday declared that the gun club had laid down its arms and surrendered. This, however, is not so.

Martin Quinn of the Paradise hot springs has been spending a day or two in town. Mr. Quinn has been having a good season at the springs and says that the new railway line through the Paradise canyon has brought his place nearer to his customers, and when there are passenger trains running over the cut-off there will be a station at his place which will accommodate all who wish to come. This will bring more people but it will in a measure be a drawback to the old friends of the place who have learned to love it because of its retirement as well as for its beauty and the fine care that is taken of them when they go there. But it is the story of advancing civilization and the extension of railways that the solitude are broken up. Mr. Quinn does not share the belief that it will not be so good at the springs when the varnished cars land there. Easy access will bring many people to us, said he, and we have the water for thousands of them. We cling to the name Paradise because it is the right name for the place. And all who know the springs agree with him.

Work at the site of the new building of the Independent Telephone company is going on at a good rate, preparatory to actual construction work. The contractors have the site cleared and are assembling material. They have erected a temporary office building for themselves, which will be shared by the telephone company as soon as it is ready, which will probably be tonight. "On Monday we shall be at home in the Main street building," said J. C. Ball of the telephone company to a Missoulian man yesterday. "We have a room in the temporary building next to the theater and there we may be found after Monday by all who have business with us. The quarters are rather small but we hope to have the building ready in a short time, and then we will have plenty of room as well as plenty to do. We are getting lined up for construction work here and it will not be long now before the instruments are installed. Our long distance connections will be ready by the time the local exchange is ready."

The large extension of the Higgins block is making good progress; the bricklayers are making a showing on the side walls, and material is being assembled in quantities that indicate that there is to be no delay in getting the structure enclosed. This addition is larger than some of the independent blocks that have been erected this summer and is substantial in its construction. Along with the erection of this building, the improvements are being carried on that will entirely remodel and modernize the quarters in the block that are occupied by the Crescent store. When this work is finished the Crescent will have as fine a home as any mercantile establishment in the city. The front is being entirely changed, the heavy stone pillars have been removed and the windows are to be of the most modern design. It will greatly improve the appearance of the block and will give the store much more room. Inside the store is being enlarged and improved so that it will be entirely new when the work is finished.

CONCRETE BUILDING The work of building the fireproof concrete and steel building of Senator Dixon and Charles L. Cowell on the corner of Higgins avenue and Cedar street is attracting a good deal of attention as it progresses. The erection of the supporting columns and the construction of the concrete floor have furnished instructive entertainment for the inspectors who line the walk. These inspectors are now compelled to divide their time between the Higgins avenue bridge and the six-story building. It keeps them busy making suggestions regarding the two structural enterprises. The Cowell-Dixon building will be, as already stated in The Missoulian, six stories high; it will be fireproof and built according to the latest structural methods. It will be the most modern building in the city, as well as the tallest, and the responsibility of seeing that it is put up as it should be is engaging the attention of the curbstone supervisors to the extent that they will be able to do nothing else until the building is enclosed.

MUSICAL ATTRACTION HAS MERIT "THREE TWINS" DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE AT THE HARNOLD THEATER.

"Cuddle up a little closer, Lovey mine; Cuddle up and be my little Charming vine. Like to see your cheek so rosy, Like to make you comfy, cosy, For I love from head to toesy, Lovey mine" You'll all whistle it, and you might as well know the words. "Cuddle up a little closer, Lovey Mine," and a few other songs, a number of clever principals, a good chorus, plenty of comedy—the whole entitled "Three Twins"—entertained a large audience at the Harnold theater last night. "Entertained" is rather a weak word for what "Three Twins" did for a lot of Missoula folk, and a good many of our neighbors from the Hitter Root, but "delighted" would express the situation to a dot. "Three Twins" is undoubtedly the most complete musical comedy that has visited Missoula this season, and the show is well up to an equality with anything of its kind that the theatergoers of the Garden city have ever been privileged to see. I didn't have my fingers crossed when I said this, and I was thinking of "A Stubborn Cinderella" and "The Alaskan" all the time. Victor Morley, clever comedian, was good in every scene, and other bright spots were Harry Barton, Minnie Allen, Helen Sallinger, Adia Clifford and Bessie Clifford, most especially Bessie Clifford, whose eccentric dance in the "Yama Yama Man" feature was a revelation to most of the audience. The stage settings and mechanical features of "Three Twins" helped to make the production brilliant. THORNTON.

FLYING AUTOMOBILE STRIKES YOUNG LAD It is reported that about 8 o'clock last evening a young son of Mrs. Henry, a widow living on the west side, who was on his way to the city with several companions, was struck and severely injured by an automobile. His injuries were serious enough to call for the services of a doctor. The lad claims that the horn on the car was not blown and he did not see it until he was struck. His companions claim that the people in the car, after striking the boy, returned to the scene, picked up the boy and, after seeing that he was unconscious, went on their way.

EVANGELIST SPEAKS PREGNANT WORDS DR. H. O. BREEDEN DELIVERS INTERESTING ADDRESS IN CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

A few years ago visitors to large eastern cities might have seen on billboards this legend: "What must I do to be saved? Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll will answer this question at the theater tonight." But Colonel Ingersoll did not answer it. No man can. Only God can and does answer this greatest of all questions. It assumes that man is a lost sinner, and that he cannot save himself. He is forced to appeal to a higher power. God sent His Son, Jesus Christ, into the world to answer this question. That men might know that He knew what they must do to be saved, He saved men and women from their sins during His stay on earth. When He left the earth, in order that men might continue to be saved, He left the law of salvation in the hands of chosen and trained disciples. He was the Great Physician who knew the specific of the leprosy of sin. The law of salvation that He left behind Him was and is His prescription for sin. After He had left the earth and gone back to heaven men were saved by this prescription in the hands of His disciples, as was attested by the fact that they received and enjoyed the holy spirit. Christ is the unmistakable assurance of salvation—of healing. The consciousness of the fact that one has kept the letter of the law is not the assurance of salvation. It is a more vital thing. It is the actual possession of the disposition of the Christ, which finds outward expression in His acts. "If any man is in Christ Jesus, he is a new creation." He will exhibit a transformed character and life. "The law of salvation as recorded in the gospels, reduced to its simplest elements, is this: faith, repentance and obedience. Faith, not in institutions, not in symbols, not in forms, but in Christ—personal trust in a living and personal Christ who is life. Salvation is not mechanical, not commercial, but vital. It is being in Christ as the branch is in the vine and the vine in the branch; as the cloud is in the sunshine and the sunshine in the cloud. Repentance is not mere sorrow for sin, but a sincere turning away from it—the actual exclusion of it from the life and heart. Obedience that finds expression in surrender and service. There is just one thing for a man to do to be saved, and that is what Paul told the jailer to do: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." But that faith must be a full and living faith—a faith that is made perfect by repentance and obedience. Repentance is that degree of faith that moves a man to break with sin. Baptism is that degree of faith that moves one to openly and formally align himself on the side of Christ as a disciple. A repentance that is not an expression of faith is of no value. A baptism that is not the manifestation of a personal belief in a personal savior is an empty form. This takes salvation out of the realm of legalism and mechanics and makes it a vital thing. Man is saved from sin by coming into possession of the Christ life. Many people think they are saved because they are in the church, or because they believe in a certain formula of doctrines, or because they have gone through with certain forms. None of these things can save a sinner. "Christ in you, the hope of glory." A piece of wax can be formed into the shape of a grain of corn, but it will not grow. There is no life in it. The saved man is the man who has the life of Christ in him. Though not expressed in His words, these are some of the great ideas that entered into the able sermon preached by Dr. H. O. Breeden in the Christian church last night. At its close a husband and wife came forward to get a renewal of their baptism, and the Master. The solos by H. S. Saxton were particularly beautiful, appropriate and impressive. There will be no service tonight, but there will be three services on Sunday. At 11 a. m. Dr. Breeden will preach at the church on "The Shepherd Psalm," at 3:30 p. m. in the Harnold theater to men only, and again at the theater at 8 p. m. on "The Divinity of Christ."

LOCAL STORE ADOPTS NOVEL SCHEME MOVING IN BIG DEPARTMENT STORE IS BEING DONE AT NIGHT.

Bang! Whiff! Pillows, curtains, bundles of tapestries, everything from Brussels carpets to tablecloths, dropping out of the windows onto the sidewalks. That is the sight which frightened the theater crowds last night, as they passed the Missoula Mercantile company's building, into thoughts of everything from wholesale burglary to a rush to save the goods from a fire. A second glance showed the reason for this unusual performance. A crew of men stood on the sidewalk and gathered up the queer assortment of goods which was falling out of the windows and loaded it onto wagons, which carried it across the street, to where another crew of men carried it into the new Chaney building. These are moving days in the big store and to get changed without disturbing the regular business the moving is being done at night. For a week this has been going on and in another week the furniture and tapestry departments of the Mercantile company's store will have been moved to its new quarters in the recently completed Chaney building. The old building is overworked and in order to give these important departments the room that they need their stocks are being transferred across the street. The whole force in the moving departments is at work every night. Everything unbreakable is carefully wrapped up and thrown out of the window to the sidewalk and from there is quickly moved across the street. Sometimes a man is hit, but a little reviling of the upstairs crew settles things and the work goes on. The new building is an ideal one, too, and when the new store is opened it will be one of the finest of its kind in the state. The work is almost finished now and in a couple of days the stocks will be on display and the unusual moving scene will be a thing of the past.
