CAUGHT ON THE RUN ABOUT TOWN

"How are the chickens?" was the first question that Tylar Thompson asked when he landed yesterday, direct from St. John, N. B. He didn't wait for an answer, but ran to the poultry yard to find out for himself. The high-bred white Leghorns were there in all their glory and they looked so well that Mr. Thompson found time to ask another question. "How are the horses?" said he. And he trotted to the stable to look at the colts. When he had satisfied himself that they were all right he had had a good time. But during the weeks that Mr. Thompson had been absent he had worried about the chickens and the colts so that he had failed to enjoy his vacation. They fall extent. In Minnesota and Wisconsin the whitefish didn't taste just as they should because of the worry. In Boston the mackerel was a little off flavor on account of the worry. In New Brunswick the herring fell short of the anticipated reason of the worry. In New York the lobster is a Newberg was flavored with the same worry; there was a tinge of it in the clam chowder and the oysters reeked with it. But yesterday when the cause of the worry was all removed and he was satisfied that everything was all right there broke over his face a scrappy smile and in that moment he went into the very limit, in memory, the entire journey; into that minute was crowded in celestial blend the flavor of the whitefish, the mackerel, the herring, the lobster, the clam and the oyster—all that was best of each. It was worth while. For a little Tylar mused and let the heavenly flavor of the whole gamut of fish tickle his palate. Then he came back to earth and talked rationally. Gradually during the day his friends learned that he had had a good time and that he was glad to get back home and find things in such good condition. When he was able to understand them his friends gave him assurance that they were glad to see him back. Then he went to the store and took up the routine work as if he had been gone only over night. But the store looked natural with him about.

ED BURRILL REFUSES RECORD OF TRIP

MAN WHO WAS WITH DR. COOK IN ALASKA KILL NOT TALK BEFORE MONEY IS PAID.

(By F. L. Bagby.)
Hamilton, Sept. 25.—Whether Ed Burrill, the guide who was with Dr. Frederick A. Cook on his Mt. McKinley trip, will or will not substantiate the claim of the explorer that he ascended the Alaskan peak rests with Dr. Cook. If the doctor will pay Burrill, Prutz and the other members of the Mt. McKinley party what he promised them, and they claim he has not paid, Burrill is in a position to substantiate the explorer's claims regarding the scaling of the mountain. But if this settlement is not forthcoming, the records which Burrill possesses are his alone and the doctor must fight out his controversy with Commander Peary as best he can.

"This affair looks like a 'big mit' proposition to me and I am going to get what is coming to me—and I am going to see that the other boys get what is due them," is the assertion of Burrill. He claims that the doctor owes him a small amount of money for his work on the Alaskan trip and is indebted to a greater extent to the other members of the party. Promises of this remuneration were made by the explorer in his eagerness to reach the summit of the mountain, he says, and after the trip had ended he found himself unable to keep his lavish promises. Now Burrill wants his money and to see that the other boys secure theirs.

"The matter has reached such a stage that I feel that it is my duty to the public to give the facts in the case regarding the climbing of Mt. McKinley," said Burrill, "but I also feel that it is no more than right and just that I should look after the interests of myself and the other members of the party. It is unfortunate that such a controversy has arisen but it has and it must be settled—and it will be very soon."

Burrill announces that he will leave Hamilton next Wednesday or as soon thereafter as possible, for New York where he will meet Dr. Cook. After reaching the east, he says, he will, if he sees fit, submit the records he possesses to accredited authorities and leave them to decide as to their correctness.

That Burrill is in a position to settle the controversy as to whether Dr. Cook scaled Mt. McKinley or not there is no question. He has records of the trip from the time the ascent of the mountain was commenced until he and the doctor returned, in black and white. They are in the form of a diary written in indelible pencil in a small leather-covered book and the record of each day's accomplishments are entered in Burrill's handwriting. In addition to these notes there are drawings of Mt. McKinley, the glacier over which the explorer and his guide traveled, a perspective view of the Eight Peaks of Glacier Point where their camp was established and of the route traversed by them. While Burrill would not permit the representative of The Daily Missoulian and the Associated Press to read all of his diary he was shown sufficient to convince him beyond a doubt that he has the bonifide records and is in a position to substantiate Dr. Cook's claims if he sees fit to present the records to those competent to pass upon such matters.

"You may say that Mt. McKinley can be climbed; I know it." With this unqualified statement Burrill refused to say more at this time, in regard to the actual climbing of the peak.

Although Burrill has received letters and telegrams in large numbers from newspapers, magazines and others interested in the polar controversy, offering him all sorts of inducements to give his story regarding the Mt. McKinley incident, he has consistently refused to accept any of them, declaring that he simply wanted to protect the interests of himself and his companions and at the same time see that justice was done to those deserving it.

He has in his possession a letter from Dr. Cook written from Labrador in which the explorer informs him of his intention to make a dash for the pole and makes the remark, "I am going to bring you a chunk of the pole." Burrill declares that Dr. Cook was planning and figuring upon his polar dash at the time he was on the Mt. McKinley trip and tried to induce him to become a member of the party.

In regard to whether or not he believes Dr. Cook reached the north pole, Burrill is evasive in his answers, refusing to make any positive statement either one way or the other. But in regard to the attitude Commander Peary has assumed towards Dr. Cook and the attacks the naval officer has made upon him he made this significant remark, "Peary has got Cook right." Burrill expresses disappointment and even disgust that Cook came back from the north under a Danish flag and landed in Denmark instead of heading directly for his own country as Commander Peary's did.

Dr. Cook's telegram to Burrill asked the latter if he could come to New York and would come at his expense: Burrill declares that he will not accept the offer of Dr. Cook to pay his expenses because of the fact that if he did it would be an easy thing for the public to say should his statement be favorable to Cook, that he was under obligation to the explorer. He declares that he will pay his own expenses and be absolutely independent, so that there can be no cause for suspicion regarding his statement.

FOUR SHOPLIFTERS ARE ARRESTED

QUARTET OF THIEVES NABBED AT HUSON BY FRED MILLER AND ED LARSON.

Under Sheriff Fred Miller and Deputy Sheriff Ed Larson returned to the city about 4 o'clock yesterday, bringing with them four men who are accused of having done a little job of shoplifting in the general store of Marion Bros. in Frenchtown. The officers were notified Friday evening that four men, who had been peddling jewelry and other small articles at Frenchtown, had entered the Marion Bros. store and, while one or two engaged the attention of the clerk, the rest helped themselves to about all there was in sight. Soon after their disappearance the articles were missed and search was instituted for the thieves. They were found to have gone toward Huson and the sheriff's officers in this city were called.

Miller and Larson left that evening in an automobile and rushed to Huson. They found that a freight train on the Puget Sound was due in a short time and secured the services of H. C. Brown, the agent and first-trick operator, and Alex Ross, second-trick operator, who flagged the train. The officers went through the cars and found their men. They were then brought to Missoula. The officers are appreciative of the assistance rendered them by Messrs. Brown and Ross.

At the county jail the men gave their names as George Bald, B. R. Vickers, James Harvey and Robert Morrison.

GOES TO ASYLUM.

Sheriff Davis Graham left last evening on No. 16 for Warm Springs, taking with him W. C. Proctor, recently committed to the state insane asylum at that place.

MISS SNYDER ARRIVES.

A GOOD DISPLAY
Charles F. Dallman and Charles Dinmore went to Helena last night with a carload of fruit and vegetables for the state fair, the same being the Missoula county exhibit. Mr. Dallman has been for several days gathering the collection, and when he had it all in the car and started for Helena he said he was satisfied that he had rounded up the best show that Missoula had ever sent to the state fair. There have been larger crops than that of this year, but its quality is excellent and there can be no fault found with the material which Mr. Dallman took with him. He will go to the fair grounds early this morning and will at once begin the decoration of the Missoula county booth and the arrangement of the display. There will not be a blank when Missoula's name is called and the people from this part of the country will have no cause to be ashamed of themselves. Mr. Dallman was prepared to do a lot of boasting for the Western Montana Apple show and carried a lot of ammunition. He will seek to interest other counties in the Missoula show, and he hopes to succeed. If he cannot, nobody can.

THE VERY FIRST ONE
In the Penwell block at the south end of the big bridge there will open tomorrow morning the first of the stores that are to occupy the building and the first hardware store to locate on the south side of the river. It is the establishment of the McGuffey Hardware company, and it makes it bow to the south side public with the expectation of meriting the share of the business over there that comes to it. The proprietor of the new store is a progressive, energetic young man, and is welcomed to the business circle of Missoula by those who have met him.

The store will have the advantage of a good location and the proprietor is warranted in the belief that his store will be a busy place. Other stores in the same building will be opened soon, but Mr. McGuffey is the first one, and as a pioneer deserves the respect of the people who are his neighbors.

Tom Pendergrass has been up from Plains for a few days, getting acquainted with the greater Missoula which he finds here. He has been able to find his way around town pretty well, though he was bewildered by the new buildings for a time. Since he got his bearings he has strolled about and has met a lot of his old friends, to whom he has told the story of the good times that are the order of the day in the beautiful valley which is now his home, and where he has lived long enough to become so thoroughly acclimated that he is convinced that Plains is the best place on earth. "We have had a great year in Plains," said he last night. "The crops are good and there has been a lot of building in the town this summer. We have the best valley in the world and the town is getting shaped up to make one of the best places anywhere."
