THE PULL-TOGETHER.

The man who stands on the corner and inveighs against his neighbor or his competitor, makes a mistake. If he has a just cause for complaint, the street corner is not the place to discuss it.

THE FIRST GEORGE.

Since the accession of George V to the English throne, there has been a considerable amount of newspaper comment upon the four Georges who have preceded him.

THE FISHERIES DISPUTE.

Assembling in The Hague are the judges and the counsel who will figure in next week's hearing of the arguments in the Newfoundland fisheries case, in which the disputants are Great Britain and the United States.

American authority on international law. The other members of the court will be Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice of the supreme court of Canada; Judge George Gray, of the United States circuit court; Jonkheer A. F. De Savornin Lohmano, of the Netherlands, and Luis M. Drago, of the Argentine Republic.

The legal representatives of Great Britain, including Canada and Newfoundland, will include the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, minister of justice of Canada; the Hon. Sir Edward Morris, K. C., premier of Newfoundland; the Right Hon. Sir William Robinson, K. C., attorney general of England; D. Morrison, K. C., attorney general of Newfoundland; the Hon. Sir James Winter, K. C., former attorney general of Newfoundland; the Right Hon. Sir Robert Finlay, former attorney general of England; Sir H. Erle Richards, K. C., who was counsel for Great Britain in the Samoa and Venezuela arbitrations; John S. Ewart, K. C., and George Shepley, K. C., distinguished Canadian lawyers. Messrs Blake and Redden are the British solicitors.

Equally distinguished, though not quite so numerous, will be the representatives of the United States. Senator Elihu Root of New York heads the list of counsel, the other members including Charles P. Anderson, who acts as agent; former Senator George Turner of Washington, who represented the United States on the Alaska boundary tribunal; Samuel J. Elder, a distinguished lawyer of Boston, and James Brown Scott, solicitor for the department of state.

The Newfoundland fisheries case is regarded as one of the most important disputes that has arisen between Great Britain and the United States in the last century and is the first case to come before the international arbitration court under the agreement of the powers as signed by the peace convention held at The Hague in 1897.

The controversy had its origin in the treaty signed by the United States and Great Britain in 1818, by which certain rights of fishery in common with British fishermen, which had been claimed by the United States for its people under the treaty of peace of 1783, were recognized by Great Britain, while others were renounced by the United States.

The United States denied this interpretation of the treaty provisions, asserting that only inlets of the sea, not over six miles wide, were intended. From that time forward the interpretation has been in dispute. At a much later period the Newfoundland government adopted regulations as to the coast fisheries of that island, which the American fishermen have the right at certain places to participate in "in common" with British fishermen.

The electric railway will reach out to Fort Missoula next week; the city water mains are already extending in that direction. It will be but a short time before the fort is in town.

We see no occasion for making a fuss because Mr. Taft will not meet Mr. Roosevelt in New York. We know of no reason why he should.

Moreover, it has been demonstrated that a trolley ride is a great appetizer. A course of these rides will cure the most confirmed invalid.

Expert testimony is to the effect that yesterday's rain was worth considerably more than a million dollars to western Montana.

We have a good electric road and are going to have more of it; let us get good county roads and then get more of them.

The high school's successful commencement week sets a pace for the events which are to follow in other institutions.

The heathen Chinese upon his native health is making more trouble than his representatives upon our Pacific coast.

The money spent for sewers is the best investment that Missoula can make; it is a guard against epidemic disease.

Mr. Bartlett of Georgia is among those who like to dance, but who object to paying the fiddler.

Slowly but surely the balance of power in this nation is slipping away from the Atlantic coast.

The week brought many kindly messages, some verbal, some telegraphed, all appreciated.

The eastern coast does a lot of business but most of it comes from the west.

The route of the Blackfoot railway is one more road to prosperity.

The switches seem to be spoked for the fast run of the railway bill.

The deeper we get into the sugar mess, the stickier it becomes.

The most powerful force in the world is the pull-together.

The street cars ran more smoothly than ever yesterday.

There is no lubricant so effective as good fellowship.

A conference is better than a contest, anytime.

This has been another red-letter week.

STILL MORE BOUQUETS FOR SENATOR DIXON

The Bridger Times joins the chorus of praise and appreciation for Senator Dixon's work on the railroad rate bill, in these words:

The long and short of it is the people of Montana are grateful to Senator Dixon for the hard work he has done to get his railroad amendment in the big administration bill.

MRS. DOXEY APPEARS TO ENJOY PROCEEDINGS IN TRIAL FOR MURDER.

St. Louis, May 27.—Mrs. Dora A. Doxey, accused of the murder of her husband, William J. Erder, showed no concern during the trial today. Apparently she enjoyed the court procedure, which is to determine her fate. Only once did the woman seem interested. That was when Dr. William D. Wrenn, the state's expert, demonstrated before the jury how he had obtained arsenic from the body of her dead husband. He said there was arsenic in every organ.

Dr. H. H. Fuhrman, who attended Mrs. Doxey while she was living as Erder's wife, testified Mrs. Doxey told him her husband was a physician at Columbus, Neb. She told him her home was in Burlington, Iowa. Charles E. Merriam testified he went to the widow to express his condolence and offered to notify her relatives. She told him she was an orphan.

Jacob H. Schaefer, marriage license clerk at Clayton, Mo., told of issuing a license to Erder and Mrs. Doxey who gave the name of Dora E. Dodge. The certificate was introduced in evidence. Schaefer could not identify Mrs. Doxey as the woman who signed it. The Rev. Karl Pfeiffer of Clayton, who married Erder, identified the certificate, but could not be sure Mrs. Doxey was the woman.

Summer Girls May Wear Peek-a-Boo Waists and Society Women Decollete Gowns.

Catholic women who wish to wear open work "peek-a-boo" shirtwaists, gauze yokes or decollete corsages may lay aside their scarifiers or carry them in their pockets, according to an exchange. Pope Pius has said so in a special letter which will be read to the Catholic women by the priests in the different churches as soon as they receive the edict from the archbishop.

The scapular consists of two small squares of dark brown cloth, upon which are stitched smaller squares of white cloth bearing a portrait of the virgin; these small squares are connected by a long cord of brown braid worn around the neck, one square resting on the breast and one on the back. These scapulars are an emblem of devotion to the Mother Mary.

Catholic women have for many years found the coarse brown cord around their necks both uncomfortable, annoying and disfiguring when worn with a thin or low-neck gown. The matter has been a real trial to good Catholic women, who are quite as fond of smart dressing as their sisters who are not bound to the same creed; to wear the brown cord with a low corsage was simply impossible, a thin yoke with the cord showing through its meshes was not to be considered, and white shoulders were not improved by the dark line across them.

The letter from the pope, which is in Latin, translated freely, reads as follows:

"The holy father, always interested in the affairs of his children, is desirous that Catholic women, who take an active part in social affairs, be not restricted in the dress proper for social requirements by any open insignia of their faith, and therefore dispenses them from wearing their scapulars where they will be conspicuous, or doing away with them altogether, if they so desire. This edict, however, does not mean that they need not be enrolled in the order, for that obligation still holds, but after they are once enrolled they may put aside the scapular and in its place carry a small medal of the Blessed Virgin in their pockets or wherever they please."

TO WELCOME TEDDY.
