BRENNAN RETURNS FROM SEARCH

LOCAL PARTY IS UNABLE TO FIND ANY TRACE OF YOUNG WALTER BEIHL.

J. P. Brennan, who accompanied Al Biehl of this city on his search for his son, returned to this city last evening. Brennan and Biehl left Tuesday for Avery to commence the search. They were accompanied by Rangers Kottley and Carter. Kottley left them four and one half miles west of the St. Paul pass tunnel. Carter accompanied them to Avery. At Avery a thorough search was made for the boy, but no trace of him could be found.

James L. Tiddy of this city is somewhat of a hero as he led 50 men who were under the orders of Ranger Rock to a place of safety and finally brought them in to Avery. Oscar Weigert was the only man in this crew to lose his life. Brennan identified Weigert's body and had it taken to Avery and packed in ice. Weigert was not badly burned and the only marks on his body are slight burns on the ankle and hand. He evidently had died of suffocation. His body will probably arrive in the city today.

Brennan reports that he and Biehl found an Italian in the east end of the St. Paul tunnel, who had been run over by a train and cut in two pieces.

Edward Bennett, the Ovando hunter and guide, is safe at Avery. He arrived at that place while Brennan was still there and his pack train was intact. Bennett was coming down the trail through fire with eight horses in front of him and nine behind him. When they got through the fire he looked around and saw eight of his horses had been lost. Tying up his horses Bennett made a dash back through the flames and secured the lost animals, getting through with them in safety.

Ranger Kottley lost his ranger's station and all his stock with the exception of one horse and his chickens. The chickens were out at the time the fire passed over the place and were saved. His station is located four and a half miles west of Taft. All the small camps along both the Milwaukee and Northern Pacific are burned, according to Brennan's report.

At Grand Forks two fellows rolled a couple of barrels of whisky into the creek and then started out to make the St. Paul tunnel. They were cut off from a place of shelter on every side and were forced to lie in the creek. The water in the creek was just the right depth to permit their noses and foreheads to protrude and the fire came so close that it burned a ring around their faces from under their nose to over the eyes. With this exception they escaped unscathed.

Brennan attributes the intense heat of the terrific wind that tore down the trees before the fire ever hit them to the fact that the intense heat of the rabbits and birds were lying all along the trail and were burned so badly that they fell to pieces when touched.

TO READJUST DIVISION.

Walter M. Bickford filed a complaint in the office of the clerk of the court yesterday against W. J. Stephens, asking for a readjustment of an agreement between them regarding the division of a piece of property formerly held jointly between them. It seems that when the agreement regarding the division was drawn up there was a misunderstanding as to the number of the lots, Mr. Bickford getting himself more than half. He offers to restore to Stephens the balance, providing that the latter pay the back taxes.

320-Acre

RELINQUISHMENT For Sale or Trade

We have the relinquishment of 320 acres of fine land 2 1/2 miles southeast of Fort Benton. The entire tract is a rich and productive soil. A fine lake of 5 acres on the land. Timber 5 miles distant and a coal mine 4 miles. The survey for the Milwaukee railroad from Lewistown to Great Falls runs through the land.

This relinquishment must be sold at once, and for a few days will accept $200 cash or will trade for town lots or livestock.

QUARTZ SITUATION DOUBTFUL

FRANK D. BROWN WRITES ABOUT FIRE PROSPECTS IN THE WINDFALL DISTRICT.

Frank D. Brown, who was forced out of the Windfall section by the forest fire, has returned to his work. In a letter to The Missoulian he says: "I arrived at Quartz at 3:30 o'clock this Wednesday afternoon, and found considerable loss in the few people who remained there. A full of smoke still hung over the community. There was, however, a total absence of wind and embers. While fire conditions were not alarming, owing to the lack of wind, still there was danger to all the gulches east of Cedar creek, heading in the main range, and covering the section between Fish and Trout creeks. This includes Quartz, Ohio, Windfall and Trout. The fire is over the ridge at every point and proceeding slowly down the entire watershed to the river. The snow fall of last night arrested the onward northern progress to some extent but the smoldering fires will reign fiercely again should the wind rise.

The Fires.

"In the vicinity of Windfall the fire is creeping over the head of Forty-six mile and is about one-third of a mile east of Thiel's cabin. Where Windfall enters Trout the fire from Oregon gulch has passed over the range and is now within a few hundred feet of Trout. During the heavy wind the night of the 21st this fire passed above the mouth of Windfall and swept with the speed of an express train up Cement gulch to the Forty-six mile divide, starting the fire now burning down that tributary of Quartz.

"I can see no immediate danger to the gulches named, unless a northerly wind arises, and should this come, the Meadow creek trail alone remains over which one could escape.

"The air is decidedly cool, and the general atmospheric conditions favorable for rain. Should there be any fall of consequence the fires in this district will be under control.

"As it is a vast area of valuable country can be saved if immediate action is taken to destroy the small fires resulting from the hurricane blaze of last Sunday.

"Upon our arrival at Windfall we found A. M. Stevens and two men at the camp. The former had just returned from a 15-mile tramp along the ridges and crest of the range between Windfall and the North fork of the Clearwater. From a high elevation, with his field glasses, he saw a scene of destruction and desolation which, he declared, appalled him. As far as his vision extended on the southern horizon his eyes fell upon a black and charred waste. For miles not a tinge of green could be seen. The country looked as if it had been subjected to a terrific volcanic eruption. He could see columns of smoke, here and there, about the burned area, which indicated the destruction of large masses of saw timber. It is his opinion that the intense heat of the flames would have destroyed life at a distance of a mile from the fire line. Tomorrow he will take the few men here to the top of the divide between Windfall and Cement to stamp out small detached fires. This would avert an imminent danger from that direction.

Complaint.

"Much complaint is being made in this district over the inactivity of the forestry service in taking its men from the fire line at the head of Quartz, as this particular locality is the initial point of the greatest danger to the entire territory yet unswamp by flames. A few men now, while the wind is down, could accomplish more than 5000 with it in a gale.

"At least 50 men should be sent at once to the head of Quartz and Forty-six mile if the Windfall section is to be saved. While dissatisfaction is universally expressed here at the apparent negligence of the local forestry officers in not trying to arrest the progress of the fire in the localities mentioned, it is but fair to state that I believe these men are doing and have done everything possible to ward off damage from this district. They are concentrating their forces on the Fish creek fire—the most dangerous foe—and have it, as I have, almost under control. One must be here to realize the great mental strain the people are under. A half a hundred fighters would save the district and I make an appeal for the residents here for aid.

"If the wind does not rise I will remain here, but if it should begin to lift I will beat this letter to Quartz station, as this smoky inferno impresses me more nearly with the terrors of hell than all of the religious exhortations that ever fell upon my ears during 50 years of unwavering loyalty to the Baptist church from the expounders of that faith.

"Stevens is here, absolutely contented now that he has cached his saw mill and buried under three feet of dirt his camp and garrison equipment. The six men with him sleep with their boots on and await with solemnity the command of their valiant leader to leave—this will never come until the fire fiend is destroying the tent over his head."

LAWYERS TO DRAFT SET OF RESOLUTIONS

WALLACE NOT SAFE SAYS RANGER

FORESTRY MAN DECLARES FIRE COULD EASILY SWEEP THROUGH TOWN AGAIN.

Ranger Fisher of Wallace came in yesterday and made his report to District Forester Greeley. According to his story the situation in the vicinity of the stricken mining camp is still rather serious. "A stiff wind," he said, "would sweep that fire down the hill and into Wallace again like a flash. I do not believe that Wallace's danger period is past by any means. Along the hills south of town, where a back fire was started, the trees were just killed and left standing. When I left the foliage was already beginning to dry up and a fire through there would burn as though the trees were of iron."

Mr. Fisher told of finding the bodies of a homesteader and 10 fire fighters on Big creek. Beauchamps was the name of the rancher. He had dug a little tunnel back of his home into the hill, where he kept his provisions. According to the stories of survivors, when Beauchamps and the fire fighters saw the big blaze coming they all ran and crawled into the tunnel. When their bodies were found they were piled into one end of the little tunnel, fearfully burned and dismembered. The men had pulled each other's hair out and had gouged and scratched each other's faces in their efforts to get back out of the reach of the roaring flames which had killed them. "It was the most terrible sight I ever saw," Fisher said.

"You may think that the reports regarding the noise made by those flames were incorrect, but I tell you that when that fire came down Independence creek where I was working I could have imagined that there were thousands of freight trains there crossing an iron bridge. The wind was so strong that it mowed down the trees before the flames and left only the stumps standing."

CAPITAL STOCK INCREASED.

The Orchard Homes Lumber company yesterday filed notice in the office of the county clerk of the fact that it had increased its capital stock from 600 shares at $25 to 1,001 shares at $25.

VINE STREET BRIDGE WILL BE BUILT

BIDS ARE ADVERTISED FOR STRUCTURE ACCORDING TO SPECIFICATIONS.

A special meeting of the city council was held last evening for the purpose of getting some of the more important items off the docket.

The bridge across the Rattlesnake at Vine street begins to look like something more than a myth, as the city was instructed to advertise for bids according to the accepted plans and specifications.

The new health ordinances are being brought to get in their good work and bids for city scavenger contract will be advertised for.

It was decided to close South Second street, and a date was set for hearing objections to this action, after the proposed action had been advertised.
