DUNCAN IS ELATED BY SUCCESS BALLINGER GREETED BY FRIENDS

MR. McDONALD HIGHLY PLEASED BY THE VERIFICATION OF HIS WEATHER FORECAST.

Ravalli, March 25.—(Special).—A Missoula man visiting the home of Duncan McDonald today found the veteran seated in his big armchair before his fireplace. He had his medicine bag out and was working overtime. It was all because of the storm he stirred up in Missoula the other day and now he is trying to make new medicine that will bring bright weather for western Montana before Roosevelt day. Duncan found great satisfaction, however, in the sight of the big snowflakes that were falling outside. He didn't say "I told you so," but he looked it.

Duncan presided this afternoon over a meeting of the Flathead reservation business committee and at intervals, as he wielded the gavel, he turned to Alex Matt and, pointing to the snowflakes, said: "See them fall." At the close of the session, Mr. McDonald confided to Alex the fact that he has been forecasting the weather for more than 52 years and his medicine never failed.

Afterward Alex got confidential and said he had known Duncan for more years than that and this is the first time he ever knew one of his prophecies to come true as far as the weather is concerned.

GREAT CROWD OF SEATTLE PEOPLE SHAKES HANDS WITH FORMER SECRETARY.

Seattle, March 25.—Citizens of Seattle tonight paid their tribute of respect and sympathy to Richard A. Ballinger, for two years secretary of the interior, and during most of that time involved in a bitter controversy over the policy of reservation. The great dining room of the Hotel Washington was thrown open to the public and there, attended by Mayor G. W. Dillingham and presidents of 19 commercial and social organizations, Mr. Ballinger received the greetings of friends.

The chairman of the reception committee extended Seattle's welcome in a few words and Mr. Ballinger, in returning thanks, referred to his trials, enlarged President Taft and discussed public questions. The handshaking then began and a procession of people numbering several thousand passed along the receiving line.

Mr. Ballinger, in his address, said: "You cannot know the extent of suffering which I have silently borne at the hands of a political conspiracy and a muck-raking press; nevertheless, your unflinching confidence in me and your loyalty and support have always been a sustaining force. The greatest faculty is that of casting aside and forgetting the uncomfortable incidents of life. You cannot stoop to curse every cur that barks at your heels. In view of my appearance in public office at Washington, I have wondered how it was possible to call good men from their prosperous, happy lives into the dangers of public service and give them just and secure protection against the scandal mongers and political intriguers. The only way, it seems to me, to protect an honest and trustworthy public official against such assassins of character is to make it the duty of the attorney general to prosecute at public expense the wicked defamer of his official acts."

CONDEMNED MEN PLAYED TO SEE WHO SHOULD HANG AND WHO SHOULD SERVE FOR LIFE.

Denver, March 25.—A game of seven-up with the stake a hangman's noose, was played by two condemned murderers in their cell at the county jail today. The players were Michael H. Murphy, whose sentence had been fixed at life imprisonment by the jury that found him guilty of the murder of his former sweetheart, Anatolia Wunderle; the other Lewis Wechter, adjudged guilty of murdering W. Clifford Burrows. In his case the jury had fixed hanging as the punishment. But the game was not finished, for Murphy was taken into court, there to be sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Bliss. "You need not look to the court for any mitigation of your sentence," said Judge Bliss.

Wechter was dealing in the game. "Let's play for sentences," said he to Murphy. "This cellmate, 'til I win I'll take you place. If I lose I'll take my own medicine. It's my life against your's."

"Done," said Murphy, and the game started, never to be finished.
