

STOCKS AND BONDS MORE ACTIVE

WALL STREET MARKET MOVEMENT SHOWS MUCH GREATER ACTIVITY THAN ON FRIDAY.

New York, April 22.—From the outset stocks were sold actively, the number of shares traded in during the two hours of today's session exceeding the total number of yesterday's full day.

The movement was directed against the market leaders, especially United States Steel, which in the early trading fell to 73 1/4, the lowest point for that stock since the early part of the year.

Unfavorable reports of the conditions of the trade continued to exercise a depressing effect. St. Paul & Northern Pacific lost 2 points. Other stocks fell off in sympathy, the weakness finally extending to virtually the whole list.

Towards the close there was a partial recovery, due, apparently, to short covering.

One of the exceptions to the general heaviness was International Harvester, which gained 2 points. The annual report of this company is to show large earnings applicable to the common shares.

Money continued to pile up at this center, as was shown by to-day's bank statement. The banks gained nearly $5,500,000 during the week.

Bonds easier. Total sales, $1,465,000. U. S. bonds were unchanged on call for the week.

CIGARETTE AND VANITY PURSE.

No man would dream of carrying his cigarettes and money in the same pocket; therefore, a dainty affair displayed in a Fifth Avenue shop window reveals itself as intended for the fairer sex, even though it is unmistakably intended for cigarettes. Even if one were misled by the cigarettes into thinking the contraption intended for masculine use, a small mirror which lifts up to reveal a powder puff, would deceive him.

St. Paul, April 22.—Governor Eberhart today signed the Keefe bill providing for the nomination of United States senators by direct vote of the people. LOS ANGELES AFFAIR IS BROUGHT TO MIND

The men resisted attempts to force a confession from them.

Raymond Burns, son of William J. Burns, said McNamara had offered him $50,000 and later $20,000 for the liberation of himself and McManigal.

The story of the offered bribe was said to have been heard by the Chicago officers and verified by them.

Mrs. McManigal tonight declared her belief in her husband's innocence. With her two children, a girl of seven and a boy of five years, she was found here at the home of a friend.

"Orlie is not the man they picture him," she said. "And I don't believe it. He has had a hard life, but I don't believe he would commit such crimes."

She had left her own flat at 414 South Sangamon street because she had been aware that it was constantly watched by detectives.

"Orlie was out of the city a great part of the time during the last two years," she added, "but it was because he was sent out by his employers."

While she was refusing to tell whether or not McManigal was in Los Angeles when the explosion took place, Walter, the five-year-old son, cried: "Papa was out of town because he could make more money."

The mother alienated the boy and ordered both children from the room. Neighbors of the McManigals say the head of the family has been at home but infrequently in the last two years, although Mrs. McManigal was said always to have been well supplied with money.

Watching McManigal. The detective already had suspicions that the Peoria work had been done by Orlie E. McManigal of Chicago and when he returned to Peoria he surrounded McManigal's home here with watchers.

McManigal, in the meantime, not knowing he was being watched, returned to Los Angeles with a plan, the detective claims, of destroying the auxiliary plant in which the "times" was being issued. It is said he made several inspections of the plant, but, apparently, changed his plans.

Just to show his good faith, Burns declares, McManigal placed an infernal machine under the plant of the Llewellyn iron works in Los Angeles. Detectives watching this were unable to make use of their knowledge to prevent an explosion, being fearful of warning the dynamiters of their presence and by putting them on their guard prevent an arrest.

Detectives, closing in on the Chicago man, followed him to his first meeting with James McNamara, whom at that time they knew only as J. B. Bryce or Bryson, under which name the explosive said to have been used in blowing up the Times plant was purchased.

McManigal and McNamara then came east, the same train bearing the watchers. The pair went to Kansas City, to Peoria, to South Chicago, to Milwaukee and a dozen other points, always carrying a mysterious suitcase, which, it was later learned, contained the clockwork basis from which the infernal machines were formed. Finally the pair went to Indianapolis, where interviews were held with Secretary John McNamara, the first time he had appeared in any connection with the dynamiting.

After the arrest of McNamara, Burns and other detectives searched the offices of the association of bridge and structural iron workers and detained there other officials during an examination of papers and records. When the detectives entered the office a meeting of the executive board was in progress. Attending it were F. M. Ryan of Chicago, president; H. W. Legler, Pittsburg; P. A. Cooley, New Orleans; E. A. Clancy, San Francisco; M. J. Young, Boston, and J. L. Butler, Buffalo. These men were permitted to leave the offices afterward. The detectives declined to say whether they had found any evidence against McNamara.

Charged With Murder. The warrant against McNamara charges him specifically with murder, in complicity in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building, and also alleges he was implicated in an explosion at the Llewellyn iron works, Los Angeles, December 24, 1909. Detective Burns said further developments were expected to disclose the perpetrator of explosions directed against employers here, at Omaha, Neb., and Columbus, Ind., and other places.

At midnight on March 23 last, explosions occurred in the courthouse at Omaha, under construction, and at the

The president will be a dinner guest at the home of Miss Winifred Holt, secretary of the association of the blind, and later will open the industrial exposition of the blind at the Metropolitan opera house and deliver his first formal address. From there the president will be taken to the armory of the Seventy-first regiment, New York national guard, to review that organization.

Afterward he will "look in" at the semi-centennial banquet of the Sixty-ninth regiment, N. Y. N. G. The last engagement of the night comes when the president becomes the guest of the Hungarian Republican club.

First on the set program for Thursday is luncheon at the home of Henry Clews. In the evening the president becomes the guest of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' association at a banquet where he will make the principal speech of his visit.

After that he will spend a few minutes at the banquet of the Methodist Social union and then "look in" at the banquet of the Acronautical society, later visiting a dinner given by the business men of his district to former Representative Oost. He leaves New York shortly after midnight for Washington.
