CAUGHT ON THE RUN ABOUT TOWN

"Well," said the Contest Man to the Man About Town last night, "I have had a map this afternoon and I'm going to bed early tonight. Tomorrow will be a warm day in this office and I'm going to be ready for the rush. The votes in the bungalow race have been coming in fast for thirty-six hours; I never saw anything like it. Of course, they go into the big ballot box and I haven't an idea for whom they are being cast, except those which come in by mail with the request that we return the receipt and vote the coupon as directed. There has been considerable of this business but it has been very evenly distributed. But the big box is filling up; there are votes going in for somebody and there will be a lot more to go in tomorrow. The last votes to be accepted will be at 9:30 sharp. How many will there be? Well, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll just make a blind pool with you on the grand total." The offer was accepted and there are two guesses sealed in an envelope in the Missoulian safe. One of them will win the man who wrote it an ice-cream soda. But today will be so busy that the soda will taste good, whoever buys it.

"There are a good many people who do not realize how near we are to the day of election which will decide the adoption of the commission government for Missoula," said a member of the Neighborhood club last night to the Man About Town. "The election will be held Tuesday. There are but two days left in which to reach the decision. We should be thinking it over carefully. I was interested today in reading the account of the Woodrow Wilson address in Los Angeles, where the New Jersey governor gave warm indorsement to the plan of commission government. It seems to me that the Missoulian has made the right suggestion to those who are considering this matter—that they think of the men who have indorsed the plan and then think of the men who have been opposing it. We have not heard a word in opposition from a man who has had personal experience with the commission plan. The opponents have based their arguments upon hearsay comment; their opinions are all second-hand. The opinion of men who know should be worth more than the views of men who guess. But I hope every man in town will vote Tuesday."

Charles E. Miller of Wisdom, a member of the Big Hole Commercial company, was one of the visitors in town yesterday who came here to attend the Armstrong funeral. Mr. Miller had made one previous visit to Missoula, having brought over a bunch of horses four years ago. "The city has improved much since I was here before," said Mr. Miller to the Man About Town yesterday. "Coming here at this season of the year, the city looks delightfully attractive to me. We have so few trees in the basin that your pleasant shade is fine. Your season is ahead of ours, of course, and the difference is all the more pronounced by the reason of your trees and flowers. But we are very busy in the Big Hole country. The beef shipments have just been concluded for the season; we had more than usual this spring and the feeding season was the longest I have ever known in the fourteen years that I have been in the basin. The snow came early and it stayed late. Grass never looked so good to me as it did this spring, when we were able to turn out the cattle. The basin is settling up fast. There are fences and ditches everywhere and it is not much like the place it was when I first saw it. We are freighting regularly over the fifty-six miles between Wisdom and the railway; there is a lot of material consumed in the basin now. We have grown fast lately and the stockmen have all made good."

"I don't suppose I would know the Big Hole country now," said Major Catlin, who had listened to Mr. Miller. "The first time I saw the big valley was in 1869 when there wasn't a fence thought of there and then we thought there would never be anything raised there except horses. I have been there just once since the time I was chased out of the basin and wasn't at all particular how I got out if only I got out with a whole skin. That was in 1877, when we had the encounter with Chief Joseph. I remember how the country looked then and I don't know whether I want to see it under any other conditions, as that was a memorable event in my life. I went over to the battleground about twenty years after the big fight, but it hadn't changed then. I suppose, though, that I would find it very different now. I may go over there again sometime. But it will seem strange to see all that big valley fenced up."

"We thought a great deal of John Armstrong in Wisdom," continued Mr. Miller. "He was much interested in the country and he did all he could to advance its interests. He was one of the kindest men I ever knew. All of his neighbors were fond of him and his death has plunged the town into mourning. It was so unexpected. He had been

CURRAN IS KILLED IN YARDS

LOCAL ENGINEER ON NORTHERN PACIFIC STRUCK BY VALVE CASING.

Just as he descended from his engine at the completion of his run yesterday, John Curran, an engineer on the Northern Pacific, was struck by the casing around the safety valve and almost instantly killed. He brought in passenger train No. 4 and his engine was standing on the coal track by the sand pit when the accident occurred. Curran had just washed up, and, with his overalls under his arm, jumped down from the engine. The casing around the safety valve had worked loose in some inexplicable manner and had slid over the valve. When the valve blew off it threw the metal cover, weighing 50 or 60 pounds, into the air, and, in descending, it struck Curran over the left temple, fracturing his skull. He was hurried to the Northern Pacific hospital, but lived only 15 or 20 minutes after the accident. The manner in which Curran met his death was extraordinary and none of the local railroad men is able to recall a similar happening.

John Curran was one of the Northern Pacific's best-known men. After working on the Pacific division for some time he came to the Missoula division and has been in service here since 1894. He was popular both in and out of railroad circles. He was a member of the local lodge of Elks and very active in the work of this organization. He also belonged to the Wallace lodge of the Knights of Pythias.

Coroner Marsh says that there is no liability attached to anyone on account of the accident, as it could not have been foreseen. The safety valve performed its function properly and the casing's slipping over the valve was a very peculiar occurrence. Mr. Marsh has received a telegram from M. Laftus, a cousin of the deceased, who resides at Creighton, Neb. Mr. Laftus asked that the body be held until he arrives. He is expected in the city Tuesday. It is probable that the body will be taken to Omaha, Neb., for interment, as Mr. Curran's parents reside there.

WEATHER

ELROD WILL LECTURE.

Dr. M. J. Elrod will lecture tonight at the high school on "Lewis and Clark in Montana." The lecture, which will be the last of the university extension course at the high school, will be illustrated. The lecture is free to the public and will begin at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. Elrod's reputation as a lecturer will insure a large audience.

FOR DECORATION DAY.

Wallace, May 14—(Special.)—The members of the local Women's Relief corps are planning an elaborate but old-fashioned dinner for the G. A. R. members to be given in G. A. R. hall on Decoration Day. The usual ceremonies are being planned by the old soldiers.

PRESS AGENTS TALK OF THEIR SHOWS

At the Bijou.
A film that is in itself a program will be shown at the Bijou today and tomorrow. The picture deals with a legend of Morro castle, Cuba, and is presented in a manner that is both attractive and realistic. The story told in this film is that of two lovers, who, strolling in the moonlight, see the forms of two spirits on the battlements of the old castle. Their guide tells them the story of the two unfortunate whose ghosts appear every midnight. The story is that of a low-born lover and his passion for one above his station. How his love is returned and brings disaster on both of them is exquisitely presented in "The Haunted Sentinel Tower."

"The Indian Maiden's Lesson" is a western drama that deals with the conversion of an Indian girl by a minister and in a thrilling manner is shown the story of how she takes her teachings to heart and prevents a crime from being perpetrated.

"Helping Him Out" is a comedy drama that is guaranteed to produce a laugh at every revolution of the reel. A family's attempt to select a lover for the daughter and the disastrous consequences are told in a laughable and highly comic manner.

The management has engaged Shandor's five-piece orchestra for each Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening. This orchestra is giving an excellent grade of music and should prove a great attraction. Beginning today the doors will open at 7:30 in the evening instead of at 7 o'clock. The matinees will begin at the usual time.

ARE HERE ON SUIT.

G. W. Korte, general counsel for the Puget Sound at Seattle, and J. A. Chamberlain, formerly assistant engineer at Missoula, are in the city on legal business. On Monday the case of the Cyr brothers at Bonita against the Puget Sound will be commenced in the district court. The action is to recover damages sustained in the flood of 1908. Hall & Patterson are attorneys for the plaintiff.

LAST TRIBUTE PAID TO GOOD MAN

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND FUNERAL OF JOHN N. ARMSTRONG AT CHURCH.

The funeral of John N. Armstrong was held at the Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Maclean conducting an impressive service. The sermon was simple and sympathetic, earnest and encouraging. The music was beautiful. Mrs. Price, Miss Harding, Mr. Price and Mr. Catlin sang "Lead Kindly, Light," "Asleep in Jesus" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." There was a good attendance of friends at the service and a goodly number of those who had known Mr. Armstrong as a resident of Missoula, followed the hearse to the cemetery.

Mrs. Henry Chambers, mother of Mrs. Armstrong, came down from the Bitter Root to attend the funeral. Mr. Armstrong's niece, Mrs. Walter Jones, and her husband and Charles E. Miller of the Big Hole Commercial company, accompanied Mrs. Armstrong from Wisdom and were present at the service yesterday.

The pallbearers were old friends of Mr. Armstrong: C. E. Miller of Wisdom, J. H. T. Ryman, Dan H. Ross, J. B. Catlin, J. W. Lister and A. L. Stone.

The service at the cemetery was simple and brief. Undertaker Marsh assisting. Dr. Maclean in the burial rites.
