

Facts

It is worth knowing that the value of a diamond depends upon its size, upon the form in which it is cut and, most of all, upon its purity, clearness, color and freedom from flaws. Stones that are quite colorless, perfectly transparent and free from flaws are known as first-water diamonds. Those that have a tinge of color are stones of the second water, while those of a deeper color are third-water stones.

As will be readily understood, it requires a very expert knowledge of the various grades and qualities of diamonds. Therefore, the wisdom of going to an absolutely reliable firm will be apparent to anyone who contemplates purchasing a diamond.

Those who read the news carefully smiled a bit yesterday morning when they read in The Missoulian the Associated Press dispatches that Cardinal Farley was detained off Quarantine outside New York. They didn't smile because the prelate had been delayed in reaching New York, but they were amused because they had read the night before in the Missoulian that he had been detained. Press dispatches a detailed account of the reception of Cardinal Farley in New York, of the great concourse of people that greeted him, of the lavish display of flags and of the procession to the church—all the while the cardinal was out at sea. The Man About Town was chaffed by news readers yesterday. They told him The Missoulian was slow, that it showed no speed at all. He was forced to admit that giving tomorrow's news yesterday was a bit too swift for him. It was one of the times, however, when the race was not to the swift. Cardinal Farley got to New York, all right, but he didn't get there until yesterday. When he got there, he was joyfully received, but it was yesterday. He is a great man and a good man, but he cannot travel by wireless, so he waited and came to New York on his steamer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McMenus arrived yesterday morning in Missoula from their wedding in Missoula. Mr. McMenus is an active member of the electrical workers' organization here and his associates were at the Northern Pacific station to give him a proper reception when Train 41 pulled in. The train was late and it was necessary that it stop at the east end of the yard, near the Rattlesnake crossing. Mr. McMenus is a wise young man, and he seized the opportunity to leave the train. He and Mrs. McMenus quietly left their car and walked to their home, while their friends waited at the station. But the friends were not to be thus balked in their purpose. They descended in force upon the home of the McMenus family and kidnaped the groom; the bride could not be found. The celebratory ride in a big wagon, to which was attached a small, two-wheeled trailer. Upon the trailer the groom was tied after he had been attired in a straw hat and a linen duster. He was given an old carpet bag to carry and when he had been securely bound to the cart, the procession started. On the front of the wagon was a big sign which bore the legend: "He was married in Old Missoula. We'll show him." Beneath this was a telephone instrument, with a card: "Hello, Charlie." The procession moved through the business streets of the city and attracted sufficient attention to warrant the statement that everybody knew, before noon, that McMenus was married.

Visitors in town yesterday were Ed I. Theriault of Avery and his brother George I. Theriault of Edmundston, N. B., who has been a guest at Avery for several weeks and is now on his way home. He was in Oregon for a long visit with a third brother before coming to Avery. George Theriault is engaged in the flour and lumber business on the St. John river in New Brunswick and found many friendly faces when he came from that same region. He found that his money is no good in Missoula and has been kept busy seeing things. He made one bad break, but there is an oath-bound promise not to expose it. He says he is much pleased with what he has seen in this country and is not in a hurry to leave. Ed I. Theriault said yesterday to the Man About Town: "Avery is pretty lively this winter. The chinook has taken much of the snow away; it has reduced the depth on the hill by fully two feet, perhaps more than that. There is a great deal of activity in lumbering on the St. Joe side and a good many men are at work. The outlook is good for the year ahead."

The cafe in the new Elks' building was opened yesterday and the boys whose home is in the THE ELKS building have now nothing to complain in the way of their complete enjoyment. The furnishing of the room was completed, decorations of flowers were installed and its appearance was altogether attractive when the ladies arrived for their first Wednesday session in the building, whose public rooms were yesterday turned over to them. It was the first of the series of Wednesday afternoon which the Elks hope will prove pleasant for the ladies who participate. Certainly the rooms were pleasant when they were opened for their fair occupants yesterday and the plan promises to prove the popular feature which its proposers hope it will be. The opening of the cafe means that the Elks may dine in their own home now. The room is a pleasant one; the service is arranged promises to be satisfactory; the accommodations are all that could be expected. It is a pleasant addition to the attractions which the new home offers to the Elks and makes the Missoula home a model.

J. R. Reids is from Salt Lake for a short visit. "Dad" says that he is out of baseball for all time and that his present visit has nothing to do with the local situation or with the affairs of the Coeur d'Alene league. The veteran of many seasons on the diamond, who has more of the grace of baseball in his head than a great many moderns have in their feet, declares that he is too old for the game. His appearance belie his age; it does not seem that the captain is too old and it is likely that when the sun gets warmer and the grass begins to sprout and that good, old baseball feeling begins to steam out of the drying ground—then this yearning will come to him again and he may be persuaded that he is not as old as he thinks he is. "Dad" has led many a team to victory. He knows the science of the game. His counsel is worth having and the Man About Town protests against his withdrawal from the field. It is not fair to "Dad" that he should retire and it is not fair to the fans of this section who like to see science in the game and who were to a great extent deprived of the opportunity last season.

The west window of the Reinhard store is attracting deserved attention this week on account of the excellent clock display which it contains. The whole window is given up to clocks and in the center is an old-fashioned clock design worked out in the little clocks. Hardly anybody passed the window yesterday without pausing to look at the show. There were many comments upon the ingenuity of the arrangements. It is the sort of window-dressing which pays.

A GOOD DISPLAY

Tomorrow evening the students of the university will present "The Wedding Journey," a clever German comedy of equal class with the plays put on last year and the year before. To those who saw "La Malade Imaginaire" and "A Curious Mishap" this will be advertisement enough. The attractiveness of these performances will not soon be forgotten, and those who saw them will not be likely to miss the play this evening.

GOOD ROAD APOSTLE TO ARGUE PAVEMENT QUESTION ARRIVES HERE

CHARLES W. THATCHER AND HIS OUTFIT SPEND THE DAY IN MISSOULA.

Charles W. Thatcher who is styled as the "apostle of good roads and national highways," arrived in Missoula from Butte yesterday. He was not preceded by blaring trumpets and there was no brass band to welcome him, but he arrived just the same. His outfit, which consists of a pair of Spanish mules, a burro mascot, a rickety wagon and a dog, was stationed in front of Donohue's store on West Main street during the greater part of the day. The novelty of the sight attracted a large number of the curious and Mr. Thatcher was kept busy answering questions in regard to himself. He is at present engaged in making a summer tourist highway between Omaha and the Pacific coast, which he believes by 1915 will be a well-traveled thoroughfare to the Panama exposition.

Thatcher's Year After Year. Thatcher has traveled approximately 20,000 miles in his unique Pullman, and the two Spanish mules which he now owns appear to be just as hardy and strong now as when he broke them for the work in New Mexico five and a half years ago.

Thatcher declares that he is a preacher of good roads and nothing else. He says he does not want money and is not to be classed with the usual run of pedestrians or auto patfinders. He hopes to create public sentiment enough so that the people of the United States will impress upon national legislators the necessity of government appropriations for good roads.

He prefers to sleep out of doors, but says that the greater part of the time, because he does not wish to offend farmers and ranchers along his route, he is compelled to enjoy the discomfort of a warm bed indoors. "Once in a while, however, I steal off and sleep out to recuperate," he says.

The traveler is a civil engineer, the son of Virginia parents and his father was a clergyman.

Started From Montana.

It was while in Montana eight years ago that he first conceived the idea of campaigning for good roads. Two years afterward he began his endless journeying. It was due to him that the Chicago-New York highway was started. It was partly through his persistence and untiring energy that the lakes-to-the-gulf boulevard bond issue of $1,000,000 was put through. His present project of a highway over the Rockies and coast mountains through the Yellowstone park for summer tourists is the biggest undertaking of all. Thatcher has proved to himself that the only way in which results can be attained is by appealing to the people. And he believes that this can be done by his own unique method, that of traveling in his battered wagon drawn by his Spanish mules and followed by a Rocky Mountain burro and a yellow-and-white dog. He appeals to the people directly and they will, in turn, appeal to the lawmakers and government.

Thatcher's proposed leaving Omaha, cuts across Colorado, then north to the Yellowstone park and through Beaverhead county to Butte; thence west to Coeur d'Alene and Spokane and through Washington to Seattle, thence south to San Francisco.

He left in the afternoon on his way up the Bitter Root valley. Mr. Thatcher intends to try and find a route to Bolling Springs and Lake Como that can be traversed easily by tourists. He will stop Missoula on his way back.

Lieutenant Governor promises to deliver address as convention feature.

Late yesterday afternoon the chamber of commerce received a message from Lieutenant Governor Allen, saying that he would speak at the banquet to be given Thursday evening, January 25, for the visiting county commissioners, assessors and clerks of Montana at the Palace hotel. State Senator W. B. George has also promised to be present and speak, as has Judge R. Lee McCulloch of Hamilton. P. M. Howard of Kalispell will be another speaker. Three local men, Mayor Evans, President Dunaway of the university and John H. Tolan, will be heard. County Attorney E. C. Mulrony will serve as toastmaster. The banquet will be elaborate and should prove a delightful feature of the convention. There will be a large attendance, it is expected.

Daley gets sentence.

Charles Daley, who has been putting an awful crimp in Missoula's visible supply of booze, was brought before Judge Small yesterday on the charge of intoxication. He nearly talked the judge deaf, but he failed to offer a convincing argument and was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail. He was also slated to do a flogging stunt with some cordwood in the cellar, but the key broke in the lock and he was forced to forego that pleasure. Daley escaped from the officer as he was being taken to jail, and last reports showed him still traveling.

Notice. The Court of Honor will give a public card party at the L. O. O. F. annex Friday evening, January 19, 1912. Chicken sandwich supper will be served, cards playing at 9 o'clock. Admission 25 cents.

NATURE OF MATERIAL TO BE USED IS EVIDENTLY NOT YET SETTLED.

When City Attorney Woody's paving resolution came before the council yesterday for action, Mayor Evans announced that the matter would be put over until the meeting this morning. He stated that Ronald Higgins wished to make a speech on the paving question and that he would not be able to appear before the council at the session yesterday afternoon. The mayor also stated that he had been spoken to by business men in regard to the nature of the pavement to be used and that they would be before the council this morning for the purpose of advocating the use of bitulithic as far as Cedar street and brick from there to the bridge. He added that these men felt that this should be done, as they controlled the majority of the frontage from Cedar street north and should be given their choice of pavement.

The clerk read a letter of introduction from the local bricklayers' union. The committee introduced by the letter consisted of E. Goblet, J. B. Provincial and Lee Parnelle. The committee addressed the council on the subject of giving Missoula's brick work to the local union bricklayers. They stated that the work on the sewer manholes was given to out-of-town men and that they were of the opinion that such work as could be thrown to the men living in Missoula should go to them. The council stated that this was its opinion and that this had been done whenever at all practicable. The committee stated that the matter had been brought up at the present time for the purpose of allowing the contractor who got the work to figure on employing Missoula men. The mayor stated that the matter would be brought up when the contract is awarded.

FOOD'S IMPORTANCE IS SET OUT

MISS LILLA A. HARKINS OF BOZEMAN SCHOOL TALKS BEFORE HIGH SCHOOL.

A thoroughly interesting and practical talk was given in the high school assembly hall yesterday afternoon by Miss Lilla A. Harkins, professor of home science in Montana state college. An appointed examination for the high school students made it necessary for Miss Harkins to condense subject matter that she had expected to have fill an hour into half the time. But even though time failed for elaborating some of the interesting points, Miss Harkins held the undivided attention of her large audience. One of the boys was heard to say to another, "My, but I'd like to be in that class," when the speaker told of the menu prepared and eaten by one of her classes in the home science course. Introducing her talk with the statement "Civilization began in common meals" and "The history of the world could be written from the standpoint of food," Miss Harkins sketched briefly the relation of food stuffs to the commercial, physical and ethical development of nations. Then speaking of the late interest taken in the proper feeding of mankind as a scientific impersonal study, since the proper foods for pigs, horses and cattle has been studied long centuries before the proper food for children, Miss Harkins explained the meaning of balanced rations. She exhibited a model breakfast whose percentage of calories supplied by protein and the ratio of other food principles was based upon the authority of the eminent food expert, Atwater. She made clear the three factors necessary for the present-day profession of home keeping: first, business ability; second, scientific training in physics, chemistry, bacteriology, and third, art in application of the first two. The importance of modern schooling in home science was well developed by the able talk given by Miss Harkins in her brief half hour.

MINING MAN DEAD.

Edward Yutsey, aged 53, died yesterday at St. Patrick's hospital, where he had been since December 24. He was a mining man and in partnership with J. J. Lynch of Iron Mountain. His mother will arrive in Missoula Saturday from Jersey City, N. J., and will take the body back east.

WILL READVERTISE BOND SALE

FAILURE OF NEW YORK PAPER DELAYS DISPOSAL OF COUNTRY REFUNDING BONDS.

The county commissioners yesterday received notification of the fact that the Daily Bond Buyer, a New York publication, had suspended and that the advertisement forwarded to that sheet by the local commissioners was not being printed. Some time ago the commissioners sent to the Bond Buyer a notice of the sale on February 10 of $100,000 worth of refunding bonds to be issued by the county. It is necessary to advertise a sale of this nature for 30 days prior to the disposal of the bonds. The notification that the Bond Buyer had gone out of business made it necessary for the commissioners to hurry the advertisement to the Daily Financial News, another New York paper, and the advertisement will be run in that sheet. The delay occasioned has made it necessary to postpone the sale of the bonds until February 19.
