GIVING THE NEWS.

The Anaconda Standard does not like Roosevelt. Why the Standard does not like the colonel does not concern these few remarks.

During the weeks when it was the fashion to belittle the Roosevelt movement, the Standard found some space—away on its inside pages—for a part of the dispatches which concerned the movement.

But, take now the dispatches from Philadelphia yesterday morning, covering the Pennsylvania election. The Standard accorded this news a first-page position, but its headline read "Pennsylvania is Divided."

The Associated Press sent out, at midnight Saturday, its first general summary of the results of the Pennsylvania primaries.

Philadelphia, April 13.—At midnight reports to the Associated Press indicate that Theodore Roosevelt has carried at least half of the congressional districts in Pennsylvania.

The returns kept coming in and, two hours later, it was possible to give a more accurate statement of the result of Pennsylvania's popular election.

Philadelphia, April 14.—The primary election in Pennsylvania resulted in a landslide for Roosevelt.

Then followed a summary of the figures, showing the completeness of the Roosevelt victory and making certain that it was a thorough rout of the Taft forces in the great pivotal state.

The Standard used the midnight message as the lead of its story. The later paragraph was blue-penciled. The "landslide" feature was not played up—it was not even mentioned.

It could not have been the lateness of the Pennsylvania story which prevented the Standard from giving the correct view of the Pennsylvania situation.

Some months ago the Standard read a lecture to the republican papers of Montana—The Missoulian being one of them—which had insisted for several days after the general election, that Edward Donlan had been elected governor of the state of Montana. The Standard said that these newspapers had not given the news accurately.

In this case, however, the Standard cannot plead misinformation. It had the Associated Press dispatch upon its telegraph desk, giving the news that the Pennsylvania primary election had resulted in a landslide for Roosevelt.

But in the present instance there does not seem to be even that excuse for the attempt of the Standard to minimize the result of the Pennsylvania vote.

CANADA.

Migration of American farmers into Canada has become a familiar story in the middle west and now residents of northwestern New York are seeking to prevent, through the removal of restrictions on the importation of electric power into this country.

At present a congressional statute, passed before the treaty was negotiated, limits the importation of electric current from Canada to 150,000 horse power.

Northwestern New York thinks this is equivalent to a prediction that, unless remedial legislation is enacted, new industries will pass it by and locate across the Niagara river in Canada.

Possibly, the United States may fear water power encroachment by Canada, but it is now admitted that there is no ground for alarm in the agricultural migration that was so pronounced a few years ago.

The University lecture course has once more demonstrated its popularity. The Associated Press, at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, sent this telegram:

Philadelphia, April 14.—The primary election in Pennsylvania resulted in a landslide for Roosevelt.

The best rule for success is to get together and to stick together. This is true in municipal matters and in business affairs.

The news from Pennsylvania makes some Montana people wonder what sort of dope they have been getting.

It will be remembered that Mr. Taft said he had no "constitutional right" to seek to settle the coal strike.

Cleaning day was such a success that it wouldn't be out of place to make every day a cleaning day.

Get out your map of Pennsylvania and you will see what it all means and how it all happened.

But the special-privileged interests continue to support Harmon—when it pleases them.

Pennsylvania finished the work. Watch now for the collapse of the Taft boom.

The prospect of having Blankenship's boys at home makes the town livelier already.

There are a good many Montana counties that are taking advantage of the privilege accorded by the statute,

PENNSYLVANIA AND MONTANA

Last week Boss Penrose of Pennsylvania said that he would regard it as a humiliating defeat if Roosevelt got ten delegates from Pennsylvania.

That was the answer which progressive Pennsylvania gave Saturday to the bosses.

The landslide swept the state. Penrose saw it coming and retired to his private yacht, where he hid out.

The people, in the primaries, nominated their own candidates for congress. They turned down many of the old gang.

It has enabled her people to express their own opinion and to select their own candidates.

Even in Montana it will be possible for the people to select their own candidates. The committees will not be controlled, because there will be no advantage in their control.

What the primary has done for Illinois, for Pennsylvania and for California, it will do for Montana.

Montana will have the primary. Nobody questions that fact.

The only question is, right now, as to when Montana will get the primary law which her people demand.

There can be no sound reason advanced now why the legislature should not immediately assemble for the enactment of the primary law which was prepared by the governor's commission.

It is the duty of every voter in the state to send his personal word to Governor Norris in this crisis, urging him to convene the legislature for this purpose.

Write or telegraph to the governor today. The bosses and the corporations are exerting their influence with the governor to prevent the assembling of the legislature.

Let the people determine what influence they have with the governor. He is entitled to know how the people feel.

God knows he needs the support of the people, with the Amalgamated agents and newspapers hammering him to prevent the session.

And the one that told you Tom was a good fellow, but that he smoked cigarettes—and the one that said another boy showed him a girl's notes—were those all 'good fellows' or were they also a little feling'?

Spite and being 'catty' are very much the same thing. Jealousy, in a small way, is another name for spite.

Wouldn't you like to have Montana in the primary class?

DICKENS' WIT AND WISDOM

By Mrs. Hogue Stinchcomb.

Washington has been a bit slow, but the national capital has discovered Mrs. Gray, just as Montana discovered her when she performed here.

The red cross is the eternal monument to Clara Barton's worth.

Two Little Words. "Spite is a little word, but it represents as strange a jumble of feelings and compound of discords as any polysyllable in the language."

Women have been given the palm for spitefulness—largely because men have other names for the same feelings that make it seem almost a virtue.

Too often it is just spite. "I never will be catty," said a girl to me. "So many girls will always scratch you a little under a pretence of being friendly."

"Are boys not catty also?" I asked curiously. "No; they will have it out and say what they mean and get over it—but girls sometimes stick pins in you just for fun."

"How about the boy that told you Charlie was 'crazy' about you, and added that he was always in love with some girl—wasn't that a little catty?"

SAGE TEA WILL DARKEN THE HAIR

Restore Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

There is nothing new about the idea of using Sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our grandmothers kept their hair dark, glossy and abundant by the use of a simple "Sage Tea."

Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves.

This preparation gives youthful color and beauty to the hair, and is one of the best remedies you can use for dandruff, dry, feverish, itching scalp, and falling hair.
