ARCHBOLD SAYS T. R. KNEW OF IT

some time later in company with the late H. H. Rogers. "The campaign was only casually mentioned," he said. "The president said that there had been some criticism of campaign contributions, but that could not be avoided."

Senator Penrose, who had followed the testimony with careful attention, interrupted to ask: "Can you say whether this $100,000 contribution was ever returned, or any suggestion made that it should be returned?"

"No," answered Archbold. "No such suggestion ever was made to me." Senator Penrose requested that Mr. Archbold be asked to search his office files for documentary evidence bearing on the case, particularly for the receipts which he said he had received from Mr. Bliss for the $100,000 contribution. He also requested that Mr. Archbold request his associates at the board meetings which considered the contribution question in 1904 to hold themselves at the disposal of the committee.

"William Rockefeller, who is in precarious health, is about the only member of the board besides myself who was present," replied Mr. Archbold. "Three members of that board, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Tilford and Mr. Barstow, died in 1909."

The Standard Oil man turned suddenly to Chairman Clapp. "They were worried to death," he declared. Mr. Archbold agreed to make the search for the papers and to produce them if available upon his return from Europe in about three weeks. He leaves the United States tomorrow.

A Forgery? Senator Clapp produced a magazine article containing a series of letters purporting to have been written by Archbold to Senator Penrose. Archbold declared that the letter which mentioned $15,000 sent to Penrose seemed to be a forgery. "The signature is very unlike my own," he said. Mr. Archbold admitted that he might have written several of the other letters, but that he had no recollection of them. Mr. Archbold identified as correct the telegrams which Senator Penrose had inserted in his speech before the senate Wednesday to show that William Flinn had sought to get Mr. Archbold's influence in the senatorial contest in Pennsylvania after the death of Senator Quay. Mr. Archbold declared that he took no part in the election and had never participated in a senatorial fight except in a "simple, individual way." Senator Clapp excused Mr. Archbold from further testimony today on condition that he would be subject to being recalled in October. Given to Understand. Senator Penrose said he had been given to understand at the time that Colonel Roosevelt knew of the contribution of $100,000 to the national campaign fund by the Standard Oil company and of the demand for further contributions. "I also know of the urgency of the request of Mr. Bliss to Mr. Archbold for the additional $150,000," said Penrose, "and his saying that the refusal to give it probably would result in retaliatory measures, the theory being that it drew the 'powers that be,' as Mr. Archbold calls them, into other financial hands and that the Standard Oil company would be the 'goat,' as the popular saying is." Senator Pomerene inquired as to various interviews with Archbold and other men connected with the Standard Oil company. "Mr. Archbold told me," said Senator Penrose, "that his board of directors would decline to aid in the national campaign if there was any secrecy about the matter—if their activity was not known to President Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou." "At these interviews was anything said about Mr. Roosevelt's views on the tariff?" "It was generally understood that he stood for a protective tariff as outlined in the republican platform since 1858," answered Penrose. "Was anything said about his attitude toward so-called 'big business'?" asked Pomerene. "There was a general assurance on the part of Mr. Bliss that powers of the presidential office would not be used in a harsh way for demagogic effect," Senator Penrose said that in an interview at which he was present after the first Standard Oil contribution, Mr. Bliss told the Standard Oil officials that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou had been advised of the first contribution and were extremely solicitous about their complying with his request for a second contribution. Senator Penrose declared he told Mr. Archbold that he was making a mistake in not making the second contribution and that Mr. Archbold agreed with him. The senator explained that he believed Mr. Bliss, who was in close touch with Mr. Cortelyou and Mr. Roosevelt, said then that the committee needed money, that it really was in need. Mr. Penrose said he never had discussed the Standard Oil contribution with Mr. Cortelyou, but he believed the subject of the contribution had come up casually with President Roosevelt, both before and after the election of 1904. "While no direct reference was made to the contributions in 1904, I believed that the president was cognizant of the habit of the Standard Oil company of contributing to every campaign since 1898," said Penrose. He was positive Mr. Roosevelt never had suggested to him that the Standard Oil money be returned. He again referred to the letter which President Roosevelt wrote him thanking him for his extraordinary efforts. Senator Pomerene obtained a promise that the letter would be inserted in the record. Senator Penrose said he had been one of the original Roosevelt supporters and had called the state convention in Pennsylvania in 1904 which was the first state convention to declare for Roosevelt's nomination. "We endorsed Roosevelt," said Mr. Penrose, "and forced Senator Hanna of Ohio, who was opposed to Roosevelt, to surrender to Senator Foraker and allow the Ohio convention to endorse Roosevelt. I may say that I was probably as earnest a supporter of President Roosevelt all through his seven years as any, except perhaps Senators Platt, Quay and Foraker." That Report. Senator Pomerene asked Senator Penrose about the report of the industrial commission having been sent to Archbold in advance. "If that report was sent," said Senator Penrose, "and I have no way of telling whether it was, it probably was one of hundreds sent to Pennsylvania men who had testified before the commission." Senator Penrose said he received no contributions other than the single one of $25,000 from the Standard Oil company in 1904 and that he received none in the 1908 campaign. "Was that $25,000 solely for Pennsylvania politics?" asked Senator Oiler. "Yes, it was used to poll the largest possible republican vote in Pennsylvania." ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY FOR BITTER ROOT GIRL. Stevensville, Aug. 23.—(Special.)—Yesterday afternoon, at the home of E. H. Nichols, a very pretty party was given by Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Henry Burch, where the announcement was made of the approaching marriage in October of Miss Emelyn Plummer to Fred B. Taylor. Miss Plummer is the eldest daughter of B. F. Plummer, whose home is about two miles north of town on one of the best ranches in the valley. She is one of Stevensville's fairest daughters, being graduated from the high school in 1910, and an active participant in the social affairs of this city. Mr. Taylor is a horticulturist, holding a responsible position here since coming to the Bitter Root. The guests spent the afternoon pleasantly with fancy work and embroidery linen. Several instrumental and vocal selections were rendered and delicious refreshments were served, using a pink and white color scheme in the service that harmonized with the same colors that were used in the decorations. Those invited were: Mesdames Graham, Moffatt, Frisbie, Lenfest, Marshall, Gibbons, Carlson; Misses Sleeman, Borgasser, Strausser, Volmer, Sanborn, Frisby, Faulds, White, Dowling, Helen Burg of Arcadia, Wis., Emelyn Plummer and her mother, Mrs. B.
