

PARDON GIVEN HALL IF HE'LL RETURN MONIES

victims in nearly every instance are poor people who ill afford to lose the money of which they were deprived, and that their only chance of recovering it is through the earning power of the defendant, if he be given a chance to use it, and to divert his earnings to the payment of the claim seven years more of penal servitude will destroy Hall's earning capacity, the governor believes, whereas now it is fair to assume he could earn much to be applied toward the relief of the defrauded.

Six Conditions.

Six conditions are specified by the governor as follows:

Hall will be discharged to pursue honest and legitimate business for a period of five years, with the understanding that if within that time he has not paid in full all debts of Hall Bros. and Sam A. Hall arising from his wrongdoing, he shall be returned to prison.

Hall must file with the state board of pardons a list of all creditors, and all creditors must file within one year their claims with the state board of pardons, which will decide whether claims should be allowed or disallowed.

Hall must report to the board of pardons at least twice a month his whereabouts, occupation and other particulars.

Immediately upon being discharged Hall must designate some Butte or Helena bank as a depository for such funds as are to be applied toward the liquidation of his obligations. Each time he deposits money the clerk of the board of pardons must be notified, and from time to time the board will direct the payment of the moneys so deposited to the creditors pro rata.

If the board is convinced at any time that Hall is not living up to the conditions specified, and is not endeavoring in good faith to pay his victims, the board is given the authority to declare the rights of the defendant forfeited, and he will be returned to prison.

Hall must signify in writing in the presence of witnesses his acceptance of the conditions imposed.

It is understood that Hall stands ready to accept all the conditions.

PROBERS HEAR GOMPERS NAMED

Both the witness and acting Chairman Benhead mildly suggested that Mulhall look at him instead of his antagonists. Mulhall admitted he was somewhat nervous but insisted that witnesses have been intimidated since they were brought to Washington, "outside as well as inside this committee room."

More Letters.

Letters identified today covered a wide range of activity, but centered chiefly about the campaign in Indiana in 1908, when Mulhall, according to the documents, was working in close co-operation with Congressman James E. Watson and with national and state republican leaders.

Mulhall told the committee he raised $5,500 for that campaign. One of the letters referred to this amount and another mentioned a list of manufacturing concerns in South Bend, the proprietors of which had been visited by Mulhall in company with Peter Kline, deputy factory inspector for that district.

"In an interview I had with Mr. Parry and other large business men of this section they stated they were jumping the law as far as corporations are concerned by subscribing to our campaign funds," said Mulhall, in a letter to Schwedeman from Indianapolis, September 26, 1908.

"There are a hundred ways to get around that and we all know that, and I cannot see why Mr. Van Cleave cannot get around it just as well as the large manufacturers here."

More correspondence read late in the day showed that the Indianapolis News had identified Mulhall as connected with the manufacturers' association in September and had brought the matter into public discussion. Mulhall laughingly told the committee that local, state and national campaign managers consistently had denied that they knew anything about any work by the National Association of Manufacturers, even after work had been going on for nearly a year in Indiana.

Several letters again referred to Maryland. Two of them showed that Mulhall, in behalf of his employers, was trying to work both with Collector William F. Stone, one of the republican leaders, and Congressman John Gill of the Fourth district, a democrat.

At the same time, Stone and Gill were opposing each other bitterly, and Mulhall counseled extreme caution in dealing with the situation. To the committee Mulhall explained that Gill had not sought aid, but that he considered him a "fair man" and wanted to help him.

In a letter to John Kirby, Jr., from Indianapolis, September 22, 1903, just after some of the so-called Archbold letters had been made public, referring to Senator Foraker, Mulhall said he still had faith in Ohio's great senator and thought he would win. He expressed surprise that Roosevelt was stirring up the Standard Oil matter, and said: "The president is playing very poor politics."

"Instead of gaining votes, he will find on the third of November that it will be a losing game," said the letter. "Even the Standard Oil company has its friends and I cannot understand why a man of his stripe will think it is a crime for a man honestly to work for a corporation of that kind."

LANGFORD IS HOME WITH NONE TO FIGHT?

San Francisco, July 18--Sam Langford, the negro pugilist, arrived here today from Australia after an absence of nearly two years. Matches were hard for him to find when he left and they look no more plentiful now. Arthur Polkey, the last recruit among the white hopes, announced a few hours before the ship was in sight that he had drawn the color line. Jess Willard will not meet a negro. No other white man heavy or clever enough to give Langford a creditable workout is in sight this side of the Rocky mountains.
