You can't tell for sure how a lad can run, by looking at his shape; it isn't always the handsomest who is first to breast the tape, sometimes a little skinny chap, with legs like slender sticks, will gallop past the handsome one—he puts in his best looks; when you see the runners starting round, you can't pick out the best; it's when they get in motion that you choose him from the rest, so when you watch the training, don't make your choice too fast; for the runner that's best-looker may reach the finish last; it's the chap who's strong and sturdy that's first in every race; usually legs are off the ones that travel in first place; and in other things use caution, don't judge alone by shape; for often it's the gawky chap who's first to breast the tape.

They're all training, however, these days. Short legs and long legs, thin legs and thick legs—all are hiking along the elder path, getting in to form. The sample had gets the applause in the jogger and it sometimes happens that he makes good in the real test when that comes. But, quick or thin, the legs are good that run true. I have said this on previous training dates and it is something that should be said on every training day and on every race day and on every day of endeavor in any line. Shape is a valuable asset, but it doesn't win alone. The element which wins is effort application and earnest preparation. The discipline of the training season is the best training the boy gets. It is worth all the rest, though he doesn't realize it. And, more often than not, the boy who gets the most benefit from this experience is the one who doesn't win. There's some complaint against the athletic features of present-day school life, but I am strong for them when they are handled right. There is a certain amount of potential energy stored in every boy. It means much to the boy, how that potential energy is transformed. If it is made applicable in a worthy direction, it's a great thing for the lad.

Today is Good Friday, which means—besides hot cross buns—that there is an extra holiday for a lot of the youngsters. I suspect that there will be a lot of fishing done today and tomorrow. If the trout are wise, they will swing off taking flies for at least two days. I have been assured of at least two meals of trout and there is a possibility that it will be three. Again, it may be only one and perhaps it will be none. But that doesn't make any difference, it is being out in the open that does the boy more good than the catching of trout, though the latter is a comfortable sort of experience for the outing excursion. The getting out of doors is the best medicine a boy or anybody else can have, provided one gets out doors the right way. But the training and the fishing furnish the opportunity for getting out under the best conditions. There should be no complaint if a boy indulges in either one of these methods for letting off steam. Steam has to be let off in some way and it might be done the wrong way were it not for the attraction of these forms of juvenile diversion. The stocking of streams is a good thing, just to keep the fishing good for the boys.

There was a big demand yesterday for fish and oases in preparation for the last Friday in Lent; the stores which deal in these essentials were busier yesterday than the shops which specialize in Easter attire—and that is going some. It was a great day for the fish man. The hen, too, scored another splendid triumph. There was enough of fish and eggs for all and there will be proper observance of the requirement on Friday next today. And the girl who takes the orders for hot cross buns had her hands full, too. There will be good eats today, even if it is an off day for meat. But not even the spirit of abstinence could dampen the ardor of the Easter shoppers; they were out early and stayed as late as they could. It is all up to the weather man now. If that cold wave ranges from the Stoney South and gets into this neck of the woods, there will be disappointment, to say the least.

STUDENTS TO HAVE SHORT EASTER REST

PETITION TO FACULTY GIVES UNIVERSITY UNDER GRADUATES VACATION.

The university faculty granted a petition signed by almost every student of the campus asking for a holiday extending from Thursday evening until Tuesday morning. Most of the university undergraduates will, therefore, leave Missoula today in order to spend Easter Sunday at their homes. The petition was circulated early this week and those behind it had little difficulty in securing signatures. Almost every student approved the scheme. No Easter holiday was included in the university's official list of vacations and many of the students felt that they should be given an opportunity to go home on Sunday. The size of the state made some extra time necessary for many of the students. It is understood that the faculty's action is intended as a gentle lesson to the students. On President Craighead's birthday the undergraduates took it upon themselves to declare a holiday. Later they recognized the error of their ways and asked for an opportunity to make up the work they had missed. By granting this request for a holiday the faculty presents an object lesson in methods.

The Woodmen are out after 15,000 new members and Mr. Boak is out getting things started so that his organization will be able to make good. Mr. Boak is not a stranger in Missoula and he will be welcomed by many friends Monday. An open meeting will be held that evening and Mr. Boak is to speak.

FOR TRIBAL RIGHTS INDIAN WOMAN PLEADS

MRS. MAGGIE DOOLITTLE, QUARTER-BLOOD ASSINIBOINE, WANTS LAND.

Mrs. Maggie Doolittle, for herself and as guardian of her minor children—Edgar Martin, Irene Martin, Roy Martin, Della May Martin, Nelson Doolittle, Reuben Doolittle, May Doolittle, Moses Doolittle and Walter Doolittle—filed suit yesterday against the United States. Mrs. Doolittle alleges that the Indian agent on the Fort Peck Indian reservation has denied the allotments which are the rights of her and her children. In her complaint Mrs. Doolittle traces her ancestry back to Upankaska, a full-blood Indian, who married a white man in 1837. Upankaska—the English name is Spotted Elk—was her grandmother. Mrs. Doolittle asserts. Allotments have been selected for the Doolittle family, but the Indian agent will not turn them over. United States District Attorney Wheeler filed suit in the federal court yesterday against "two gallons of whiskey, two sorrel geldings and James Matt." The information alleges that Matt took the two gallons of whiskey named in the complaint onto the Flathead reservation and that the two sorrel geldings carried the load. The whole outfit was seized by John Glenn, special officer. J. L. Milner of Glendive was adjudged bankrupt in the federal court yesterday. Mr. Milner, a rancher near Glendive, said that his assets totaled $12,000, while his liabilities amounted to $10,000.50. Of the assets $2,846 was said to be exempt.

HENRY MATT FREED BY FEDERAL JURY

RESERVATION RESIDENT IS ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF SELLING WHISKEY TO REDS.

After being out but a short time the jury in the United States district court found Henry Matt not guilty of furnishing whiskey to Indians. The trial of the case occupied only a little time, the state calling only a few witnesses directly interested in the events supposedly connecting Matt with the crime of which he was charged, while the defense merely used a few business men and prominent Indians in order to establish Matt's good reputation. From the evidence it appears that on June 27 Alec Matt, father of the defendant, gave a dance near Arlee. Shortly before the festivities began, the old man told his son that several Indians had secured liquor and were drunk. He asked Henry to get the booze and destroy it. With Felix Barnaby, Henry Matt went out to look for the liquor. They found a jug in the grass some distance from the Barnaby home, but instead of destroying it, took it to Barnaby's and there drank some of it. Henry Matt then went to the dance to play in the orchestra. Later he invited Mary Louise Ashley, a young Indian girl, to the Barnaby house to get some of the booze. Felix Barnaby and his wife were already delirious. They say that Matt gave the Ashley girl a drink of whiskey. Upon this act the prosecution laid particular emphasis. The whole case hinged, practically, upon this single point and upon the transfer of the booze from the field to the Barnaby house. If Matt carried the jug, the court explained, he was guilty of introducing liquor into Indian country. If Barnaby carried it Matt was not guilty. Again, if Matt gave the Ashley woman a drink of whiskey he was guilty of giving whiskey to an Indian. If, however, he merely participated in a general drinking bout with the other three he could not be called guilty. The case went to the jury at about 4:30 o'clock.

YERRICK IS GUILTY OF BOOTLEGGING CHARGES

FEDERAL COURT JURY CONVICTS PROMINENT MISSOULA SALOONKEEPER.

After deliberating for 20 hours the federal court jury in whose hands lay the fate of W. H. Yerrick, a Missoula saloonkeeper, charged with violation of the reservation liquor laws, yesterday morning returned a verdict of guilty. Two or three hours before reaching a decision the jury reported to the court its inability to return a verdict. Judge Bourquin lectured the men sharply and sent them back to the jury room for further deliberation. At 11 o'clock, exactly 20 hours after taking the case, the jury returned to declare the defendant guilty on the first of the four counts of the indictment. This count charged Yerrick with shipping liquor to Ravalli, a railroad station within the limits of the Flathead reservation. Other counts were based on specific allegations of shipments of liquor made from Missoula. Of these Yerrick was adjudged not guilty. Judge Bourquin will sentence Yerrick at 10 o'clock this morning. W. H. Yerrick is well known locally as the owner of the Exchange saloon on West Front street. He has been engaged in the liquor business here for years.
