Caught on the Run About Town

There is war-talk in the early morn, there is war-talk late at night, we want to lick somebody, but we don't know whom to fight, we have congress working overtime, grim war we would declare; we want to fight somebody—but who and when and where; the fleet will be at Tampico sometime this glorious day; the army is impatient to be upon the march; and Great Falls has rough riders who want to fight some one, somewhere, to lift oppression's yoke; we want to stop this fooling, we would set somebody free, but who and where, and why and when, is where we don't agree; if we can just get settled and determine what is what, we'll administer a drubbing that will never be forgot; but we wonder in the morning and we speculate all night, we want to lick somebody, but we don't know whom to fight.

It all depends upon whether you regard the dandelion as a flower or as a weed, whether you want to lick somebody, but we don't know whom to fight, we have congress working overtime, grim war we would declare; we want to fight somebody—but who and when and where; the fleet will be at Tampico sometime this glorious day; the army is impatient to be upon the march; and Great Falls has rough riders who want to fight some one, somewhere, to lift oppression's yoke; we want to stop this fooling, we would set somebody free, but who and where, and why and when, is where we don't agree; if we can just get settled and determine what is what, we'll administer a drubbing that will never be forgot; but we wonder in the morning and we speculate all night, we want to lick somebody, but we don't know whom to fight.

The wild flowers are in their glory. The anemone is being brought to town in great bunches by the country. Those who wander into the country. The buttercup has had its day and was, as ever, welcome. All of the early blossoms are here and in fine profusion. It is good to see them. It is better to get out along the streams and on the hillside and gather them yourself. They have come suddenly, it seems, this year. Perhaps it is because we have all been so busy that we have not realized that it is time for these flowers to be here, but it seems that they have come upon us all at once. The best prescription I know of for the blues or for indifference, is to get out of doors and take a walk through Greenough park. It doesn't take long, but it does a heap of good; there is a great variety of scene along that walk and all of the changes are delightful. A climb up to the waterworks reservoir gives an opportunity for a grand view and affords a chance to get other blossoms than those which grow lower down. It is the duty of every one to go through the park this week. It will brush the cobwebs and it will bring renewed pride in Missoula.

Dr. Moore came to The Missoulian office the other morning with an interesting specimen. He had read in the paper of Jim Brown's cocoon, but the one he got from the source—and of the interest that was manifested in the strange fruit or flower or whatever a cocoon is. Dr. Moore has a cocoon in its husk, which was brought from Florida by his father, 22 years ago. He displayed it as evidence that Jim Brown has not the first cocoon in the house. It is each Missoulian. The cocoon specimen has dried out and is now a little, there is no milk in this cocoon now, but it is of interest as a specimen and there were many people who examined it with concern while it was shown at The Missoulian office.

BATTLER IS CURED BY ROCK PILE METHOD

JOHN FORESTER OBEYS COURT AFTER WORKING WITH SLEDGE FOR AN HOUR.

The police department yesterday demonstrated the efficiency of labor as a curative for the injuries resulting from combat with John Forester. A little dose of rock pile yesterday cured a case which seemed hopeless for a few minutes. John Forester and John Barleycorn had gone several rounds when the police picked up the former Monday morning. The battered veteran was allowed to sleep in the city jail all day, and in the evening was released, fed and told to make himself hard to find.

But John Forester was not a quitter. He went right back for another tussle with his sworn enemy, and at midnight was found fast asleep in the middle of the Higgins avenue bridge, a rolled-up raiment serving as his pillow and the bright sky as a coverlet. Again he was arrested and taken to jail. In the morning he told the police judge that he didn't like to leave town, that shortly after promising to go he had met friends whose generosity made him loathe to hit the trail. The judge was sympathetic. He arranged a scheme whereby Forester might remain in the city and at the same time keep out of mischief. "A week on the rock pile," he said.

To the rock pile Forester went yesterday morning. The work was hard and the world fair to see. At noon Forester had disappeared.

This Day and Tomorrow

COLLEGE THESPIANS ANNOUNCE NEW PLAY

UNIVERSITY DRAMATIC CLUB WILL PRESENT FITCH DRAMA NEXT WEEK.

Through Mrs. Alice Macleod, teacher of elocution at the university, the University Dramatic club announces a performance of Clyde Fitch's play, "Her Own Way," for April 30. It is customary for the club to give a play each spring, though usually in March. This year the date of the performance was postponed in order that it might fit in with the events which always mark the closing weeks of the college term.

In selecting the Fitch play for the annual performance, Mrs. Macleod has done something never attempted before. The club decided to try more modern dramas in its performances and Mrs. Macleod happily chose "Her Own Way." Fitch's plays are all remarkable for the fact that he puts a dash of something fine into the fibre of the most commonplace persons in them. This play is no exception. Every one of the characters is a living human being. The star does not dominate every part, but stands in her proper relationship to other participants in the action. Not infrequently, for instance, do we find Fitch interrupting the principal scenes in the play in order to introduce some clever speech from a minor character.

In view of the fact that Fitch's characters are hard to interpret, the task before the college amateurs has been no easy one. The play was written to exploit the chief talents of Maxine Elliott and for that reason is hard for amateurs to present. But Mrs. Macleod has had the cast rehearsing for weeks and expects to present the play in professional style a week from Thursday.

This is the first play which Mrs. Macleod has staged since coming to the university, and undoubtedly it will only prove her ability as a coach, but will also entertain Missoula theatergoers as nothing else short of a professional performance could.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY WILL BE GIVEN IN MAY

STUDENTS OF COUNTY SCHOOL WORKING HARD IN PREPARATION FOR SHOW.

The high school students who are to take parts in "What Happened to Jones," the play to be given by the senior class on May 1, are putting in several hours a day under the direction of Miss Baker, a teacher in the Central school. CRAIGHEAD SPEAKS OF AMERICA'S CHANCE

Dr. E. B. Craighead, president of the university, delivered a scholarly address at the university last evening on "America's Opportunity." The lecture was one of the numbers in the course given during the year by the university. The address was one of the finest which Dr. Craighead has ever delivered before a local audience. The subject was one on which he feels strongly and he developed and expressed it in a masterly way.

This nation, with its wealth of resources and population, has an opportunity greater than any other on the face of the earth. Dr. Craighead told his audience, if the great power of the American nation could be turned toward inward development, toward education and the enlargement of ideals, the result would be epoch-making. He urged the abandonment of militarism and the waste of strength it entails, asking for growth of mind instead. As an example of the extremes to which militarism has taken the nation, Dr. Craighead told of congress' refusal to appropriate $500,000 to the national university recommended by all of the country's great educators while spending $6,500,000 for a useless army post in Wyoming.

JUDGE DUNCAN HEARS SUIT FOR INJUNCTION

Judge A. L. Duncan, sitting in the partnership No. 1 of the district court yesterday, listened to the arguments of the attorneys for the opposing sides in the action brought against the city of Missoula by E. C. Ives and others. The plaintiffs seek to have the city enjoined from proceeding with the improvement of the Scenic-view park, located at the intersection of Stephens avenue and South Sixth streets. The city owns the tract, but the plaintiffs claim that a public highway has always run through it. The arguments will be continued this afternoon.
