

DAY OF THRILLERS IN CAILLAUX CASE

Former Wife of Statesman Proves a Wonderfully Impressive Witness and Again Swings the Volatile Sentiment of the French Audience.

Paris, July 23.—Mme. Bertha Gueydan, Joseph Caillaux's first wife, a slender woman with black eyes and wasted cheeks, went into the courtroom today, faced her former husband, the former premier of France, and put upon the rack the woman who had won him from Mme. Henriette Caillaux, now on trial for the murder of Gaston Calmette.

Mme. Gueydan was to tell of her part in the publication in the Figaro of the now celebrated "Thy Joe" letter, but she declared she knew nothing about it, and affirmed that she had told Calmette nothing.

The emotional climax of the trial was reached when other private letters were handed over by Mme. Gueydan to Fernan Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux. Those who packed the courtroom witnessed one of the most dramatic incidents in the annals of French courts.

"Let me finish," shouted M. Caillaux, waving his arms. "You did not want a divorce. Nevertheless, whatever wrongs were on my side were handsomely compensated for. I gave you 18,000 francs alimony; you had not a centime when I married you. I gave you 200,000 francs."

A chorus of groans greeted these remarks. Caillaux whirled around and began to address the courtroom. He was called to order by the judge, but continued to recite the circumstances of his divorce, turning frequently toward his former wife.

Both he and Mme. Caillaux believed, he said, that the "Thy Joe" letter formed one of a trilogy and that its publication would be followed by the publication of the others.

"Gentlemen," he turned to the jury. "I am a profoundly unhappy man. I had been a profoundly happy man since my second marriage."

Mme. Caillaux's sobe at this stage redoubled and became painful to hear. "Are you going," asked M. Caillaux of Mme. Gueydan, "to force us to trumpet forth in this place all those things that we avoided at the time of the divorce?"

Mme. Gueydan made no answer. M. Caillaux left the stand.

"Whatever you may have done I forgive you and salute you," he said, bowing low as he passed Mme. Gueydan on his way back to his seat. The court hummed with expectation when the ex-premier, Jean Louis Barthou, walked to the stand. After he had recorded his high opinion of the integrity and patriotism of Gaston Calmette, whom he had known for 25 years, he denied ever having told Mme. Caillaux that Mme. Gueydan had shown him the two letters.

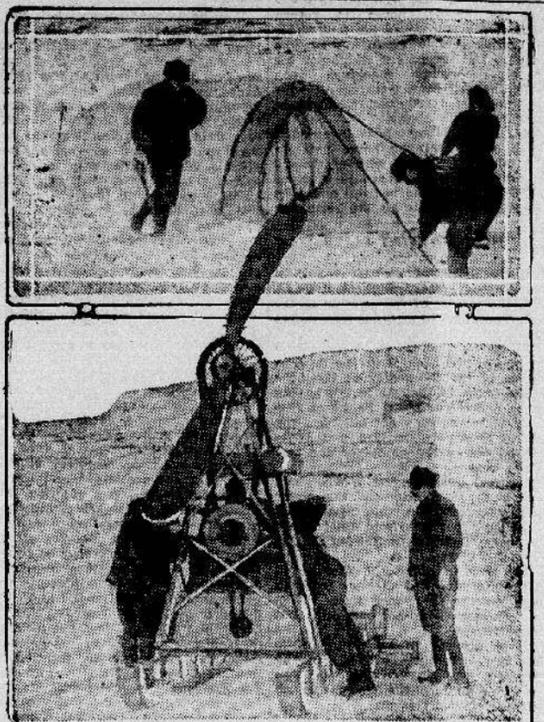

He then related the steps he had taken at the request of the premier, Doumergue, to stop M. Calmette from publishing several documents, notably the Fabre report. M. Calmette at first refused to listen to him, but M. Deland, the former minister of justice, then joined him in his insistence.

"If I do not publish the Fabre report," said M. Calmette to me," Barthou continued, "I have nothing more; my campaign is over."

M. Caillaux then confronted him and the two ex-premiers stood at the bar. Barthou reaffirmed that he had never said Mme. Gueydan had shown him the letters. Caillaux was equally positive that he had.

Finally M. Labori, who had the incident brought to court, said: "There can be no question of the good faith of both of you gentlemen, but your minds could not have been working the same way that day."

SHACKLETON PLEASSED WITH NEW TENT AND MOTOR-SLEDGE FOR POLAR JOURNEY

TENT AND MOTOR-SLEDGE TO BE USED BY SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON ON HIS TRANS-ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION.

London, July 23.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, who has just received a gift of £120,000 from Sir James Caird of Dundee, for the expenses of his Trans-Antarctic expedition, recently tested his equipment for the journey under actual working conditions at Fines in Norway.

He had with him a specially constructed tent, which proved very satisfactory in the difficult operation of pitching it in a high wind. Three men can do this in a few seconds in an emergency, while in fine weather it can be done by one man alone.

Two motor-sledges were also tested, and one of them proved thoroughly satisfactory. It was fitted with a 20-horsepower Anafi engine of the aero-plane type, and a large propeller. The steering gear consisted of two rudders mounted on outriggers and worked by pedals.

On occasion the sledge carried heavy loads and six men, towing at the same time another sledge also loaded and carrying two passengers. The tests brought to light several structural weaknesses of a minor character which could not have been discovered by bench trials.

Two members of the expedition also underwent severe tests of the food to be used in the Antarctic. They lived exclusively on the polar rations, and in spite of the hard work they were doing they could not consume more than a third of the amount allotted.

"Here is the packet of letters I took at Mame's," said Mme. Gueydan, giving them to an attendant, who passed them to M. Labori.

"I will consider with Maitre Chem, what shall be done," said M. Labori. "But whatever we decide the jury may rest assured that they will be apprised of their contents, as is their right and duty to expect."

"Among them," added Mme. Gueydan, "are two letters referred to as private letters."

Mme. Gueydan then left the box. Her remarkably personable had completely dominated the whole procedure. For three hours she spoke, and her voice gained strength, carrying to the remotest corner of the room. She more than held her own against the great advocates, Labori and Chem, and the judge gave up trying to direct her deposition.

In that time she laid bare many of the secrets of her life with M. Caillaux. She told of his liaison and of his throwing himself at her knees to ask her pardon. She described her methods of defense of what she termed the "Machiavellian maneuvers of an unfaithful husband."

She testified that he even threatened her. "Then she left him, hoping he would follow her, but he did not, and she added, with a flash of her eyes and a tightening of her lips, "You know why."

She gained the sympathy of those in the court room with telling phrases and shafts that seemed to sink deep. There were murmurs of applause despite the admonitory rappings of the judges and threats to clear the court. When she returned to her place many crowded around her with outstretched hand and cried "bravo."

M. Caillaux, returning to the bar, said:

COPPER KING IS DEAD AFTER SUDDEN STROKE

Santa Cruz, Cal., July 13.—E. W. Billing, multi-millionaire, died today at his country home north of Santa Cruz. He retired apparently in good health Tuesday night, but was found unconscious the following morning and remained so until his death.

Mr. Billing's fortune was made in the copper mines of Montana. Among his other interests were mining properties in the state of Washington.

ANGRY ATTACK.

London, July 23.—James Keir Hardie, socialist and independent local member of parliament, in an angry attack in a paper this morning, accuses the king of calling the home rule conference in the interest of the reactionary and rebellious Ulsterites.

MONTANA EDITORS WAR AGAINST VICE IN ANNUAL SESSION

STATE ASSOCIATION BEGINS YEARLY CONVENTION AS GUEST OF LEWISTOWN.

Lewistown, July 23.—(Special)—The Montana Press association began its session here today. E. H. Cooney of Great Falls, president of the association, called the editors to order. The newspapermen were formally welcomed to Lewistown by Mayor W. D. Symmes; response was made by Mr. Cooney.

President Cooney introduced former Governor Edwin L. Norris of Great Falls, who invited the editors and their friends to attend the Golden Jubilee to be held there.

Hillings is the first in the field for the honor of entertaining the editors a year hence. Hillings' invitation was presented by E. W. Gail, managing editor of the Billings Gazette, and was supplemented by strong letters from Mayor Levens of that city and the Hillings Chamber of Commerce. Hillings seems to have the lead in the race over Miles City, whose invitation was extended in a telegram to the editors by Joseph Scanlan of that city. Mr. Scanlan suggested that if Miles City were not selected that Mammoth Hot Springs, Yellowstone National park, might be a very acceptable place to gather. Commodore J. B. Eaulds of Stevensville in an impromptu address entertainingly told of early days in Montana territory.

Tomorrow the scribbles will be taken for an extended automobile trip through the Judith basin. A fresco luncheon will be given the delegates at the Goodell farm at Philbrook. They will follow a visit to the state's agricultural experiment farm at Moscow, where the Judith farmers are holding their annual picnic.

CHICAGO HAS NEW EXPERIENCE COMING UP AND THERE'S TROUBLE AHEAD.

Chicago, July 23.—Max Nootbaar, police captain, sent into the old levee district after the battle a week ago in which one policeman was killed and three wounded, will center his fire on Frieberg's dance hall. It was announced today. This dance hall, the ownership of which is attributed to a leading politician of the ward, has run unimpeded through repeated police campaigns to close up the district.

Other campaigns have closed every cafe and saloon promptly at 1 o'clock, but Frieberg's name was never annoyed, although the doors never have closed until 4 o'clock in the morning.

Nootbaar notified all resort owners in the district that he would allow them 15 days in which to close their places.

The announcement by the police department that no shot had been fired in the battle of a week ago except those by policemen, was proven untrue tonight when a soft-pointed bullet was extracted from Detective McCall, who was injured in the gun fight.

The weapons used by the police shoot a steel-jacketed bullet.

AMERICA FLIES WELL WITH A HEAVY LOAD

Hampdenport, N. Y., July 23.—"America," the Rodman Wanaamaker flying boat, was flown by Glenn H. Curtiss tonight from Lake Keuka with a useful load of more than 2,700 pounds. This is nearly 200 pounds more than the estimated load required for the flight from Newfoundland to the Azores islands, and is said to be 400 pounds in excess of the world's record load carried by the giant Russian biplane built by Sikorsky. The third motor, just installed on the flying boat, chiefly as a lifting device, fulfilled its purpose admirably.

It is proposed to fly tomorrow before representatives of the Aero Club of America.

There seems to be no reason to doubt that the America will start on her transatlantic flight before August 10.

To Properly Treat Obsolete Wrinkles

Particularly where wrinkles are long and deep, the massage devotee is apt to rub too hard and too frequently. This loosens the skin, causes muscles to sag, aggravates the wrinkled condition—just the opposite result from that sought.

Better than massaging, or anything else, for the most obstinate wrinkles, as well as the finest lines, is a formula well known in England, which you may readily avail yourselves of, as you will have no difficulty procuring the inexpensive constituents from druggists in this country. It is this: One ounce powdered sorbitol, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Rub face, neck and hands in this.

The effect is really marvelous, not only as to wrinkles, but also in cases of hazy cheeks and chin. Marked improvement is noticed after the very first application. The lotion is cooling and soothing, tending to relieve fatigue and remove "that tired look."—Adv.

ATTORNEY GENERAL STARTS BIG SUIT

THE CASE AGAINST THE NEW HAVEN IS FILED IN NEW YORK FEDERAL COURT.

New York, July 23.—With the filing today of its civil suit to dissolve the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad system here, the department of justice cleared the way to press its request for indictments of New Haven officials and directors for alleged criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. Attorney General MacReynolds probably will be in New York tomorrow and is expected to confer with T. W. Gregory, his special assistant in the New Haven case, about the proposed grand jury proceedings.

No federal grand jury is now in session in New York and it was not revealed tonight whether the department will wait until the next jury meets only in August or summon a special grand jury for this case alone.

Mr. Gregory and E. M. Stuckler, former expert of the interstate commerce commission, who helped to investigate the New Haven for the department of justice, are expected to appear before the grand jury and present the evidence on which indictments will be asked.

The civil suit begun today against the New Haven charges that it is an unlawful monopoly in restraint of trade and asks the court to divest the New Haven of its holdings in the Boston and Maine railroad, the old Boston and Maine railroad, its sound and outside steamship lines, its wharves and docks in New England, and other properties which the brief says were acquired to make paramount its grasp on New England's transportation. The bill is sweeping in character and if sustained by the courts, the New Haven may be separated from so many of its subsidiaries that it will have little left but its lines from New York to Boston.

The New Haven directors refused to discuss the suit now. They have 20 days in which to file an answer.

The New Haven, the complaint declares, resorted to many elusive and roundabout methods to cover its tracks in perfecting its combination; it acquired properties, got stock control, impoverished competitors and bought them in, and resorted to many illegal practices to attain its end.

"In accomplishing these results," it says, "elusive, complicated and indirect methods have been resorted to in order to conceal the real character of the transactions involved, to destroy the identity of the lines acquired and render their assets and physical properties indistinguishable. Corporations of many states have been organized or purchased and used as subsidiaries, among which the properties acquired have been distributed and re-distributed in various combinations.

"One of the purposes in resorting to this complicated system has been to entrench the New Haven company in its monopolies and to make it impracticable for the government to apply specific remedies and restore original conditions. Nevertheless, the control of all properties constituting these monopolies today is vested in either the New Haven company or in some of the other defendants, or in corporations controlled by it, or individuals acting in its behalf."

TRAIN ROBBED.
