Caught on the Run About Town

Is this the fruit the countries have borne for struggling man? Is bloody war the heritage that spans all the lives that span the aching years since first the Beast looked up and saw the light? (The world still clings to bestial things, still owns that might is right.) Have Christ and Plato preached in vain? Have brave men died for naught? Have teachers fought and died for faith and left men thus untaught? Ah, we are blind, we are, for the things, sheep born in mainly guided who have the truth where all may see, but cannot use our eyes. How many millions curse tonight, this dread, ungodly war, get turn tomorrow to the fight their very souls abhor. Ten thousand hearts re-echoing a pontiff's dying moan, will go to battle ere the night for causes not their own, (nor any man's save those who live in greed and lust and hate) will slay their brothers knowingly—and lay the blame on Fate. We are a helpless, aimless brood who pray that war may cease and then turn out for battle when a word would bring us peace.

Were the belief that war is useless, fatal to the best efforts of the race, limited to a few? The European struggle would not seem strange, but when one considers that nine in ten of the men now marching into that hell, hold war a horrible insanity, it is hard to understand the situation. Everywhere yesterday one heard echoes of the dying words of Pope Pius and undoubtedly they were spoken more freely in the Catholic nations of Europe. Not the men most horrified at the war will be shouldering guns this morning, but they will be going to kill men just like themselves, and as unwilling to do murder. It is an inexplicable anomaly.

Speaking of war, the baseball situation is commanding as much attention as anything but war can get nowadays.

STATE LEAGUE

Local fans are commencing to discuss with interest the prospects for next year. With the Union association gone where the old Inter-mountain circuit rears, Missoula fans are talking hopefully of a state league in 1915. This talk can be heard in almost every other city of the state. The sentiment is unanimous, seemingly, and needs only the crystallizing that will follow definite action of some sort by the fans of prominence in almost any city. This summer Missoula has had all it wants of baseball. Some sort of baseball will be loudly demanded next year. So it is with Great Falls and Billings and Lewistown. Now that Butte and Helena are footloose they should be with their sister cities, unless nauseated by the Union association trouble to the extent of dissent toward all baseball, these towns ought to welcome a state league. Action of some sort or other should be taken before snow flies. Who is going to start it?

John Teasdale has always been a firm believer in advertising. He has learned its value by experience and has developed into a splendid advertiser for Missoula and his business and incidentally quite incidentally himself. But he is doubtful if John ever fully appreciated the potency of advertising until he went to Helena to attend the Bliss convention. A year ago when he went to the Kalispell convention John was great fun by selling family-wrapped ball-bats of Ivory soap as "Miraculous 'Clashes' Cleaner." He took the Bliss quartet and a few soloists to the street corner with him and they began a "comical" spiel. The group was well within half an hour to open-mouthed members of a crowd that blocked all traffic. "This year John decided to try the same gag" in Helena. He drew his crowd all right and the singers made a great hit, but when the spiel began, the crowd laughed and wouldn't buy. John pleaded until he wept, but the Bliss swears they were wise and scorned his soap. After an hour John gave up in despair. In return for the $10 worth of soap he had cut and wrapped the hat to the tune of $1.75 and bundles of the folk in the Bliss delegation brought to the convention. It was a moment of despair, but it showed a sturdy apostle of advertising that his belief was not half true enough. John's next gag will be new, that's a cinch.

GOVERNMENT PLANS BIG MOVIE SHOW AT FRISCO

HEAD OF PHOTOGRAPHIC DEPARTMENT VISITS MISSOULA ON A FIELD TRIP. "It appears to me as if the Panama exhibition is going to be resolved into a great motion picture show," said Winfield Scott Cline of Washington, D. C., who arrived here yesterday and met with District Forester E. A. Silcox. Mr. Cline is in charge of the photographic laboratory of the department of agriculture of the United States government. This is "some department," as Mr. Cline admits, and yet the title is none too long or complicated to represent the work which it covers. The various branches of the department of agriculture of the government cover almost every field of human endeavor and it is Mr. Cline's business to preserve the graphic side of the work in photographic and motion-picture form to assist in the general educational work which is being carried on and developed on a wonderful scale.

A Year's Work. For the past year Mr. Cline has devoted most of his efforts to preparing for the government a great series of motion pictures which is to be put before the people at the fair this great work of the government. "We realize that the American public of this age has some wild over motion pictures," said Mr. Cline, "and thought it best to take advantage of this constantly increasing demand for graphic presentation of facts and fiction in making a new and novel exhibit at the fair. For more than a year there have been two men besides myself in the field, grinding out pictures of everything under the sun. We have not attempted to favor these pictures with sensationalism, although many times our films have unexpectedly entered this class. What we are after are scenes and conditions as they actually exist. The scenes are securing in a way that is surprisingly successful.

Forestry Pictures. "No other line of our work, perhaps, has been so forestry as that of showing the forest-service organization at work. This has been my specialty for some months. If those who view these films have their eyes opened as mine have been to the real conditions throughout the west in the administration of the national forests, this part of the work, at least, will not have been in vain."

Like a Storybook. Mr. Cline has had a wonderful experience on his western trip. To hear him tell of some of his trips and the things he has included in the subjects taken, is like reading a book of wonderful travel and adventure. Some of his latest work has been in getting films of forest fires.

Disappointed. It is somewhat of a disappointment to local forest officials that Mr. Cline will be unable to do any work in this immediate district. The forest organization is so completely devoted to the forest-fire work, that now that an ordinary and regular work has been abandoned. For this reason no attempt will be made to get pictures of forestry activities in Montana, at least during this visit of the movie man.

BUTTE'S COUNCIL PROTECTS COFFERS

Butte Aug. 20.—The city council took action last night to protect its legal rights in securing Butte against loss of its funds through the closing of the State Savings bank. A resolution was introduced by Alderman Obermeyer, which had been drawn by the legal department, notifying the boardman of City Treasurer Shovelby that the necessary demand for the city funds amounting to $93,158.28, which were on deposit in the bank, had been made and that the funds had not been forthcoming. The necessary notice was ordered served on Ed Hickey and Charles R. Leonard in the matter. Mr. Hickey is on the bond of the city treasurer for $100,000 and Mr. Leonard for $50,000. Acting Mayor Smith stated after the council meeting that the city's action was taken as a necessary legal precaution. He was of the opinion that the bank will pay in full all claims, eventually, and that at least 80 per cent of the claims will be paid within a short time. This would, perhaps, make it necessary for Messrs. Hickey and Leonard to personally put up $15,000 to cover the deferred amount that will be due the city after 80 per cent of the claim is paid.

EXCHANGE IN BUTTE IS OPENED, NO SALES

BUTTE, Aug. 20. (Special).—The Butte mining stock exchange opened this forenoon after having been closed for two weeks, in consequence of the demoralization effecting the various exchanges. Bid prices and those asked were so wide apart that not a sale was made during the session. Butte and Superior, which closed at $25 when the exchanges suspended, July 30, was bid for at $25 and $35 asked. Bullwhacker was bid at 7c, with 15c asked.

SETTLEMENT NEAR IN AMADOR CASE

Court Decrees Award Largest Judgment in History of County Cases — Chicago Attorney Says Stockholders Are All United Now and May Reopen Well-Known Mine. The bonds and interest now amount to $257,312.46. In addition to this judgment the court decree includes an order of sale of the property. While the defendant appeared by answer in the case it failed to appear at the trial and judgment was secured by default.

Second Case. The other case is that of Henry E. Brundt and others, being the minority stockholders, against the Amador Consolidated Mining and Development company. In this action the plaintiffs claimed mismanagement and reckless expenditure of money on the part of the board of directors of the company and asked for an accounting and an order of sale of the property. Both prayers were granted in the decree.

D. E. McKinnon. By all who knew him in his efforts to organize and develop the Amador companies, D. E. McKinnon was counted one of the most skillful promoters who ever operated in the west. With a pocket full of photographs and some samples of rock he went east and sold stock amounting to many thousands of dollars. Then he brought stockholders and prospective investors in special trains to Montana and took them to the mine, and by some magic of his personality, backed by what he could offer as evidence, convinced them all that the Amador was one of the greatest properties in the world. Later, when his troubles commenced, Mr. McKinnon was rarely spoken of as having been intentionally dishonest. None believed that he had appropriated the vast sums he raised to his own personal use. He was rather looked upon as a dreamer, of over-enthusiasm. In his belief that there were millions in his mine, allowing this enthusiasm to overbalance his judgment in the way he expended the stockholders' money. As will be remembered, he was almost frenzied with the idea of putting the property in shape so it could be listed on the Boston stock exchange. That he directed development to this end rather than to determining the real extent and richness of the mineral deposit, is claimed by the stockholders.

Will Reorganize. "Yes, the stockholders expect to reorganize the Amador affairs," said Attorney Bradley when questioned by a reporter. "Once the stockholders were divided; now they are united and hope to work out a solution of the company's tangled affairs. Confidence in the property itself has not been destroyed. When affairs get in such shape that they can go ahead, the stockholders expect to proceed with the development of the property. They are willing to spend enough money to fully determine what they have. If it proves to be a real mine there is no question but what arrangements will be made to proceed with the work upon a proper scale. This will all be determined after the mine

The amount of the judgment is more than $200,000. Many Missoula people remember D. E. McKinnon, who seven or eight years ago, took hold of the Amador mining prospect near Iron Mountain, and who, in a couple of years, conducted development work and builded a mine of about $700,000. Then trouble started among the stockholders, shareholders and bondholders, and the property was closed down. Suits were instituted, receivers were appointed—and the promoter disappeared from the ken of all but some of his personal friends and agents.

What Records Show. The court records now show one judgment against a portion of the property for more than $200,000 and another for an accounting and an order of sale of the property. This virtually puts the property in the hands of the stockholders. When the trouble first started they were divided and fighting among themselves. Now, according to the statement made today by Attorney H. E. Bradley of Chicago, who is associated with Woody & Woody of Missoula in handling the interests of the stockholders, they are all united and hope to work out their own salvation.

The big actions date back to 1903. The first, in which the big judgment has been secured, appears under the title of the Metropolitan Trust and Savings bank of Chicago against the Amador Railway company. This defendant built nine miles of railroad, extending from the Northern Pacific line to the mine, as well as other surface improvements of the property. After this company was organized, bonds were issued and the Metropolitan bank was made trustee for the bondholders, a deed of trust to the property being deposited with the bank. Interest on the bonds was paid for some time and then default was made and the bank brought suit.
