Prussian militarism last year imprisoned Liebknecht, but listens now to speeches in the reichstag far more revolutionary than the utterances for which the Socialist leader lies in jail. The chancellor promises reforms and the kaiser says that for kingship by divine right to share power with vox populi, vox Dei, is near his heart, and intimates that it may be a new revelation of the will of God. But it may be the handwriting on the walls of the palace.

Christianity has been challenged by the world tragedy, but through it the people have found their souls.

The Wonderful Russian Procession.

I have seen historic pageants and processions. The most wonderful and significant of them all was at the close of the civil war when the union army marched past the president and Grant and Sherman and Sheridan at Washington, the Union saved, to be mustered out and return to their homes and peaceful pursuits as citizens.

The celebration of the fiftieth year, and the diamond jubilee of the reign of Queen Victoria were tributes by land and sea to her as a sovereign and woman, and the wonderful progress in popular government, in the arts and sciences, and in the expansion and development of the empire during her reign.

But more remarkable, and equally significant is that wonderful Russian procession from savage settlements beyond the Arctic circle, from prisons and convict camps, from mines and solitary huts, of men and women, of boys and girls, on sledges, and on foot, hurrying through the snows and biting cold of Siberia to home and freedom. The martyrs of liberty suddenly released from bondage and torture by the people's government as suddenly organized and victorious. The pomp and splendor, the brilliant uniforms, the inspiring music of other pageants are not here. They are clothed in rags, they are partly naked, they are unwashed and unkempt. Many have been condemned by court martial, more by police edict without trial, all by ruthless tyranny for daring to speak of liberty or suspected of thinking of liberty. A freed people overnight without passion or bloodshed firmly plant their own government upon the crumbling ruins of a thousand years of oppression. Old autocratic Russia has found her soul.

A Distinction to Be an American.

It was always a privilege to be an American citizen; now it is a distinction. The autocrat and the war lord declare war on short notice, and then call on their subjects to fight. Democracies go into war on the deliberate judgment of the people after every effort for peace has failed. The emperor of Austria gave Serbia 12 hours, and then began hostilities. The emperor of Germany limited Russia, France and Belgium to a few days. The United States waited and endured, suffered and protested for two years and a half, until Christian patience could no longer be justified and righteous wrath no longer restrained. We enter the war to protect our fundamental rights and liberties, and to win peace upon a basis so sure and permanent that people can live their lives and enjoy their liberties unmolested in this world. It is a war for freedom and humanity. When peace comes with victory, if there are questions of territories, we want none; if indemnities are demanded, we will not share. It is a glorious result that the English-speaking peoples of the world are of one faith and fighting for common ideals. Americans, English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh, Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders and South Africans are united to end forever the doctrine that might makes right. All English-speaking people have a common heritage in Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights, and the results of the revolutions which have democratized the institutions of Great Britain. But we Americans have contributed immortal principles of liberty in which they all equally share. In the cabin of the Mayflower a little band adopted, and now most of the world acclaim, "a government of just and equal laws." One hundred and fifty-six years of the development and practice of this idea produced the immortal Declaration of Independence, "that all men are created equal, that they are endowed, by their Creator, with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." After seven years of war had gained us our independence, the Republic was built on this foundation: "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

prove the education and training of the rising generation. The schools will be more practical in fitting the boys and girls for their vocations in life. God and country will be so instilled in their minds and hearts that their vision and ideals will be to protect and improve the government which is wholly theirs. Our government has not kept step with the necessities of our growth and expansion. While our foreign trade and the markets required by our increasing production have been created or enlarged by adventurous Americans, they have been denied protection, and informed by the authorities that they ought to have stayed at home. The shackles of provincialism are broken, and the American who is in foreign lands the agent of our prosperity will have behind him in his rights the power and prestige of his country and his flag.

The dominant sentiment of the world will be for peace, peace maintained by democratic nations working together to keep and enforce it. President Wilson has stated the position and purpose of the United States in an address to congress and the country worthy of the best traditions of American statesmanship. In the inspiration of the hour all differences, racial, national or political, have disappeared, and our whole people are for justice, liberty and humanity. The tragedies of this war are frightful, but as the Divine purpose is revealed we reverently see how great and yet how light the cost for a redeemed world.

TO COMPREHEND
AT FIRST

(From the Indianapolis News.)

It is always a difficult thing to begin at the beginning, and the small group of women who had come together to be advised as to how they could fit themselves to be of service to their country were a bit disappointed when they found that they were to begin with a lesson on house-keeping. It was, to be sure, a very sensible idea, but it is almost as difficult to be sensible as it is to begin at beginnings. They had heard that the women of other countries had done tremendous things.

They had heard that the women of England had saved England from defeat, and that the women of France had saved France from destruction. There was in the mind of each woman in the group the image of some particular woman who had accomplished some particular bit of heroism. One was haunted by the picture of a French woman leading a shambling farm horse with a wounded soldier on his back. She was carrying the soldier's weapons and helmet and striding along with fine bravery. Another remembered the stories she had heard of a nurse who had traveled through barbarous lands to help soldiers of all nations. Somebody spoke of a woman in a factory who worked all day on an immense crane and declared she was never tired. And there were, besides, all the women who worked in fields and hospitals.

To be sure, there was no great regret that our country was not in need of services of such heroic nature, but it was a bit of a let-down to have to begin by looking at a germ through a microscope instead of really doing something or making something. It seemed as though keeping a germ out of the refrigerator had little enough to do with keeping Germany and its wars out of the country. It seemed, moreover, a strange and far away thing to be doing—just sitting there looking at bacteria, when bands were playing in the street below and crowds were making way for an occasional khaki-

Some folks would have you believe that they have discovered some marvelous combination that will restore the color to gray, streaked or faded hair, without staining it. No such preparation has ever been discovered. There is only one preparation so far as we know that is entirely free from sulphur, lead, silver, mercury, zinc, aniline, coal tar products or their derivatives. That preparation is called "Brownatone." It is so easy and safe to apply that the wonder is that any one ever uses anything else. "Brownatone" instantly tints the hair to any shade of brown (or black) that may be desired. If the gray shows on your temples or is streaking your hair—if the ends of your hair are lighter than the balance, or if for any reason you wish to stain all or part of your hair—use "Brownatone." A sample and a booklet will be sent you (from manufacturers only) upon receipt of 10c. Mention shade desired. All of the leading drug stores sell "Brownatone." Two sizes, 25c and $1.
