

Notice.

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE, HELENA, M. T., August 17, 1886. To Mine Owners and Mining Attorneys: In notices for application of patent you will in all cases make agreement to publish with the newspaper published nearest to the land geographically measured. This instruction must be fully complied with, else new publication will be ordered.

RIGHT-OF-WAY LAWS.

For the information of the property holders on the line of the Philipsburg & Drummond railway. We give below the territorial law relating to the condemnation of lands affected by its right of way. We are disposed to believe that every effort will be made by the railroad officials to adjust harmoniously all differences arising from a settlement of the prices of lands traversed by the road. The Philipsburg & Drummond railroad is a Montana chartered corporation, organized as well under the laws of the United States relating to the incorporation of railroads for general traffic purposes, and as such enjoys all the rights of eminent domain applying to an incorporation operated for public uses and purposes. Section 307, of the Revised Statutes of Montana, reads as follows:

That for the purpose of securing private lands and premises on the line of such road within this territory which may be necessary and proper for the construction thereof, such corporation be and is hereby empowered to enter upon, purchase, take and hold any lands and premises that may be necessary for the construction and working of said road, not exceeding in width one hundred feet on each side of its center line, unless a greater width be required for the purpose of excavation or embankment; and also any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for turnouts, standing places for cars, depots, station-houses, or any other structures, required in the construction and operation of said road; and such corporation shall have the right to cut and remove trees or other material that might, by falling, encumber its road-bed, though standing or being more than one hundred feet therefrom; and in case the owner or claimant of such lands or premises and such corporation cannot agree as to the damages, the amount shall be determined by the appraisal of three disinterested commissioners, who may be appointed upon application by any party to any district court or judge thereof, in any of the judicial districts in which the lands or premises to be taken lie; and said commissioners in their assessments of damages shall assume the value of the road had not been built; and upon the return into court of said appraisal, and upon the payment to the clerk thereof the amount so awarded by the commissioners for the use and benefit of the owner thereof, said premises shall be deemed to be taken by said corporation, which shall thereupon acquire full title to the same for the purposes aforesaid; and either party feeling aggrieved by said assessment may, within thirty days, file an appeal therefrom, and demand a jury of twelve men to estimate the damage sustained; but such appeal shall not interfere with the rights of said corporation to enter upon the premises taken, or to do any act necessary in the construction of its road; and said party appealing shall give bonds, with sufficient surety or sureties, for the payment of any costs that may arise upon such appeal, to the district court; and in case the party appealing does not obtain a more favorable verdict, such party shall pay the whole cost incurred by the appellee as well as its own; and if said corporation shall have tendered to the claimant before the commencement of proceedings to ascertain the damage, a sum equal to what said claimant shall finally recover, and upon the appeal before trial shall file with the clerk of said court an offer to confess judgment for that sum, the claimant shall pay the costs.

OUR GRAVEST FEARS.

"But 'cheek' is like iron That's coated with tin; It has a nice face But one rather thin."

From the fact that our mining editor has but recently returned from a rather extended visit to the Silver City and that his arrival home is simultaneous with that of "How She Felt in Her First Corset," we are inclined to view the above verse in the light of invidious personal mention, the application of which is so unmistakably evident as to excite our gravest fears of Bro. Alderson's safety should he come within reach of our irascible assistant's jaw.

AN END TO IT.

It is hardly within the province of a respectable journalist to notice the idle vapors and venomous outpouring of the nondescript class who so largely represent the questionable editorial talent observable in such back-alley publications as the St. Louis ..., a disreputable sheet either entirely devoted to a slavish and obsequious homage of a few wealthy parvenues or given up to a vulgar and offensive personal warfare upon those who have accidentally stepped upon its filthy trail. With an impudent familiarity, born of the gutter, the buzzard who assists in the degradation of the above nameless journal seeks to give it some reputation and notoriety through a wordy controversy with the MAIL, and to that end crawls away from his loathsome food and disgorges upon the few within reach a mass of disgusting vituperative abuses that would defile and impurify the noisome slums and poisonous atmospheres where he was born, and out of which he was thrust by less depraved associates. In the zeal of this carrion bird to invite our attention he encloses us, in single wrappers, duplicate copies of his beastly sheet with sundry articles therein conspicuously bracketed out in blue pencil. We are charged in these with being the employe of a mining company, an inebriate, and a recipient of sundry courtesies extended upon the toe of a boot worn by one John W. Plummer, presently the general manager of the Granite company. Of the first two charges, they are not only too grossly untrue to be worthy of notice, but safer uttered out of the Territory than in it. As to the last, the distinguished gentleman alluded to has too high a regard for his own personal welfare to tamper in any such manner with the person of one capable of defending himself. In conclusion, we shall strictly avoid in the future further reference to, or mention of, anything appearing in its columns, and will upon its appearance on our table, consign hastily to the waste basket this debauched offspring of that immortal genius who will go tumbling down the ages as "the last discoverer."

The Northwest Tribune, of Stevensville, has made its appearance. It is published by Hoss Bros, Nat Y. in the editorial chair. The Tribune's handsome typographical appearance tells us at once that our friend Lon is at the head of that department. With such competent men at its head the Tribune cannot fail to succeed.

BOWRING'S ART SCHOOL.

The Pupils and Their Advancement in the Study of Art.

Among the many thriving institutions of Philipsburg is Bowring's Art School. Some ask, "Who, in a mining camp, has a love for the fine arts?"

Who has lived in this wide territory of ours, this land of beautiful valleys and grand, lofty mountains, where ten thousand silvery streams wash down their sands of gold, without developing a love for nature and her wonderful works? And whoever admires the beautiful things, in nature loves art.

The love of art elevates the mind, expands the noblest faculties, and teaches us to observe; therefore, surely, it should be encouraged and cultivated in every city, town, hamlet, school and household.

Philipsburg's art school is under the careful management of Mr. C. K. Bowring, who is no amateur at the business, but, on the contrary, is a thorough instructor and gifted artist of over twenty years' experience. Instruction is given in all branches of drawing and painting, from the simple lines, elements of designing and sketching, through all the higher divisions of figure, landscape, flower and portrait painting, artistic anatomy, execution of original designs, natural and ideal, and many selections from the masters.

The most advanced of his pupils are Mr. E. E. Kinney, Miss Mary McDonel, Miss Emile Irving, Walter Kroger and Miss Elva Tolman.

Mr. Kinney is taking pen, pencil, charcoal and crayon work with the view of teaching drawing in the public school. He says that he thinks Mr. Bowring's method far superior to any that he has ever seen in use in the public schools. The method is to teach shading from the beginning, instead of working on, month after month, with nothing but grim outlines to show for such work. A few months ago he began drawing parts of the human frame, and his first efforts were very crude; but, with his characteristic energy, he toiled on, until now his beautiful specimens, among which are Washington's portrait, the Farmer Boy, and some drawings from still life, show what wonderful results he has accomplished in so short a time. He will soon have completed a life-size portrait of himself.

Miss McDonel is doing finely. By her natural taste and the deep interest she has taken, her progress has been most remarkable. She is now painting a life-size portrait of Clara, her pretty little sister. In this portrait she is bringing out the expression in a masterly manner. When finished it will be something that her many friends may be justly proud of.

Miss Irving is adding to her many accomplishments those of drawing and painting. Her marvelous progress shows that she is highly gifted. The "Old Mill" which she has executed in oil is quite unique. The misty, dreamy silence has been wrought with such skill that the moss-covered mill has all the effect of an exquisite poem. Her works will some day be very valuable.

Master Kroger, who is a lad of fourteen, bids fair to become an artist. It is hardly credible that a boy of his age can do such good work. Mr. Bowring and his parents are very proud of his advancement.

Just Arrived.

Just received a full line of the noblest hats ever opened in the Burg, and my stock of gentlemen's white and colored shirts will please the most fastidious. In short my stock is becoming more complete each day, and will soon consist of dry goods, boots, shoes, hats, caps, house furnishing goods, clothing, and last but not least, wall paper in the latest patterns and designs. Respectfully, WM. WEINSTEIN.

Arrival of New Stock of Hats.

Mrs. McDonel wishes to announce that she has just received a second large and varied assortment of the finest ladies' hats from the east. They are of the very latest styles. Ladies should avail themselves of the opportunity before her stock is exhausted. Call early and get your choice.
