Indian Chief Tow Doy, with a few of his Bannack Indians, is now in Butte, with a permit for an absence of thirty days and a recommendation from Agent Needham to be permitted to trade in furs without a license. The day after his arrival in town he asked the assistance of the law for two of his followers who got drunk and whom he wanted to have arrested before they got into trouble. He also helped the officers find the seller of the furs, who proved to be a tough character known as Hog Joe, and will probably serve a term in the penitentiary for the offense.

The ninth anniversary of the Miners' Union was celebrated most auspiciously in Butte, last Monday, by a street parade of great magnitude, followed by speeches at their hall by President Barker, Rev. W. E. King, W. J. Penrose and J. M. O'Neil. A grand ball was given in the evening. A feature of the occasion was that of the procession's going to the Blue Bird mine, the only one where a holiday had not been given in honor of the day, and while there persuading the Italian miners to quit work and join in the festivities. Twenty-five were afterwards initiated into the union.

It was the lady who thought she was going to swoon who had a faint suspicion.
