SCHOOL NEWS

Rueben Morris entered the eleventh grade in the high school Monday.
Verni Vaupel entered the eighth grade Monday.
A new pupil entered Miss Chambers' room sometime last week.
The entire school has just received the year's supply of drawing paper.

One afternoon last week Prof. Ballinger called the members of the high school together for organization. The students decided that the best thing to do would be to elect one member of the sophomore class as president and one from the freshman class as vice president, accordingly Andrew Tweedie was elected president and Alberta Rader as vice president. After the election of officers it was decided that we would like more pupils for the high school, and as there are several young people in the city who could attend school as well as not, a committee consisting of Marie Cox and Hazel Sperry was appointed by the president a few days later to interview them upon the subject of entering school.

It was also decided that the president appoint at the same time a committee of three for the purpose of forming resolutions for the control of the organization.
Reuben Morris, Alfred McCoy and Donald McCoy were the ones appointed.

One purpose of the organization is to hold at least three meetings during the year of a literary character.

SCHOOL EDITOR.

Judge Davidson made a business trip to Glasgow Tuesday.

Edw. White, as delegate from the Malta lodge is attending the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias held at Lewistown this week.

AN INTERESTING TRIP TO ITALY

The next morning people through the cathedral to witness the high mass and festival service.

The paintings of the masters, in St. Mark's Cathedral are set in panels and arches on the outside of the cathedral, as well as on the inside and are resplendent in color.

Saint Mark's square is noted for the palace of the Doges, or governors of Venice; also for the king's royal palaces. The military band plays here every evening and the people sit around at little tables enjoying refreshments. Flocks of doves are fed at noon in this square.

The palace of the Doges contains magnificent statuary and paintings. At the end of the Grand Audience Chamber is the painting "Paradise" by Tintoretto. The guide will show you the inquisition room in which those who opposed wrongs to the people were summoned for trial, condemned by masked men, and sent to prison over the Bridge of Sighs. There are whole rows of ancient palaces to be seen on the Grand canal. The poet Browning lived in one of them, but most of them are now used as hotels. Some of the houses on the canals are bound together by clamps of iron showing that the foundations are slowly giving way, no doubt from the action of the water upon them as well as from age. A fine monument of Victor Emmanuel II has been erected on the wharf in front of the Hotel D'Angleterre.

Most of the valuable paintings and statuary are to be found in the churches, but the Academy of Fine Arts contains many of excellence.

There are five schools in which 200 girls are taught lace making. A Burano Bertha collar of 39 inches takes a girl one whole year to make. It is all done by hand with threads as fine as a spider's web. A Rosaline Point Bertha collar 80 inches takes a girl 3 years to make, and costs $160. The girl gets paid about 20 cents a day for her labor.

Thousands of chandeliers made in the glass works are sent to the U. S every year.

The girls of Venice have fine heads of hair; perhaps the absence of hats may account for this. They wear black silk shawls with deep fringes and nothing on their heads of finely dressed black hair.

From Venice to Milan is one of the most delightful trips one can take in Italy by rail. Milan is the Pittsburg of Italy, being a great manufacturing city.

A building perhaps unequalled in Europe in its way is the Galleria Vittorio Emanuele. It is lighted by 1200 jets of gas, and contains 96 magnificent shops full of all manner of luxuries; sparkling ornaments, rich carpets, statues and pictures. Everything combines to make the Galleria the center of brilliant public life.

One of the most fascinating things to be seen in Milan is the Colonne di San Lorenzo, sixteen Corinthian columns of wonderful beauty which belonged to some Roman Thermae and are mentioned in the poems of Anonius. Then the great Milan cathedral, begun in 1386 by Gian Galeazzo Visconti, which took centuries for its completion, is one of the wonders of the city. I have not time and space to describe its wonderful beauty.

The fame of Santa Maria delle Grazie rests chiefly in the possession of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper," which is not in the church itself but in the refectory of the convent belonging to it.

The high ambition of actors and singers is the Scala in Milan. Whoever has won laurels here, is welcome on any foreign stage. It is the finest opera house in Italy and is the second largest theatre in Europe.

The largest industry in Milan is the silk manufacture. It is also noted for its electrical supplies, and was the first town in Italy to be lighted with electricity and to operate electric railways.

Milan is the gateway by which tourists from the south enter the celebrated Italian Lakes region, a land where sublimity and loveliness of nature meet, for on all sides the placid lakes are framed in wild Alpine scenery. The principal lakes are Maggiore, Como and Lugano. The boatmen entertain you with many beautiful traditions concerning these lakes.

Florence, almost entirely surrounded by its blue hills, is the art capital of Italy. The lily is the emblem of Florence, because it is said, a field of lilies was mown down to build the city. Florence is a mixture of fine modern buildings, broad streets, and narrow winding streets of gloomy old palaces or apartments with tiny, dark shops beneath them, and old squares where every stone could tell of memorable events.

In the modern section of the city English is universally spoken and there are English churches, libraries, and typical tea houses.

The Vecchio Bridge, celebrated in Florentine history is one of the most enchanting sights on the river Arno. Casimo I built it to connect his two palaces on either side of the river, with a passage. Now it has been for ever so long filled with the shops and tempting displays of jewelers and goldsmiths. Above is still the passage designed by Casimo, and in the center an open arch arcade gives lovely views over the river.

The Piazz della Signoria is the most interesting quarter of Florence. Florence also has its Duomo or Cathedral, almost as beautiful as St. Peter's in Rome.

In the old convent of San Marco, one sees many celebrated paintings, among which are "Crucifixion" and Ghirlandajo's "Last Supper." The Belle Arti gallery is one to be visited many times and contains many examples of early Tuscan art, down to a collection of works by modern artists.

Another old fortress-like building, filled with art treasures is the fascinating Bargello.

There are statues in marble and bronze by Martin Angelo, Cellini, Giambologna, and many others.

Besides the art galleries of the Pitti Palace, there are the royal apartments, visible at certain hours, and collections of silver and porcelains. Adjoining the palace are the beautiful Bobolli gardens, very extensive, and to which the public is welcome on certain days.

The chief object of interest in the church of San Michele is the magnificent altar, while San Lorenzo on the same square contains thousands of old manuscripts, early editions of Virgil and Dante, and other ancient papers.

The church of Santa Croce, the Westminster Abbey of Florence, contains the tombs of Michael Angelo and Galileo, beautiful stained glass windows, paintings by many early

WEEKLY LIVE STOCK REPORT

(Specially prepared by Clay, Robinson & Co.)

Chicago Union Stock Yards, Oct. 11.—As the season advances evidence is gathering that there is a paucity of good, fat corn-fed heaves in the corn belt and that buyers, more than usual, will have to rely upon western range cattle to fill the bulk of their trade wants. And in all likelihood this condition will continue a market feature for the next sixty days at least, as far as local dressed beef men and eastern shippers are concerned. Should there be a revival in the export demand, then the competition would be that much keener.

NEW HIGH PRICE FOR CATTLE

A new high price on the Chicago market has been paid for rangers, a lot of prime dehorned Montanas of 1,491 lbs. average reaching record price of $7.50 last week, while fancy matured corn-fed heaves made $8.80. Owing to the promising conditions ahead, we believe that it will be very profitable to hold back steers lacking desirable flesh as long as they can be held together without meeting up with storms. At the same time keep the fat stock coming to market.

Receipts of range cattle last week totaled 21,000, against 27,500 the previous week. Marketing for the season to date 185,200, against 206,700 the same period of 1908. Active trading was the rule on most days and prices advanced 25c. Bulk of steers sold at $4.00 to 5.00. Cows and heifers went 10 to 15c higher for the week with selling in main at $3.00 to 4.50. Stockers and feeders advanced 15 to 25c, with the demand exceeding the supply.

SHEEP MARKET SLUMPS BADLY

Excessive supplies last week bro't about a decline of 15 to 25c for western range sheep and lambs last week. However, there was good demand at the lower pride range. Old toothless ewes in thin condition were a drag on the market at the lowest prices of the season. Bulk of lambs went at $6.85 to 7.20, most yearlings at $5.25 to 5.50 and sheep largely at $4.00 to 4.60. While feeder sheep and yearlings went 10 to 25c lower, lambs held steady. Most sheep sold at $3.75 to 4.40, yearlings largely at $5.25 to 5.35 and lambs in main at $6.50 to 6.65. Breeding ewes quotable at $4.50 to 6.50, with demand good.

COWAN NEWS

Mrs. L. W. Mead and Mrs. E. C. Mead visited Malta Monday, and the latter expects to remain for some time, the guest of Mrs. J. F. Murray.

Charles Mead was called to Malta Monday as a witness on the Cole trial.

Harold Cowan and Oliver Moore were the only pupils in the school who pulled the roll of honor plum last week.

We should like to know what has become of the proposed new bridge over the Cottonwood at this place.

The school board decided to fence the school premises, build a shed and erect a flag.

Edward Loos appeared here a few days ago after an absence of fifteen months, the same genial Ed, as before.
