To the Editor of The Dallas Herald:

Much has appeared of late in your paper about street improvements. Not wishing to approve or condemn in the dark, we, a few taxpayers of Dallas, would like for the Secretary of the City Council to publish a full and clear abstract of the contract and amount being expended in ruining Commerce street and the ground north of it to fill up gullies, ravines and ponds in and adjoining Main street. Tell us plainly who pays for filling these sunken lots near the market. Does the city pay for filling up worthless ground belonging to private citizens? If not, say so, and stop the smothered complaint, soon to burst forth in public indignation. If yes, say so, and confess a degree of wrong sufficient to damn any administration of public funds.

Why dig down and ruin Commerce street and valuable property on its south side, after it had already been graded so as to attract general admiration? Why spend thousands of dollars to actually make a street of Main through its gulches, while a mere trifle would make Elm a most beautiful central thoroughfare? Why refuse to open a single cross street for a mile and a quarter through the town? Why? Not a cross street opened for travel from the Episcopal church east to the corporate line, beyond the new and beautiful residence of General Noah Newman, whose enterprise and public spirit alone demand a better fate. If the Secretary will not respond, we appeal to Aldermen Young, Lane, Greer, Scales, Owens, Sterrett, and others, to come out before the public and explain to us, a part of the taxpayers, why is this thusly.

We stand, gentlemen, with heads uncovered, to hear your response. Speak slowly, so that we may understand. A FEW TAXPAYERS.
