

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

A Two Hours' Lounge in the President's Private Office.

Washington Cor. Philadelphia Times. I took a seat in the office of Mr. Brown, the private secretary to President Garfield, the other day, and there I remained for about two hours. It was interesting to watch the goings-on there. The halls, corridors and stairways clear down the front door were crowded with people. With what eager eyes they watched congressmen, newspaper correspondents and other disreputable persons who had the right of way, pass doorkeepers and messengers! The appearance of all these watchers and waiters were rather disheartening. Most of them were anxious-looking and many of them were nearly beyond a doubt. I did not notice one who did not seem to have taken some extra pains with his clothing and person that morning. Some were those whose clothes were good, but the majority were rather meagerly clad and some were absolutely shabby and ragged. There was not a well-dressed gentleman, with an air of prosperity about him, in the whole crowd. It was indeed easy to see that they were all, with perhaps here and there an exception, office-hunters. They scanned earnestly every new face that appeared, as though they expected some sudden assistance to come to them, and when they made up their minds that the newcomer was simply of the same class as themselves the tired look came over the faces of some, that anxious look over the faces of others, while others still bore a resentful expression. It was really rather a sad spectacle, for in all that crowd numbering, I would say, more than one hundred persons, there was not an independent one among them—not one but whose face was full of troubles. Who else would wait all day in an ante-room, with certain disappointment at its close? For of all those thus waiting and watching probably not one will get what he wants. Some will finally, after days of waiting, get a chance to say a word to the President, who can do no more than to receive their papers and promise to place them on file or refer them to the proper department. Others will get weary with long waiting and go home to their anxious families with the same old look of disappointment on their faces and the discouraging words on their lips. But in the great white house these office-seekers are not the only anxious and troubled ones. There is one at least inside whose burden is still greater, and yet he occupies the proud position to attain which is the ambition of every great man in the land. His face bears more anxiety than yours, my office-seeker, and you never saw the day you worked as hard as he works every miserable day of his life. Many a night, as he shuts the door of his chamber, he wishes he was back again in congress, with his peace of mind secure and the goodwill of his fellow-men beyond danger. No doubt he has felt sometimes that he would be willing to exchange places with one of these office-seekers waiting outside the door. The clerks, even, in the white house can scarcely be very happy, for they are men of sentiment and full of tender-heartedness and they would not doubt be glad to write the word "appoint" on each envelope that comes to them and sign the president's initials to it. The doorkeepers are about the only happy persons in the white house. They are treated with the utmost deference by the crowd, they get good pay and have no responsibility.

Immigration—Arrivals at Castle Garden.

Special to the Chicago Times. New York, April 19.—This has been one of the busiest days Castle Garden has ever seen. Six steamships poured into the harbor their stowage freight of 6,891 immigrants. There were landed there 1,441 immigrants from the steamship Silesia, 422 from the Alastia, 1,311 from the City of New York, 1,200 from the England, 1,416 from the Hapsburg, and 1,101 from the Ethiopia. This is the largest total for any day since May 19, 1873, when 7,950 immigrants were landed. Commissioner Hansell predicts that the total for the present month will not fall short of sixty thousand, and that the total for the year will not be less than half a million. One German banking house in this city paid out over $100,000 to immigrants who arrived last week in the German steamships, and who on their arrival there presented drafts which they had purchased in Europe. There were in these three steamships about thirty-six hundred immigrants, which would give an average of about $30 to each. They are some, of course, who are driven to emigrate by extreme poverty; these arrive in Castle Garden penniless. An employe at Castle Garden said to-day that, taking the best class of the German emigrants, perhaps a quarter of the whole number, the money they brought with them in coin or drafts would average $1,200.

The City of New Orleans Requested to Pony Up.

New Orleans, April 21.—John Crossley & Son, of England, have instituted a suit against the City of New Orleans, in the United States circuit court, for the sum of $430,782.50, being the amount of drainage warrants held by them. One hundred and seventy thousand dollars of these warrants were issued by the city as part of $3,000,000 purchase price paid by the city for the rights and property of the Mexican Gulf and Ship canal company, of which the petitioners are successors, and the remainder of the warrants were issued for work alleged to have been performed by said company. The petitioners allege that the city has made no effort to collect the drainage tax levied to pay these warrants; that there is $70,000 of this tax now due, and they ask for such order in relation to this matter as the court may see fit to issue.

Synopsis of Opinions of the Court of Appeals.

[Prepared for the Herald by Edward J. Hammer of Galveston.]

Ward vs. the state; appeal from Ellis.

1. Where a case depends purely upon circumstantial evidence, it is the duty of the court, whether asked or not, to give in charge the law applicable to circumstantial testimony.

2. To establish guilt, the rule dictated by justice and reason, requires that the evidentiary facts be proved, not presumed. Reversed and remanded. Hurt, J.

Keefe vs. the state; appeal from Dallas.

The penal code as expounded in McKay vs. the state, 44 Texas 83, made it absolutely necessary to the commission of an assault, that the assailant have the ability to inflict the violence or battery. As great indignities and injuries can be inflicted upon the mind and feelings of individuals, without the ability in fact to inflict or commit a battery, since that decision our code has provided that "the use of any dangerous weapon or the semblance thereof in an angry or threatening manner, with intent to alarm another, under circumstances calculated to affect that object, comes within the meaning of an assault." Affirmed. Hurt, J.

Nave, Goddard & Co. vs. Frieberg, Klein & Co.; appeal from Dallas.

The constitution expressly confers original jurisdiction upon the district court in all cases involving five hundred dollars in value and it is evident that in such cases the county court does not possess concurrent jurisdiction. Affirmed. White, P. J.

Terrell Sons & Co. vs. Fish & Co.; appeal from Wise.

Until the revised statutes took effect notaries public nor commissioners of deeds residing in another state did not have general authority by our statute, nor by the law-merchant to take affidavits so as to establish prima facie the facts contained in the affidavit. Reversed and remanded. White, P. J.

Hoerr & Bro., et al vs Coffin; appeal from Grayson county.

An extension of time to the principal debtor in consideration of money paid for the indulgence of the principal, discharges the surety from liability. Reversed and remanded. Winkler, J.

Cowart vs Oram; appeal from Dallas county.

A judgment entered nunc pro tunc without notice to the defendant and without testimony, is a proceeding unauthorized by law. Reversed and remanded. Winkler, J.

Braident vs Taylor & Long; appeal from Baylor county.

1. Judgment rendered by a justice at a time other than when by law, a regular term of court could be held, is sufficient cause for a writ of certiorari.

2. In determining the question of parties who should be held bound by the obligations of a bond, the signatures will be looked to rather than the body of the instrument. Reversed and remanded. White P. J.

And some people say it is injurious! She—You smoke an awful lot, don't you? He—Ya—s, awful lot. She—And have you ever found it do anything to your brain—you know? He—Nevah.—[Judy.]

Cotton Mills in the South.

The Boston Journal of Commerce says "It is the custom to speak of the southern class of mills, only fit for southern trade, etc. An Englishman lately visiting the Eagle & Phoenix mills, Columbus, Georgia, said the new No. 3 mill was the best equipped mill in the world. Certainly there is no mill making a larger variety of better quality of goods. It has every new improvement, and some that no other mills in the country are using. The profit of these mills last year was 20 per cent. on a capital of $1,250,000, or $5.76 per spindle. The mills are lighted with the Brush electric light, and water power is used to run them. It cost to light the No. 3 mill for six months, including carbons and attendance, $110; for the same time gas would have cost $2,000.

A Down Town Merchant.

Having passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the incessant howling of a suffering child, and becoming convinced that Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup was just the article needed, procured a supply for the child. On reaching home and acquainting his wife with what he had done, she refused to have it administered to the child, as she was strongly in favor of Homoeopathy. That night the child passed in suffering, and the parents without sleep. Returning home the day following, the father found the baby still worse; and while contemplating another sleepless night, the mother stepped from the room to attend to some domestic duties, and left the father with the child. During her absence he administered a portion of the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and to his surprise, that night all his little fellow awakes in the morning bright and happy. The mother was delighted with the sudden and wonderful change, and thought at first, of course, that the deception practiced upon her, had continued to use the syrup, and suffering, crying babies and restless nights have disappeared. A single trial of the Syrup never yet failed to relieve the baby, and overcome the prejudices of the mother. Sold by all Druggists. 25 cents a bottle.
