Buying a Horse and Buggy. The following originally appeared in the Buffalo Express. It is good enough to bear many repetitions: C—p, an attache of one of the Pennsylvania railroads, but well known in Buffalo as an inveterate practical joker, happened in Cleveland the other day, and the weather being mild, warm, he conceived the happy idea of taking the fair object of his adoration out riding...

An Open Bar in a Cornfield. Here is a California story, told to illustrate the cunning of the crows in that region: A hired man on a Napa farm was detailed to keep watch on a cornfield, and not let the black marauders invade the premises; but, like many other men in a similar situation, he tried to plan a method whereby so much labor would not have to be performed. So he hit upon the plan of soaking some corn in whisky and placing it in the field, so that the crows would surely get drunk, and then he thought he would have a sure thing on them, and could kill them easily...

How to be Unconquerable. 1st. Consult Tom, Dick and Harry, in matters of business, and then follow, not the best, but the last, advice given. 2d. Instead of marching straight over trouble with a firm front, crouch and let it march over you. 3d. Have no mind of your own, no self-reliance. Be unstable and shifting as the sand on the seashore. 4th. If you are knocked down to-day, conclude that your place is on your back to-morrow and the next day, and so on. 5th. Because it rains to-day, and is dismal, make up your mind that it is going to be rainy and dismal always. 6th. Never look among your clouds for silver linings, for rifts through to the blue sky and sunshine beyond. 7th. Follow these directions closely, and failure will track your steps like a blood-hound, in adversity you will be as worthless as an old rotten sheet for a sail in a gale of wind; when fire comes, as come it must, you will find all the metal you ever had in you turned to dross; and in the fire you know, dross never purifies or refines—it only burns.

Light duty—making fires. Well "posted"—the telegraph. Iced-out society—the arctic circle. A man in the write place—an editor. A mantle-shelf—a lady's shoulder. Stuffing improves the fair, as well as the fowl. The cup that neither cheers nor inebriates—the hic-cup. Can a curl over the forehead be called "Locke on the Understanding?" When young ladies wager gloves, in what color do they usually pay? Smoke! Why are authors like cattle? Because they are accustomed to pens. Any man would like to turn apothecary when money becomes a drug. Dress parade—a fashionable woman's toilette. The best circulating medium—the blood. All flowers of speech spring from tulips. Why does a waiter resemble a horse? Because he runs for the plate. Why are persons traveling on turnpike roads so much like children? Because they have to be tolled (told) so often. Washerwomen are great travelers. They are continually crossing the line and running from pole to pole. A little Connecticut boy, asking a man who Good Friday was, received the withering reply: "Well, you go home and read your Robinson Crusoe."

A Missouri news paper claims that the hogs of that State are so fat that in order to find out where their heads are it is necessary to make them squeal, and then judge by the sound.

"Brick" Pomeroy for Congress.—It is well known that at the suggestion of the New York Standard, "Brick" Pomeroy has been unanimously proposed for Congress in place of Morrissy, by the Democratic press. But "Brick," it seems, is not very pliant to the purposes of other people, and has just a slight appreciation of his unrivaled power as editor of a Democratic paper which wields an available influence over several millions of his countrymen. So he disappoints those who thought him the victim of a feverish ambition, and eager to grasp at any bait upon the hook of political intrigue, as the following extract from a letter quite evidently proves: "Thanks to no brave and earnest a Democratic paper as the Patriot for his good opinion, but we are no candidate thirsting for Congressional fame—honour there is none in comparison to the position of editor of a Democratic newspaper. We are quite content with our place, duties and work. To enjoy the confidence of so many millions of working-men as we do, is more honor than is usually accorded one man out of a million, and with this honor and power for good and Democratic usefulness we are content."

The Standard, referring to these decisive utterances, remarks: "A man who enjoys the confidence of so many millions of laboring men is precisely the man for this office. Pomeroy in Congress would make the Radicals screech and groan. New York would no longer be represented by the placid Brooks, the modest Cox, the silent Fox. Pomeroy would be the young chief of Tammany, the 'Back Warrior.' We know that the honor does not compare with that of editing a Democratic paper, but Duty is always Honor."

Wanted.—A Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Gazette states that Holden requires 15,000 troops; Blodgett and Bullock 20,000; Senter 25,000; Scott of South Carolina, thinks 10,000 will do for the present for his State. An effective force is also wanted in Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama and Louisiana; and Texas alone, according to its grateful representative in the Senate (Mr. Hamilton), could give employment to the entirety of the present diminutive force of the United States, horse, foot and dragons. One of these days the Radicals may try a less expensive plan, viz., a halter applied for Holden, Blodgett, Bullock, Senter, Scott and two or three dozen of the same sort of article.

Sports intelligence—a stable mind.

The Man who Killed Zolnerover.—The Standard (Ky.) Dispatch tells how Gen. Zolnerover, of the Confederate army, was killed, and says the fatal bullet was fired by a young man named Christmas, who was in Col. Fry's regiment. The Dispatch adds: "Young Christmas, after the war, brooded over the act until his friends began to apprehend danger of insanity. He was a brave and honest soldier, and could not possibly have felt any compunction of conscience for killing an enemy in battle, but the reflection that he had killed a human being who at the time could have been made a prisoner by the mere stretching of his hand—who was powerless to do him any injury—so wrought upon his conscience—prayed as it were, upon the very vitals of his mind—that he finally sank, and, it is feared, into hopeless insanity. A few days ago a writ was awarded against him by the judge of the Wayne county court, when the foregoing facts were elicited, which his desolate and forlorn condition of insanity fully established, and he was sent, for more skillful treatment, to the lunatic asylum at Hopkinsville."

The Property of Married Women.—A Bill giving married women the right to the control of their own property and earnings, has passed its second reading in the British Parliament, and seems likely to become a law. In the course of the debate, one member said that at present a woman in Great Britain forfeited by marrying all that she possessed, all that she might derive through legacies, and all that she might earn through her own industry. All passed to the husband. It was an honorable estate, no doubt, in which the woman entered through marriage; but as respected her personal property, it had the same effect as a conviction for felony. In the case of the rich, the woman was protected through settlements, which though ignored by courts of law, were enforced by courts of Equity. But that was a protection which could scarcely be obtained by women with small fortunes, and was wholly inapplicable to the case of married women earning wages. By the last census, there were in the country 800,000 of such women. Another member said that he never went to a manufacturing without having inquiries addressed to him as to when this Bill would pass. He knew of scores of cases in which the earnings of poor women were taken out of their hands by their husbands on Saturday evenings, and spent for drink. The Solicitor-General also supported the Bill, as demanded by every consideration of justice and good policy. When it is considered that the reform thus called for was made in this State more than twenty years ago we have some reason to plume ourselves on our superiority to the old country.

A case of some interest on the color question has just been decided at Mobile. It appears that the conductor of a street car on the Spring Hill Road, using only such force as was necessary, removed a colored woman from the portion of the car set apart for blacks. The accommodations in both departments were the same, and they were only separated by a rail about two feet high. The Mobile Justice maintained the right of common carriers to make distinctions between different classes of passengers, and held that no offence was committed by the conductor in the premises. In support of this view, he quotes from the opinion of Judge Agnew, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, rendered on the appeal from the verdict of a jury, where $500 damages had been given against a conductor for ejecting from a train a colored woman who refused to sit in the place assigned her. Judge Agnew says: "Who would maintain that either an iron or a steel is a reasonable regulation to compel the passengers, black and white, to room or bed together? If a right of private property implies no right of control, who shall decide a contest between passengers for seats and berths? 'Why, the Creator, made one black and the other white is not known, but the fact is apparent and the races distinct. Conceding equality with nature as perfect, and rights as sacred, yet God has made them dissimilar, and imparted to them features of character intended to imply that they shall not overstep the natural boundaries he has assigned to them. The natural law which forbids their intermarriage, and the social amalgamation which leads to a corruption of race, is clearly divine. The separation of the white and black races on the surface of the globe is a fact equally apparent. The right of each to be free from social contact is as clear as their right to be free from intermarriage.' Therefore, we declare a right to maintain separate relations, as far as is reasonably practicable."

A large excursion train on the London Great Northern Railway collided with a freight train on the 21st. Thirteen persons were killed, and thirty or forty hurt, some fatally.
