

To be sold,
A PLANTATION, in the town of Woodbury, county of Gloucester, and state of New Jersey, containing about one hundred and fifty acres; a suitable proportion of which is woodland and improved meadow. A great part of the arable land is in a high state of cultivation, and very natural to the production of Red Clover. On said plantation there is a genteel two-story brick house, with four rooms on a floor, and a good dry cellar under the whole; together with a barn, corn-cribs and carriage-house. The garden is large, and contains a good collection of the best kinds of grafted and inoculated fruit trees; the orchard consists of about three hundred grafted apple-trees. Any person inclined to purchase said premises, may be informed of the terms by applying to

LONDON.
LITERARY.
 Noble authors. It is with pleasure that we hear that men of elegant minds employ the leisure which they derive from fortune in the homage of the Muses. There are three Dramas ready for the Stage by noble writers.

A Comedy, with Songs, by the Duke of Leeds.
 A Tragedy, by the Earl of Carlisle.
 A Comedy, by Lord Viscount Mountmorres.
 Mr. Jerningham is about to present his poetical works to the public, as his final adieu to the Muses. The public will accept of the present for the sake of the motive.
 The Duke of Leeds' Comedy is said to be a very faithful picture of fashionable life. It introduces all the Dramatic Personæ in perfect harmony with one another, and leads them through the polished jealousies of upper life to its usual catastrophe—separation.
 The state into which the French have thrown the allied armies in Italy fully justifies Mr. Windham's assertion, that they are "enemies to all order."
 May 3.
 Singular circumstance.—The audience at Drury-lane Theatre on Saturday evening, was so completely tired that they ordered the curtain to drop in the middle of the farce of "All the World's a Stage," and completely booted the performers off the boards! Prince William of Gloucester takes the degree of L. L. D. at Cambridge on the 9th instant.
 May 4.
 Feathers are much fallen off in fashion, since the small head has presented the true proportion of nature.
 Silver and gold bandeaus are still the rage.
 Blue and pink spotted muslins are much worn by our fashionable belles; and the open straw hat promises to be the spring favorite, without any trimming whatever.

The following Verles on a young heir's coming of age are from Dr. Johnson.

LONG expedient one-and-twenty
 Ling'ring year, at length is flown;
 Pride and pleasure, pomp and plenty,
 Great ———, are now your own.
 Loosen'd from the minor's tether,
 Free to mortgage or to sell,
 Wild as wind, and light as feather,
 Bid the fons of Quirt farewell.
 Call the Bessies, Kates and Jennies,
 All the names that banish care;
 Lavish of your grandfire's guineas,
 Shew the spirit of an heir.
 All that prey on vice or folly
 Joy to see their quarry fly:
 There the gambler light and jolly,
 There the lender grave and fly.
 Wealth, my lad, was made to wander,
 Let it wander as it will;
 Call the Jockey, call the Pander,
 Bid them come and take their fill.
 When the bonny blade carouses,
 Pockets full and spirits high—
 What are acres? what are houses?
 Only dirt or wet or dry.
 Should the guardian, friend or mother
 Tell the woes of wilful waste:
 Scorn their counsel, scorn their pother—
 You can hang or drown at last.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.
 For the GAZETTE of the UNITED STATES
 No. III.

THE Constitution of the United States is founded on principles of equality—Every citizen is born with a right to participate in all its advantages. In this respect we all start from the same point in the journey of life—but alas! how soon do the advantages of education, which some enjoy over others, enable them to distance their contemporaries!

It is this which creates those disparities, that engender the bitterness of social exile—Envy on the one hand, and ambition on the other. It is acknowledged that nature sports an endless variety in forming the human mind. Genius however, is more equally dispensed than may at first view be imagined.

In the present discussion, this consideration has little weight. The object is to take this idea on the mind, viz. That the people being born to equal rights, justice requires that the government should as far as possible place them in a capacity to enjoy those rights. We complain of monopolies—of the power of riches—of the burthens of Society. The causes of these complaints will continue and accumulate, so long as the present monopoly of learning continues.

A monopoly of all others the most injurious, because it will in time acquire an inveteracy; which it will be unpopular to attempt to remove. This monopoly is disregarded by those who suffer from its effects; and generally in the same proportion. Its operation tho' fatal, is gradual, and therefore the less obvious. Those who know nothing, feel few injuries; it is the capacity for enjoyment which originates in an extension of the human faculties that enables mankind to distinguish negative misery, and positive good. I know that this observation has been obtruded on the world in defence of keeping the majority in ignorance. Detected be the policy. It is the measure of tyrants to slaves—or rather it is the connecting link that binds the latter to the former.

The Constitution of the United States, has levelled all the pretensions of superiority, which are not founded on superior merit. It holds out the most powerful motives to excel in all those estimable endowments, which give worth to the human character, by placing within probable attainment, by the children of the poorest citizen in the Republic, the highest honors of the union—between them, and these objects, what is there that intervenes, but our own negligence?
 The Legislature of this Commonwealth labored two sessions on the subject of education, and brought nothing to pass. Some say that worse than bare creation is before them—that an host of prejudices impede their way. In addition to these difficulties, it has been asserted in a public paper, that the men of property opposed the business. I do not believe this foul aspersion on their understandings, has a basis to support it. If it has, it will shew that as the completion of this business is peculiarly the interest of the general mass of the citizens, so on them alone depends the bringing forward men who will honestly adopt and pursue those measures, which will eventually result in the accomplishment of this important object.—In my next, I propose to point out some of the methods necessary to be resorted to, on the part of those who realize how important a general diffusion of knowledge among the people is, to the preservation of the Republican character.

E.
 From the FARMER'S WEEKLY MUSEUM.
 "Dost thou well to be angry for the gourd?"
 OR to fret, at any of the petty accidents of life? Thou discontented mortal, undoubted descendant from Jonah, and his peevish tribe, why dost thou suffer a cloud to gather on thy brow, because there is a little one, no bigger than a man's hand, rising in the sky? Be serene thyself, and it will import little, whether it rains or blows.
 Of all vile habits, that of fretfulness is the least tolerable. Many offensive things, which vulgar people do, are sometimes laid aside, and their neighbors are occasionally freed from annoy. But fretfulness is a kind of perpetual motion, excited no less by a creaking door, than a fit of the gout. It is a voracious monster, and feeds upon minute as well as vast vexation. Let us strive, therefore, to pluck off this blister from the heart, and, even in the hottest, and most oppressive days of life, care not whether the shelter of a "gourd" be extended over us, or taken away. I have always grieved ever since the schoolmistress bid me read, with a loud voice, Jonah's journey to Nineveh, that the prophet should chafe, like a tamed brute of the forest, because a gourd, a short lived plant of the night, had withered. It appears to me, even if the sun beat fiercely upon his head, and the east wind blew sharply upon his breast, that the prophet might have found for much alleviation of his misfortunes, in beholding "sixteen thousand" people, and "also much cattle" spared from destruction, that a dead "gourd" would not give him the spleen. I cannot help feeling a degree of indifference, and perhaps, aversion towards this fretting messenger to the Ninevites. I have a profound respect for all, and a warm affection for most of the other prophets. Many were courtly, as well as ingenious writers. I admire the sublimity of Isaiah, the sensibility of Jeremiah, and the generous zeal of Ezekiel. Even the lowly Amos, the herdsman of Tekoah, though the narrowness of his education has induced a degree of rudeness in his writings, still I believe to be as honest a prophet, as ever uttered a prediction. But as for Jonah, setting aside his disobedience, selfishness and vanity, he was so fulky and so morose a mortal that I never could like his character or his principles. I am not so uncharitable, as to wish that he had actually been digested by the whale, which swallowed him, but he ought to have kept no better company; for not the "great Leviathan of the deep ever floundered more impatiently in his element, than discontented Jonah, in the voyage of life."
 On a review of
