

ANECDOTES OF GENERAL SCOTT.—Kind enough at heart, and thoughtful of his troops when in service, he permitted no undue familiarity on the part of his soldiers, and required proper observance on all occasions of his rank and position. The regulars knew this well enough, and were not likely to offend him in this regard. His peculiarities were very little known, however, to the volunteers. As he came out of the building in which headquarters were at this time, an orderly stepped up with, as it appeared afterwards, a letter from one of the bureaus of the War Department, which had been directed to deliver to General Scott at once—of course to his Adjutant-General or Chief of Staff. The willing but not well-learned volunteer interpreted his order literally, however, and carelessly giving a paper I want you to look at before you— "The haughty veteran of fourscore seemed daunted for just one or two seconds, and then straightening to his full height, and raising his cane, with a sudden sweep of his hand—I think he had a cane—he exclaimed, in a weighty voice:—"Clear out, sir—clear out!" The astonished Orderly sprang away, and the General passed to his carriage and was driven off. The letter was taken charge of by the Orderly on duty at the office, and the other slowly walked on. The carriage was driven no more than twenty or thirty rods before it turned about, and the driver called to the unfortunate Orderly. He, of course, met it with his hand and feet in every quivering muscle. He was beckoned to the door, and the General asked his name and regiment—as he told two or three of us immediately afterwards. He gave both, and the General answered:—"Well, sir, report to your Colonel that you were guilty of gross disrespect to General Scott as an officer, and that General Scott was guilty of gross disrespect to you as a man. General Scott begs your pardon. Go to your duty, sir."

EQUESTRIAN PERILS.—A singular accident happened recently to a young lady near Brighton, England. She was riding on horseback behind the rest of her companions, when a young man rushed from the side of the road towards her, and commenced tearing away the skirt of her riding habit. A gentleman on horseback, thinking that some insult was offered, rode towards the young lady to give her his protection, when he discovered that the habit was on fire. It was soon extinguished, but not before the hands of the young man were much burnt. The origin of the accident is not known. It was attributed at the time to ignited cigar fuses, carelessly thrown away; but the probable conjecture is that the skirt caught fire from a plumber's portable grate, used for melting lead in the open air, one of which was on the route.

LOOK TO YOUR CORNER.—Mr. J. J. Weir exhibited some larvae at a recent meeting of the Entomological Society, in London, found in the corks of port wine bottles. Considerable damage has been done, as they ate their way through the cork and allowed the wine to escape. He suggested that the use of bran instead of sawdust was the probable cause of their incursion into the cellar. Mr. W. W. Sanders related an instance of a number of larvae of dermestes laridarius, which were brought into the docks with a cargo of skins, effecting an entry into an adjoining warehouse, where they perforated and rendered entirely useless a quantity of manufactured cork.

A FORGIBLE DESCRIPTION.—A writer in the London Star, describing a descent into an English coal mine, employs the striking figure:—"Down we went into deep darkness, with fearful and increasing velocity. Down, down, and nothing to be seen, only the dropping of the water from the sides of the shaft to be heard, and a feeling experienced as if flesh and bones were descending, while sensation lingered behind to tingle the finger ends and the roots of the hair."
