ARCHAEOLOGY.

Interesting Lectures by Rev. the English Archæologist, Westminister Abbey, and the Tower of London.

The Archæological Congress, recently in session in London has had some interesting papers read before them. We extract from the proceedings a summary of the papers on medieval London.

After the company had assembled in the Chapter house, the Rev. delivered a lecture on the history of the Abbey. A short time since he delivered a lecture on the same subject at one of the evening meetings of the Royal Institution...

Edward the Confessor was the first king who was positively stated to have been buried there, and it was some time before the successors followed his example...

Henry III intended at one time to have been buried in the Temple Church, but as he grew older his attachment to the Abbey increased, and twenty years after his death his body was deposited in a spot which has since been called his heart...

Henry VII built St. George's Chapel at Windsor, and a mausoleum for Henry VI; but the Privy Council determined that as that king had been a Catholic, he should be buried in the Abbey...

In the evening, Mr. Hepworth Dixon lectured at the Jermyn Street Museum, "On the Tower of London, said against the fate of our island, as it is called, with its 900 years of history, like its 1200 years of traditional fame...

Avoiding the ground trodden in the various special histories and guide-books, Mr. Dixon devoted himself more especially to the most prominent of the personages who as royalty, courtiers, and prisoners, had lived within its walls...
