THE CLOSING ARGUMENTS IN THE CHAMBERLAIN CASE.—The verdict of the jury in the closing of the evidence in the case, Mr. McMichael summed up for the Commonwealth. He commenced with the review of the evidence, referring to that of Detective Lamon and others, and claimed that the fact of the death had been established in two ways, by Mrs. Tyson and Kate Gibbs, and also by Lida Hicks and Kate Gibbs, who saw the body at the Station House. The manner in which the body was wrapped up in the room, precluded the idea of suicide, and showed conclusively it was a murder. It might be argued that this house having three entrances, some one else might have entered it and committed the murder. He had been, however, that the entrances were habitually closed, and on this day that they were locked.

There were no children about this house to run in and out will, nor was it a place where men and women could go of their own accord, for all had to be admitted. The prisoner was identified as the man who went into the house with the woman, and the man who came out of the room, and who had been seen to go to the room, it would have been supposed that the woman was asleep, as Champion had said, and had made careful and studied preparations to corroborate the statement. There was no other man in the house during the interval that elapsed from the prisoner's going away to the discovery of the murder. No other man could have committed this murder, and none did the crime but Newton Champion. Look at the daily life of the prisoner, and the evidence in the case corroborated. He was acquainted with her, lived with her in a familiar way, a great personal intimacy existing between them. No man was more liable to have been suspected of the murder of Mary than the prisoner, and the whole surroundings point to him—one witness testifying to his having attempted to take her life, and another to his threatening to do so. After referring to the law, Mr. McMichael said there was no other man in the house with the woman with a settled purpose to kill her. If, however, he did not, and went with her and had the talk he spoke of to one of the witnesses, and then she refused to listen to his desires, and she had a knife in her hand and did kill her, it was as much murder of the first degree as though he had sharpened a knife before he took her to the house, with the intention of killing her. The evidence in the case is so strong, and so corroborated, that he is satisfied that the prisoner is a single fact elicited but what showed the prisoner to be a perfectly sane, reasoning creature, and one who should be held accountable by the great law of the land for his crime. There was some evidence to show that the father of the prisoner had been insane on one occasion, but that for years subsequently he was a better man than any man in the United States ships no man suspected of insanity would be permitted to be about boilers, when the lives of the ship's crew might be jeopardized. The prisoner's insanity, and the fact that he was arrested, and since he has been in prison, refused the idea of his being insane. He concluded by urging the jury to discharge their duty, and hold the prisoner responsible for the act, he had committed while in a sound state of mind.

Mr. Burien followed for the prisoner, saying he was satisfied that neither public sentiment nor public clamor would have any effect on the minds of the jury. He cited for the benefit of the crew of the Parson, one of whom said he had never seen the prisoner asleep, and another that the prisoner went by the name of Crazy Champion. There was certainly some reason for this, and he said that he was satisfied on board that ship were better capable of judging of the insanity of the prisoner than any doctors, for any one could put out a sign and practice medicine without having graduated at a college. He cited for the benefit of the jury that an eminent professor had given it as his opinion that the evidence of medical men was too much relied upon in cases where other persons could as well and better testify as to the condition of the person, and he proved very satisfactorily that the father and sister of the prisoner were insane, and that the prisoner had been frequently taken home insane, and was subject to fits. The prisoner had evidently been closely watched in prison, and Mr. Gibbs seemed to have committed his evidence to memory, and if Dr. Smith had been asked by an outside patient for medicine he would have prescribed instantly. It was fair to presume that Dr. W. had an eye similar to that of other human beings, and he could not consequently tell whether it was blood or not he saw on the prisoner's shirt, as it required a microscope to ascertain the fact. The counsel for the prisoner were unable to explain his whereabouts on the day of the murder, but supposed he was roaming around with these women half-crazy. The plea of insanity had been put in because it was believed by counsel. The Commonwealth did not show that the prisoner was sane at the time the murder was committed, and as to the statement that persons could not get into the house where the body was found, it was well known that any one who had money could enter such places. The jury were asked to collect the facts in the event of their acquitting the prisoner, it did not turn him loose, but the Court had the power of restraining him.

Mr. Joseph S. Brewster followed for the prisoner, at his conclusion of whose remarks the Court took a recess. On the reassembling of the Court, District Attorney Mann closed the case for the Commonwealth, and Judge Allison charged the jury, reviewing the evidence with care and clearness. He told them that it was not enough to show that the prisoner inherited insanity, was of weak intellect, or partially insane. They must find that at the time the act was perpetrated the prisoner was insane man, not having a proper control of his actions, and that his reason was destroyed so as to render him unconscious of the nature of the act and of the fact itself. He said there was no evidence of an encounter or struggle, neither could it be inferred that nothing more than great bodily harm was intended to be inflicted. He added that the witnesses must detail all their knowledge respecting the prisoner's conduct, and that which were claimed to originate in an insane condition of the mind, before they could give their opinion as to his insanity or insanity, the jury could judge of the value of their opinions from the ground on which they were based. He remarked that insanity was transmissible, but it might develop itself in a different way in a child from the way in which it exhibited itself in the parent. As five minutes of 5 o'clock, the bill of indictment was handed to the jury, and they left the Court, returning in a few minutes. As the clock was striking six, the Clerk asked the jury how they found the prisoner. The foreman responded, "Guilty of murder in the first degree," and on being polled each member of the jury responded to the verdict as pronounced by their foreman. At the time the jury came in the prisoner was leaning on the side of the dock, and continued gazing around without looking at the jury. He soon after left the court-room eating an apple.

REPAIRING THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The cold, cheerless, inappropriate wall paper which has been such an eye-sore at the Academy of Music for a couple of months past, has been removed, and in its place supplied by handsome and artistic paper of great brilliancy, and decidedly in keeping with the decorations generally. Between 6 o'clock on Friday morning and 5 in the afternoon, the whole auditorium of the Academy was repaired. The delay was owing solely to the time necessarily consumed in manufacturing the paper of the proper color. It is an unqualified success, and the building never presented a handsomer appearance. The surprise of those who had been to the opera on Thursday evening and found the transformation completed in less than twenty-four hours, was as great as it was pleasant. The Academy is restored to all its original elegance, and the directors deserve thanks for their prompt attention to the taste of the public.

IMPORTANT TO TAILORS.—A clothing house of this city, having made inquiries of the Treasury Department relative to the revenue tax on clothing, received the following answer, which will be found of interest to persons engaged in the tailoring business:—

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, WASHINGTON, October 30, 1866.—Gentlemen:—Your letter of the 26th instant, relative to the liabilities of tailors, has been received. In reply I have to say that under the act of June 30, 1864, as amended by the act of March 3, 1865, the tax on clothing, etc., was six per cent. ad valorem. A tailor exclusively engaged in manufacturing clothing, and who works upon goods, including materials, did not pay the tax of $1000, was exempt from duty. Under the act of June 30, 1864, as amended by the act of July 13, 1866, the tax is two per cent. on the value of the goods, exclusive of work, whose work, exclusive of material, does not exceed $1000 per annum, is exempt from duty. If the work exceeds in value annually $1000, the duty is two per cent. on the value of the goods, exclusive of work, as above, can have no claim to the exemption under section ninety-four, but is liable to a tax of two per cent. ad valorem on the entire amount of his manufactures, unless he may be entitled to the exemption under the provisions of section ninety-three of said act. The tax on clothing is in all cases on the entire value of the same, including material, labor, and profits, and not on the increased value given to the materials by making or in other words, on labor alone. This is the case when a tailor makes clothing from materials furnished him by his customer, as well as when he furnishes the materials himself. In this case he has the right to charge the tax to the customer furnishing the material. Yours, respectfully,

THOMAS HARLAND, Deputy Commissioner.

THE CHOLERA MORTALITY.—During the past week twenty-four cases of cholera were reported at the Board of Health Office. The records of the Registrar's Office show that during the same period there were forty-one deaths from cholera in the city. Of that number thirty-eight were adults and three children, twenty-five were males and sixteen females. Several of the deaths reported were from cases of the previous week, which accounts for the discrepancy between the number of cases reported and the deaths.

The number of deaths from cholera in each Ward was as follows:—

Table with 2 columns: Wards and Total. Rows include First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Total.

OUR FIREMEN.—A truck, hose carriage, etc., are now being built in this city for a new company in the town of Ashland, Schuylkill county. The members of the Empire Hook and Ladder Company of this city will visit Lancaster early next month, for the purpose of delivering to the Empire Company of that city a new truck made in New York.

THE FRANKLIN INSTITUTE.—The annual course of lectures before the Franklin Institute will be commenced on Monday evening, at the hall of the Institute, Seventh street. Professor Henry Morton will open the course by a series of lectures on chemistry and light, the first being given to-morrow evening, and the others on every Tuesday evening thereafter, until the course of four lectures is completed. In December and January, Dr. Lemuel J. Deal will give seven lectures upon pneumatic chemistry, and in February, Professor A. R. Leeds will give a course of lectures on the metals. Professor Henry Morton will close the course by a series of eight lectures upon the first principles of mechanics. The Institute also commences a series of lectures upon subjects similar to those named, and to be illustrated by experiments, at the Academy of Music. This highly interesting and instructive series, to be delivered by thoroughly competent lecturers, will give to our citizens an opportunity rarely afforded for both amusement and instruction.
