

NATIONAL BUDGET.

Opinions of the Public Press on the Message and Documents.

Editorial Comments of Philadelphia and New York Journals.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

The Message and Documents.

From the North American and U. S. Gazette, Richmond, Va.

At present we shall consider these documents together, as forming parts of the one general presentation of the state of affairs and of the view...

The statement made by this document is so smooth, plausible and insinuating, that many persons will probably overlook the misrepresentations it contains.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

been supported by amazing majorities on the popular vote, and upon the direct issue whether the policy of the President should be ratified, it would have been almost certain that the President and policy of his course would have been ratified to point out, if he could, in what particulars those propositions were harsh, burdensome or wrong.

The Message.

From the Public Ledger, "Independent Johnson Democrat."

The anxiety to see the annual message of the President of the United States was gratified yesterday, by the prompt sending of that document to Congress, and its equally prompt publication by the newspapers in a popular form.

The French troops are to be removed from Mexico in separate detachments at intervals of two or three months, or in any other order, until what later than the time fixed for the withdrawal of the first detachment, the matter now in controversy.

The Message.

From the Daily News, Johnson Organ.

The President seems it a subject for profound regret that Congress has thus far failed to admit to seats loyal Senators and Representatives from the rebel States.

"Occasional" on the Message.

[My Dear Mr. Secretary, the Hon. John W. Forney, is not to be caught dirtying his fingers by handling the President's Message editorially.

The first day of the second session of the Thirty-first Congress, and all resolutions and amendments are auspicious. The President's Message has produced little more impression than a copy of the old and worn "Loyalist's" tract.

The President's Message.

From the Inquirer, Moderate Republican.

The message of the President of the United States to Congress has this merit about it, that although the views of the Executive are decided as to the policy which should be adopted in regard to rebellion, it is moderate.

There is much force in the plea of the President that it will be ludicrous to admit Representatives from the insurgent States as soon as it can be done without a suspension of the act.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

The President's message is, in the main, a brief reference to subjects more fully set forth in the reports of the heads of Departments, which we publish in full or in a condensed shape in other places in this morning's issue.

THE NEW YORK PRESS.

From the Times.

It will be seen that the President offers nothing new in the content of the case, a reiteration of the statement heard many times within the last nine months; his arguments have all been used before; and his comments are not only unoriginal, but evidence that he has learned nothing from the elections, and forgotten nothing in connection with his struggle with Congress.

This exhibition of unaided purpose on the part of the President may not occasion surprise to those who know the firmness of will which marks his character.

The anxiety to see the annual message of the President of the United States was gratified yesterday, by the prompt sending of that document to Congress, and its equally prompt publication by the newspapers in a popular form.

The French troops are to be removed from Mexico in separate detachments at intervals of two or three months, or in any other order, until what later than the time fixed for the withdrawal of the first detachment, the matter now in controversy.

The Liverpool Cotton Market. Liverpool, December 4.—Noon.—The Cotton Market opens steady at yesterday's quotations.

London Money Market.

LONDON, December 4.—Noon.—The following are the opening quotations for American securities.

United States Bonds in Germany.

LONDON, December 4.—Noon.—Despatches received from Berlin, Frankfurt, and Hamburg, quote United States bonds firm.

Failure of a London Banking Firm.

LONDON, December 4.—Noon.—The acceptance of Abraham Travel & Sons have been protested.

Immense Reform Demonstration in London.

—Huge Procession of the Trade Societies—The "Stars and Stripes" Carried to the "Wearing of the Green."

LONDON, December 4.—The demonstration made yesterday by the trade societies of London, in aid and approval of the Parliamentary reform movement, consisted of the most important political event which has ever taken place or been witnessed in this country.

As John Bright anticipated, in his speech at Manchester, the "Wearing of the Green" was paraded and formed in the procession, and there would have been many thousands more present but for the rain.

There were forty-seven trade societies, with many branches of the Reform League organization. The members were formed by their officers into four divisions, each division being accompanied by a band of music, and having appropriate devices on their banners.

The procession started at 10 o'clock from St. James' Park at noon, and started at a given word, marching along Pall Mall, Piccadilly and other prominent thoroughfares, and terminating at the Albert Hall.

An immense meeting took place here in the evening, at which were seven plenary, occupied by fifty plenary members of the people.

During the march of the procession all the stores or shops along the route were closed and kept shut. The streets were thronged with spectators.

There was great enthusiasm exhibited on all sides. The march was a grand success.

Among the flags borne prominently in the procession was that of the "Stars and Stripes," and among the airs played by almost every band, was the "Wearing of the Green."

MR. BRIGHT PRESENT.

LONDON, December 4.—John Bright was present at the great reform demonstration which took place in London yesterday.

There were probably fifty thousand persons present, and the procession was a grand success.

At the conclusion of the meeting dispersed peacefully. Mr. Bright addressed an immense audience last night.

JOHN E. SURRATT.

His Arrest in the Ranks of the Papal Army—His Escape.

Florence (Nov. 14)—Correspondence of London Post.

It is stated that J. E. Surratt (one of the persons connected with the assassination of President Lincoln) is now in the Papal States, and is serving for some time past in the Papal Zouaves, his company being quartered at the castle of the Pontifical Palace, near the Vatican.

He had assumed and was known in his regiment by the name of "John Brown."

Information has been communicated to General Ruffo, the Minister of the United States at Rome, that he was in the Papal States, and that he had been seen by him in transmitting the news of the capture of Surratt.

The general to take such measures as might lead to the securing of Surratt, alias Watson.

On the 14th of the month, the Italian Government, through the Papal Government, requested an audience of Cardinal Antonelli, and asked his assistance in capturing the fugitive.

The Papal Government would hand him over to that of the United States. The Cardinal Secretary proposed the general all the facilities in his power.

Both the tone and the arguments of the Message on this leading topic, are excellent. In dignity, in earnestness, and in the force of the reasoning, it is entirely free from the asperity sometimes too frequently observed in the President's public utterances.

There are no rebuffs of ingenuity; but a straightforward presentation of the so-called grounds of the President's policy. There is no attempt to draw from Congress is justifiable now, it will be equally justifiable in twenty, thirty, or forty years hence.

The logical consequence of the disintegration of the Union. The reasons for the admission of the States are as strong now as they will ever be. The mere lapse of time can add nothing to the force of the argument.

There is no disposition to regard the present as a temporary expedient, or to exclude them now which is not equally good for extending them forever. But if the result of the war is the permanent disintegration of the Union, it is something very different from what the Republicans promised while the war was in progress.

From the Tribune.

It is not so much what the President says as what he declines to say. The first impression of the message is that his Excellency is chagrined. He makes no allusion to the rebellion, and no mention of the Government. This is something from an Executive who has been in the most unreasoning humor for so many months.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

EMERGENCY TELEVISION

EUROPE.

To-day's London, Liverpool, Berlin, Frankfurt, and Hamburg Telegrams.

By Atlantic Submarine Telegraph Cables

Great Reform Meeting in London

More About John E. Surratt.

Latest Commercial and Financial News.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

The Liverpool Cotton Market.

LIVERPOOL, December 4.—Noon.—The Cotton Market opens steady at yesterday's quotations.

London Money Market.

LONDON, December 4.—Noon.—The following are the opening quotations for American securities.

United States Bonds in Germany.

LONDON, December 4.—Noon.—Despatches received from Berlin, Frankfurt, and Hamburg, quote United States bonds firm.

Failure of a London Banking Firm.

LONDON, December 4.—Noon.—The acceptance of Abraham Travel & Sons have been protested.

Immense Reform Demonstration in London.

—Huge Procession of the Trade Societies—The "Stars and Stripes" Carried to the "Wearing of the Green."

LONDON, December 4.—The demonstration made yesterday by the trade societies of London, in aid and approval of the Parliamentary reform movement, consisted of the most important political event which has ever taken place or been witnessed in this country.

As John Bright anticipated, in his speech at Manchester, the "Wearing of the Green" was paraded and formed in the procession, and there would have been many thousands more present but for the rain.

There were forty-seven trade societies, with many branches of the Reform League organization. The members were formed by their officers into four divisions, each division being accompanied by a band of music, and having appropriate devices on their banners.

The procession started at 10 o'clock from St. James' Park at noon, and started at a given word, marching along Pall Mall, Piccadilly and other prominent thoroughfares, and terminating at the Albert Hall.

An immense meeting took place here in the evening, at which were seven plenary, occupied by fifty plenary members of the people.

During the march of the procession all the stores or shops along the route were closed and kept shut. The streets were thronged with spectators.

There was great enthusiasm exhibited on all sides. The march was a grand success.

Among the flags borne prominently in the procession was that of the "Stars and Stripes," and among the airs played by almost every band, was the "Wearing of the Green."

MR. BRIGHT PRESENT.

LONDON, December 4.—John Bright was present at the great reform demonstration which took place in London yesterday.

There were probably fifty thousand persons present, and the procession was a grand success.

At the conclusion of the meeting dispersed peacefully. Mr. Bright addressed an immense audience last night.

JOHN E. SURRATT.

His Arrest in the Ranks of the Papal Army—His Escape.

Florence (Nov. 14)—Correspondence of London Post.

It is stated that J. E. Surratt (one of the persons connected with the assassination of President Lincoln) is now in the Papal States, and is serving for some time past in the Papal Zouaves, his company being quartered at the castle of the Pontifical Palace, near the Vatican.

He had assumed and was known in his regiment by the name of "John Brown."

Information has been communicated to General Ruffo, the Minister of the United States at Rome, that he was in the Papal States, and that he had been seen by him in transmitting the news of the capture of Surratt.

The general to take such measures as might lead to the securing of Surratt, alias Watson.

On the 14th of the month, the Italian Government, through the Papal Government, requested an audience of Cardinal Antonelli, and asked his assistance in capturing the fugitive.

The Papal Government would hand him over to that of the United States. The Cardinal Secretary proposed the general all the facilities in his power.

Both the tone and the arguments of the Message on this leading topic, are excellent. In dignity, in earnestness, and in the force of the reasoning, it is entirely free from the asperity sometimes too frequently observed in the President's public utterances.

There are no rebuffs of ingenuity; but a straightforward presentation of the so-called grounds of the President's policy. There is no attempt to draw from Congress is justifiable now, it will be equally justifiable in twenty, thirty, or forty years hence.

The logical consequence of the disintegration of the Union. The reasons for the admission of the States are as strong now as they will ever be. The mere lapse of time can add nothing to the force of the argument.

There is no disposition to regard the present as a temporary expedient, or to exclude them now which is not equally good for extending them forever. But if the result of the war is the permanent disintegration of the Union, it is something very different from what the Republicans promised while the war was in progress.

From the Tribune.

It is not so much what the President says as what he declines to say. The first impression of the message is that his Excellency is chagrined. He makes no allusion to the rebellion, and no mention of the Government. This is something from an Executive who has been in the most unreasoning humor for so many months.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the President's disintegration of the Union.

There is no mention of the President's policy, or of the President's message. Congress would not readily have heard an essay upon the cause of the rebellion, and the