SHORT METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS FOR THE WEEK.

Monday, 6.—The Peace Society have their Anniversary meeting in New York with the big societies. Combativeness and Self-Esteem appear to be the driving powers of these peace warriors.

Tuesday, 7.—Railroad Convention held at Cleveland. They agree to make tracks westward, and all Baggage Smashers are instructed to smash all trunks not accompanied by their owners.

Wednesday, 8.—Equal Rights' Association hold their Convention in New York. They claim that men shall have the right to "teach eradic" (if there should ever be such a thing), and women the right to tend bar.

Thursday, 9.—Ex-President Franklin Pierce visits Fortress Monroe. It is thought, to take Jeff's place, if the latter traitor should get out on his good behavior.

Friday, 10.—Senator Doolittle leaves Washington for Russia. It is believed that he is going to get up an Arm-in-Arm Convention with the Poles in the new territory.

Saturday, 11.—SERIES COLUMN DAY. The Editor, having joined the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Donkeys and other Animals, will not torture his readers any more with side-splitting jokes.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. MEETING OF CITIZENS.

Last Tuesday a meeting of large citizens was held at the Board of Trade Rooms, for the purpose of forming a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Quite a number of ladies, with their chignons, were in attendance. His Honor Mayor McMichael, who has control of the worms in the Squares, presided. On taking the chair the Mayor expressed his hearty approval of the object for which the meeting had assembled, and stated that, in his capacity as City Magistrate, many occurrences of cruelty to animals were daily under his observation; that he was continually pained by seeing the large lager-beer teams, besides being loaded with their barrels, to have in addition to haul one large Dutchman each as driver, who, in his opinion, was a load in himself for any two-horse team, particularly when full of lager, as they generally were. He said that, in co-operation with an association formed for the purposes proposed, he would instruct his detective police not to catch goats hereafter by their tails, and the dog-catchers not to choke the dogs to death before they advertise for their owners.

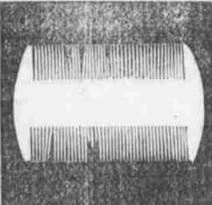

A gentleman offered the following resolution:—Resolved, That the citizens of Philadelphia here assembled have witnessed, for many years, the increased means of torture adopted by the city authorities towards the little summer worm that revels in our public squares; and that, after persecuting them with brimstone, washing them out of their homes in their infancy, by turning on them a full stream of cold water from a steam squirt; trying to domesticate sparrows among them, whose known mode of warfare, in the language of the Declaration of Independence, is indiscriminate slaughter; and the last fowl crusade against them, by introducing to their acquaintance Chickens of both sexes, when it is well known they will be as unceremoniously eaten as a Patagonian missionary, calls for the condemnation of all right-minded men.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed by the Chairman of this meeting to visit the "Pound" every morning, and see that the detectives provide for these agile animals boxes, old wheelbarrows, or other wrecks for them to climb upon, as by these helps to represent their own native cliffs, they can be happy.

Resolved, That it is expedient to form an association whose duty it shall be, prudently and discreetly, to take chignons in hand, and to carefully remove any animals, known as "burkars," that may be there cking on a miserable existence, and provide for them better quarters in car-cushions or other suitable places.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to test the various dangerous drugs sold under the name of "Extremators," and see if the death produced by eating the stuff is "without odor," as the advertisers say, or otherwise.

After the adoption of the resolutions, which was done by acclamation, one of the gentlemen present made some remarks on the subject. He said that in London such a society as the one proposed had progressed so far that they had now done away with all instruments that in any way had tormented animals, which were ONCE SO COMMON, and their places had been supplied by soft brushes, or, at the most, with instruments with coarser teeth. And he would say a word here for the ladies. Their chignons can be cleaned without sulphur. Just soaking for twenty-four hours in cold ice water, with a piece of tape leading from the chignon to the edge of the vessel containing the bunch of hair, will allow the gregarious a chance of escape by that means from the waterfall without killing them, while the intense cold will act towards them as nature does towards the blue-jays on the approach of winter, hunting that they had better leave for more congenial climes. (Great cheering.) He referred to the necessity for horses and other animals, even the humblest. The speaker, at this point, exhibited an article that he had picked off his kitchen roof, that he had no doubt had once been and was constructed to inflict the greatest amount of injury, for in no position can it strike a cat "fair," but always "foul." Observe, continued the speaker, the two points and the various angles, increased by a piece being nailed on one side of it, flying towards its victim like the boomerang of the savages, but unlike the boomerang, he was sorry to say, it did not return to wound the hand that hurled it. (Immense cheering.) There is nothing to prevent a man from driving a horse too fast, or making him draw a load sufficient for two. I remember, in this city, seeing last summer a pair of horses to a city car compelled to draw the car off the track, and over the rough cobble-stones up to the sidewalk, to let a colored man get out; and last winter how many of them, without overshoes, trod through the salted slush, until their feet would pass for "soused" in any respectable restaurant!

He would also refer to horses that stand all day long at the various hack-stands, while their drivers can lay in the cab asleep, with their legs hanging out of the window. He would move that each pair of horses be PROVIDED WITH SEATS, in order that they may enjoy the dull times along with their employers. He also thought the brutal custom of putting muzzles on dogs in the very season of the year when they are the most troubled with the "wicked flea when no man pursueth," was a great shame. (Laughter.) Better to send the dogs out into the country, or to the seashore, at that season of the year. There they could scratch, or get mad and indulge in their hatred of water, without annoying any one, as many of my hearers can testify. (Cheers and laughter.)

Another philanthropist then addressed the meeting. He was opposed to making the cows stand out in the rain so much, as many of the countrymen must do; for his milkman, who seems to be a humane man so far as his tin cans go, has brought him milk that, from its appearance, looked as if the cows had been soaked through and through; that their milk was about half water—(Cheers, and cries of "That's so!"); and he had given his milkman notice repeatedly that unless he got INDIA-RUBBER OVERGATS FOR HIS COWS, he must get his milk somewhere else, as he could hardly use the present, for thinking of the manner in which the cows must have suffered during this rainy season.

The next speaker heartily favored the formation of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. His notice was chiefly directed to the rough manner in which they handle sturgeon at the Gloucester and other ferries. He had seen them taken out of the net while yet alive, and pitched into the boat right on their nose, and he had seen them pulled around with hooks in the hands of coarse, unshaven men with overhauls on them, and he had seen shad hanging by their gills in the nets, and supposed they had been there all night. He thought fishermen ought to be careful in walking among eels with their boots on, as it took the greatest exercise of their native agility on the part of the eels to avoid being crushed under the iron heel of the brutal fishermen. (Cheers.)

After examining some policemen as to the best method of handling pigs and goats caught in the streets, and giving suggestions to the detectives, and appointing officers, the meeting adjourned.

The ladies took off their waterfalls in the early part of the meeting, and left without putting them on again.

LADIES BRINGING THEIR OWN Hair can have it curled, and warranted to retain its shape. A large assortment of Ornamental Hair, suitable for the sea-store.

Hair for the Sea-store, we suppose, must be wavy. But how a lady could visit the advertiser without bringing her own hair with her we can't understand, unless she gets scalped before she goes.
