REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS. THE LIFE AND DEATH OF JASON. A Poem, by William Morris. Boston: Roberts Brothers, 1867. Philadelphia Agent: Duffield Ashmead, No. 724 Chestnut street.

Mr. Morris, after giving to the public a number of tales in verse, founded chiefly on the mythological legends of Ancient Greece, has at last ventured boldly into the broad field of epic poetry, by the publication of his "Life and Death of Jason." The book has been well received and heartily commended by such fastidious English critics as the Athenaeum and the London Review; while Mr. Algernon Charles Swinburne has lauded Mr. Morris' achievement so highly in the Fortnightly Review, that we fear he has somewhat damaged the reputation of the author whose cause he has espoused by the very fulsome-ness of his praise.

Mr. Morris' peculiarities of style will be seen in the following account of the sailing of the Argo, which the Fourth Book of his poem opens:—"But through the town few eyes were sealed by sleep. When the sun rose, yea, and the upland sheep must guard themselves for that one morn a morn; And all unheeded did the mackerel shoal Make green the blue waves, or the porpoise roll Through changing hills and valleys of the sea."

Messrs. Roberts Brothers, of Boston, have just presented to the American public an elegant reprint of the poem, which will doubtless meet with a large sale, as it is one of the few works of its character and pretensions which even approaches mediocrity. The same firm have also in preparation a volume of Mr. Morris' shorter poems, entitled "The Earthly Paradise," in which he has wrought out in attractive style the story of Theseus, Cupid and Psyche, Orpheus, Pygmalion, Atalanta, Belshazzar, and other charming legends of a departed civilization.

THE RIVERSIDE INSTITUTE.—The demand for the stock now being sold by the Washington Library, for the raising of necessary funds for the endowment of the Riverside Institute, located in Burlington county, N. J. (not Beverly, as erroneously stated a day or two since), is increasing so rapidly that it has been determined, in order to accommodate those whose business pursuits engage them during the day, to have the principal office, No. 1225 Chestnut street, remain open until 10 o'clock every evening. The stock is sold at the low sum of One Dollar per share, each share being accompanied by a handsome Steel Plate Engraving, which at retail could not be purchased for less than nearly twice the amount paid for the stock.
