

NEW YORKISMS.

From our own Correspondent. NEW YORK, July 11, 1868.

The House of Detention.

In some of the New York streets, whose narrowness gives them a resemblance to alleys, one sometimes comes across a building which has a civic history of more or less importance, and is intimately connected with the present discharge of civic functions. Such a building is the New York House of Detention for Witnesses, located in Mulberry street, a few doors south of Spring. It is an institution whose history is involved in the criminal history of New York; witnesses, as its name implies, being detained there during the progress of the various criminal cases.

It is not an institution very easy for a stranger to get into or a witness to get out of. Its very aspect is as forbidding as that of a private lunatic asylum, so numerous are the bolts and bars. In answer to his summons the applicant at the front door is invariably confronted with a deaf man, as being the most appropriate communication of information to strangers, who requests you to repeat whatever you say, and finally refers the matter to Sergeant Folger. The Sergeant, who is a sort of natural born Bunaby, that has never had an opportunity for a nautical expansion of the soul, is very affable and communicative, and shows you all over the house, garnishing the moment, when you linger over the thresholds of the various departments, with recollections of the House as it was, and the inmates as they are.

Nearly ten and a half years ago—namely, on February 9, 1858—a House of Detention was established in two plain brick residences, Nos. 88 and 88 White street, one of the houses being used for the male witnesses and the other for the female. This arrangement continued for about three years, the corner-stone of the present building in Mulberry street having been laid November 29, 1860, and the female and the male occupants of the White street house removing thither May 1 and June 5, respectively.

During these ten years and a half, witnesses of nearly all ages and conditions have been received. During the Rebellion the United States had the privilege of sending its witnesses thither. Some of these were men and women of wealth and culture, whom it would have been barbarous to compel to associate with the other inmates. For the vast majority of detained witnesses are exceedingly rough; the women and girls, in their way, being not one whit behindhand with the men and boys in the accomplishments of unredeemed. Gullible have a good deal of glamour about it, but a little wifery in a witness. The prisoner at the bar—especially if the prisoner be a woman—awakens in us so much sympathy, or at least interest, that our conjectures, all employed on the question of her sentence or acquittal, have no time to picture the worry she gives her compassionate jailor (for there are a few such creatures), or the numerous pleasant little habits, which the solitude of the cell may have done anything but cure her of. Not so with witnesses, who in the eyes of the populace are often as devoid of romantic charm as the real criminal is in the eyes of the police. If I am to believe the assurances that have been made me, there has scarcely been a decent witness detained in the New York House of Detention, with the exception of those sent thither during the war by the General Government, and the few ladies and gentlemen, and the children of ladies and gentlemen, who have been granted the blessing there of private apartments. At first, one of the largest and handsomest rooms in the male department, twenty-one feet long, seven feet high, and fifteen and a-half feet wide, was set apart as a parlor for the men, but their conduct at the windows, which fronted upon Mulberry street, was so outrageous that no decent man, or woman, or child of intelligent parents would have liked to pass. Ne plus ultra of obscenity, which no mind not morbidly tottering from long familiarity with the subject would ever have dreamed of were perpetrated in language and action, and the parlor system was, therefore, soon done away with. The sitting-room downstairs is a most dismal substitute for it, the entire furniture consisting of three solitary wooden benches without backs. These benches are profusely adorned with improvised checkerboards, elaborately hacked with jack-knives, and giving the impression that the leisure of the inmates is devoted less to playing the game than to manufacturing the material wherewith to play it.

As a rule the kindness in supplying witnesses, either male or female, with books, is entirely thrown away. To the old White street establishment a library of over 300 volumes, together with the book-case containing them, was given by Mr. Benjamin R. Winthrop, a retired New York merchant. Three-quarters of the books were soon mutilated or lost, the women and girls especially tearing out leaf after leaf to light their pipes with or make curl-papers of. I did not have the advantage of hearing the opinion of Mrs. Reynolds, the matron, but the sergeant in charge assures me that the women are worse in this respect than even the men. Perhaps this rivalry is only apparent, as it is more than likely the men never read at all.

In the minute books of the House are entered the date on which every witness is received, the full name as well as that of the defendant, the crime in evidence of which the witness is detained, the name of the police justice making the commitment, the date of the discharge, and the age, nativity, and occupation of the witness. At the end of every October the Sergeant in charge makes an abstract of these minutes, and hands it to Chief Clerk Seth C. Hawley, at Police Headquarters. The capacity of the House is for one hundred and fifty witnesses. The average number is twenty. The greatest number at any one time has been one hundred and twenty-eight; the smallest number one. If a witness, at the summons of the District Attorney, leaves and does not return, it is taken for granted that he is discharged. The various forms of commitment and discharge are filed away every month, so that information can at any time be furnished to the Controller's office. The form of temporary commitment is as follows:—

"The Keeper of the House of Detention for Witnesses in the City and County of Philadelphia, do hereby certify that on this day, at the request of the Police Justice, I have received and safely kept for examination the body of _____ Witness against _____ (Signed) _____ Police Justice, City of Philadelphia."

The Male and the Female Departments are of nearly equal size, the peculiarity of the locale giving a little the advantage to criminology in the size of bed-rooms. Those in the men's department are eleven and those in the women's thirteen feet by eight. The house consists of four stories and a basement. Each of the four stories in the department contains six small bed-rooms, for forty-eight in all, and each bed-room is meant to accommodate two witnesses. Besides these small bed-rooms, each department contains four larger bed-rooms, sixteen feet by twelve, so that if the house should ever hold one hundred and fifty witnesses at once (its computed capacity), the sleeping quarters would be somewhat crowded. Each department is provided with a large bath-room, with the appliances of hot and cold water, shower-bath, four stationary wash basins, etc., and every witness is at liberty to take a bath once a day, the 100 gallons of water held by the boiler yielding a copious supply. The interior economy is very simple. There are no printed or written rules or regulations. The inmates are expected to retire at nine o'clock. The morning call is at half-past six; breakfast is ready at a quarter past seven. The food is much better than most of the witnesses get at home, and the dinner is frequently, during the present season, finished off with a dessert of strawberry pie and tapioca pudding. For amusements, checkers and cards (Old Maid's Game) are the standard. Occasionally an elegant variety is introduced in a card game bearing the attractive title of "Muggins," for which I regret to say, I can neither find nor invent an explanation sufficiently expressive. The card-department is attached a yard fifty feet long and thirty feet wide. Perhaps, at this season of the year, I ought to use the word garden—for peach trees are blooming there, and the women's enclosure is sanctified by the presence of flowers—that colored music. The men use their angling for base-ball, and in betting and battling endeavor to forget the tedium of the witness-box.

The great majority of the witnesses pilliate, destroy, and misapply everything. Many of them, when the hour for their discharge comes, refuse to leave. In the winter and early part of the spring, this was especially the case. They had been better housed and fed than in their own homes, and they implored to be kept out of the street. The regular hours, the warm beds, the sound sleep, the certain meals, the comfortable, clock-work life, was heavy to them. At one portion of last winter, among the occupants were Mrs. Boone and her four children who gained a brief notoriety from a slight attempt on her part to poison herself and family. One midnight the entire party were discovered in different stages of night-gown, in a small bed-room in Amity Place, uttering groans of various degrees of magnitude, and smelling of laudanum. This Mrs. Boone is the mother of the renowned Boone children who years ago started successfully through the States, and are now grown up, married, and settled in England. Two of these four younger children, who are left on her hands, are extremely smart, and Daniel and Myrtle recently played a successful engagement at the Theatre Comique here—a piece, by-the-by, not precisely adapted for administering moral tones to peopie, young or old.

One little romantic tradition which lingers around this matter of fact House of Detention, and I have done. Some years ago, when the house was very full, a young witness was detained there, who gave the name of Eugene. He did not look more than seventeen, was extremely neat in person, and painfully modest in manner. The man against whom he was a witness was charged with murder in the first degree. The evidence which Eugene gave was given with evident reluctance, and went to exculpate his master, for he was stated to be an apprentice to whom he was greatly attached. When the evening came and the hour for retiring drew near, the officer in charge of the house was surprised at Eugene's appearing before him, and with the most artless persuasions, implored to be put in a room by himself. The tears, the attitudes, the appeals, the good language with which this appeal was made, aroused the officer's suspicion and he at once charged Eugene with being a woman and having concealed her sex. The poor creature finding his sex discovered, and that the very means she had rashly employed to save the wretched criminal's life would probably hasten his doom, fell upon her knees and implored mercy. This, of course, could not be granted. She was given in charge of the matron, and furnished with clothes proper to her sex. The discovery of the imposture turned the scale against the criminal, and destroyed his last chance for life. But before sentence was executed, brain fever had done its work for Eugenia (for such was her name), and when it left her, she was found a hopeless maniac, a fit candidate for the shades of Binghamton, where she was consigned.

STRENGTHEN THE DEFENSES!—Malaria, the most deadly enemy of health, is every where active in July and August. The blasting Sun is decomposing and fermenting every species of vegetable and animal abomination, and poisonous gases that depress and infect the system are universally present. On the prairie, in the swamp, in the woods, and in the midst of crowded cities, this development of the elements of disease is now going on. In short, the human body is in a state of siege, and reason and common sense suggest that its defenses be strengthened. A stimulant, a tonic, a corrective, and an alterative are required to put it in the perfect trim, and these four grand requisites are combined in HOLLOWAY'S STOMACH BITTERS. A man must be made of steel not to be affected by the miasma that is so fatal to the atmosphere by the rays of an almost vertical Sun. Nine-tenths of the community are premonished at this season by debility, indigestion, headache, want of appetite, disposition for nervousness, nervousness, etc., that they need something to build them up and regulate their animal machinery. Do they want to "light it out" on that line all summer? or to achieve an immediate victory over their unpleasant symptoms, and secure that first of Heaven's blessings, "a sound mind in a sound body"? If the latter be his desire, let them resort to the Bitters which our native wisdom restores the system to its balance, regulating the liver, strengthening the stomach, gently relieving the bowels and giving vigor, elasticity, and energy to the whole frame. These are proven facts. No man who reads the testimony on which they are founded can for a moment doubt it.

GRAPE BITTERS.—Every one knows the value of the GRAPE, as a tonic and healthy food. It is the "standard Wine Bitters" in the estimate of the grape in its properties, mildly stimulating, diuretic, sudorific, and tonic. More than seven eighths of them are pure Juice of the grape, simply made bitter by Ceraulic Bark, Chamomile Flowers, Sassa Root, Galena, Wild Cherry Bark, etc. Sold by Druggists.

Two Irishmen attempted to swim the Connecticut at Montague, on Saturday, to save three cents toll each. One tied his clothes, a new suit, about his neck, but found it kept his head under the water, and was obliged to untie it, and the bundle floated off down the river. This economy is equaled by the man who goes and buys his cloth, carries it to a cutter to have his suit cut out, and then hangs up a seamstress to make it, in order to have a low-priced suit of clothing, when the value of the time spent in attending to it (if he had got the material and the cutter for nothing) would pay for a better suit ready made, at Charles Stokes & Co's, under the Continental.

FREQUENT NOSES AND URATE DEPOSITS.—These distressing results of Uric and Lithic Acid developments, have been considered incurable and only to be palliated by using some of the celebrated Minerals' Water of European Springs. The Gettysburg Katalysa Water has been used with great success even in chronic cases, and in some instances a deposit of the joints actually removed. Pamphlets containing statements of wonderful cures, gratis at any of the Druggists' Stores where the Water is for sale.

FINANCIAL. 660 MILES OF THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD

Are now finished and in active operation. One hundred and twenty miles have been built in the last three months. More than twenty thousand men are employed, and this average of forty miles per month will be continued throughout the season, making NINE HUNDRED COMPLETED MILES by January 1 and it is now probable that the ENTIRE GRAND LINE TO THE PACIFIC WILL BE OPEN FOR BUSINESS IN 1861.

No other first-class railroad in the world has been built and equipped so rapidly as the Union Pacific which runs west from Omaha ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

The United States Government makes of this railroad a GREAT NATIONAL WORK, and aids its construction by very liberal grants of money and of lands. To further insure the speedy completion of the Road, the Company are authorized to issue their own FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS, PAYABLE IN GOLD.

Having thirty years to run, and having interest coupons payable semi-annually at the rate of six per cent. in gold. The principal, as well as interest, is made.

The Mortgage Bonds of nearly all other railroads in this country, are payable, principal and interest, in currency, and it is asserted, without fear of contradiction, that no other railroad company in the world, building so great an extent of road, issue bonds of equal value with the First Mortgage Bonds now offered for sale by the Union Pacific Railroad Co.

The price of these Bonds is now 102, and accrued interest from July 1, in currency. The Company believe that at this price their Bonds are the Safest and most Profitable Investment In the market, and they confidently expect that they will shortly command a higher premium than any similar security.

The Company reserve the right to advance the price at any time, and it is not in any order or receipt any subscriptions on which the money has not been actually paid at the Company's office before the time of such advance. Subscriptions will be received in Philadelphia by DE HAVEN & BROTHER, No. 40 S. THIRD Street, AND IN NEW YORK, W. PAINTER & CO., No. 36 S. THIRD Street, AT THE COMPANY'S OFFICE, No. 20 NASSAU Street, AND BY JOHN J. CINCIO & SON, BANKERS, No. 59 WALL Street.

And by the Company's advertised Agents throughout the United States. Remittances should be made in drafts or other mode payable in New York, and the bonds will be sent free of charge by return express. Parties subscribing through local agents will look to them for their safe delivery.

A PAMPHLET and MAP for 1868 has just been published by the Company, giving full information than is possible in an advertisement, respecting the Progress of the Work, the Resources of the Country traversed by the Road, the Means for Construction, and the Value of the Bonds, which will be sent free on application at the Company's office or to any of the advertised Agents.
