

Evening Telegraph PUBLISHED EVERY AFTERNOON (SUNDAYS EXCEPTED) AT THE EVENING TELEGRAPH BUILDING, NO. 106 & THIRD STREET.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1868. The Rebellion Alive. GOVERNOR WARREN, of Louisiana, has made a requisition on the President for troops to quell "domestic violence" in his State, a copy of which requisition was published in the special despatches of THE EVENING TELEGRAPH yesterday.

of the dominant faction. Their words were law. Hundreds of officials held appointments solely by their good will. Before them must come every office-holder for confirmation or rejection, and in the decision of his fate, these two men had a most potent influence. There was no position in the gift of the people to which they could not reasonably aspire. Holding power as they did, the reins of power, they betrayed the trust reposed in them, and to-day they reap its fruit. They are ostracized. A man without a country. A denizen of Great Britain, but not eligible to any office under the Government. In the prime of life cut off from all the paths of ambition and compelled to exhaust his great ability at the bar. The other under bonds of trial for treason, ineligible to any office. Disgraced and powerless, with not sufficient influence to secure the appointment of a messenger in one of the departments. And this fate is the end of a life of power and ambition. Surely, with such instances before us, the traitors of the future will be rare in America.

Bank Defalcations. A STATEMENT which we recently republished from a Boston journal purports to describe the origin of a heavy defalcation by a bank cashier. It claims that in the first instance business increased so rapidly that the clerks were unable to balance their accounts daily, and that a depositor, taking advantage of this neglect, largely overdraw his account, and succeeded in compromising the book-keeper, who finally rose to the position of cashier, and who continued to be the victim of the defaulter.

The Art of Living. THE French have a phrase, expressive and comprehensive, savoir vivre—to know how to live. Its use seems to convey the meaning expressed in Yankee dialect by "taking things as they come," the power of adaptation to circumstances, and, above all, that special accomplishment of the French—society ease.

The Rebel Generals of Tennessee Opposed to a New Rebellion. THE form of parole devised by General Grant, when Lee surrendered, which became the type of all the paroles subsequently granted, displayed great sagacity and statesmanship. It was at once humane to the defeated warriors, and protective of the interests of the national Government.

USAGES and rules, instead of being shackles, are so many safeguards, protecting the freedom of the individual from the encroachments of society. Customs apparently senseless can be almost invariably traced to some reasonable cause. Even those visits, so often condemned, in which a card is dropped or sent by a servant are a sufficient recognition, and maintain a bond of union among a large number of casual acquaintances.

The Ex-Senators from Mississippi. A BRIEF despatch from Liverpool announces the arrival of Jefferson Davis at that point. We sincerely congratulate the "stern statesman" on his being able to breathe an air uncontaminated by the presence of the American flag. His advent into the British realm will doubtless give his many noble friends an opportunity of testifying by their actions the sincere sympathy which they feel for his affliction, and the admiration they have entertained for his course.

AMUSEMENT NOTES. AT THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE Mr. McDonough's spectacle of the Black Orok is now fairly in good working order and every evening a large audience is drawn together to witness its performance.

THE DEMOCRACY talk widely about the large number of disfranchised whites in the South, and yet the maximum proportion of disfranchised is only about ten per cent. In Virginia it is about nine, in Georgia and North Carolina the same, in Florida and Louisiana still less, while in South Carolina, it is fourteen per cent.

THE BENNINGHOFF ROBBERY.

More About the Arrests—One of the Robbers is Discharged by a Canadian Court—Another Escapes to Europe. From the Pittsburg Commercial August 5. Detective Robert Hague, of this city, who for the past four months has been engaged in ferreting out the parties concerned in the great Benninghoff robbery, succeeded in connection with Officer David McKelvey in the arrest of an interesting party, who has been succeeded in this "job," returned home yesterday morning from his mission to Canada, not having been successful, however, as expected. Officer Hague left this city on Monday, the 20th of July, for Meadville, where he ascertained that a man named James Kapus, living in Philadelphia, who had been connected in some manner with the plot to rob Benninghoff, was willing to divulge what he knew of the matter and aid the Detectives in bringing to justice the principal parties engaged in the scheme. Officer Hague, accordingly repaired to Philadelphia, where he found Kapus, who told the officers all he knew about the matter, and consented to be a witness in the case, and use his efforts in the arrest of the other parties. He said that Jim Stever, the instigator of the plot, who is now in Europe, employed him, and for some person to take charge and carry out the plans arranged for the robbery, whom he knew had nerve enough to accomplish the work, and for his (Kapus') trouble, he was to get $10,000 in case of the success of the scheme. Kapus accordingly employed an Irishman named Hugh Donnelly or Donaldson, living in Philadelphia, to take charge of the "job." Donnelly subsequently informed Kapus that one of the parties he engaged to help him in carrying out the plot was an Englishman named Charles Wright, alias Gorman, who lived in Baltimore. After the robbery was accomplished, Kapus applied for his share of the booty—the $10,000 promised him—but it was not forthcoming, and he accordingly determined to divulge the plot. Donnelly and Wright, Kapus informed Officer Hague, were then (July last), in Canada.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN J. B. MCCONNELL.—The many friends of Captain J. B. McConnell will be interested in reading the following notice of his death from the New Orleans Times of July 24th: "We are grieved to learn of the sudden death of Captain J. B. McConnell, an old and noble man, who died at the age of 70 years, and was a third of a century. He was distinguished for his skill and daring as a navigator, and was for many years commander of the fastest vessels in the Gulf. The Havana, afterwards the Santa, was built under his superintendence, as were also the Mary Ellen and the T. Street, both famous sailing vessels. For the last three years he has acted as Inspector for the Crescent Mutual Insurance Company. He leaves a widow and two or three children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and an affectionate father."

Gold touched 50 yesterday. It is almost idle to endeavor to satisfactorily argue the question why it did so. We suppose the Alaska payment was the excuse of the bulls for running it up, but the political agitation of the country is such that it seems hardly necessary to seek for an excuse. Whether it will ascend yet higher, is a question which nothing but time can decide.

CHOLERA AND DIARRHEA have destroyed between 417,409 lives in England and Wales in the twenty years 1847-66—viz., 166,299 by cholera, and 251,110 by diarrhoea. The deaths to 1,000,000 of population in each year from cholera and diarrhoea respectively were, says the Times, in 1847, 40 and 676; 1848, 110 and 638; 1849, 303 and 1075; 1850, 50 and 645; 1851, 64 and 833; 1852, 77 and 984; 1853, 244 and 784; 1854, 1091 and 1091; 1855, 45 and 689; 1856, 40 and 734; 1857, 60 and 1111; 1858, 35 and 719; 1859, 45 and 942; 1860, 17 and 944; 1861, 25 and 952; 1862, 40 and 735; 1863, 45 and 708; 1864, 62 and 1133; 1865, 685 and 818. The returns for London show that in the twenty-one years, 1847-67, cholera and diarrhoea caused 83,247 deaths—viz., 34,511 by the former, and 48,736 by the latter; the deaths to 1,000,000 of population in each year from cholera and diarrhoea respectively being, in 1847, 55 and 698; 1848, 201 and 855; 1849, 612 and 1705; 1850, 55 and 813; 1851, 90 and 1083; 1852, 67 and 983; 1853, 359 and 1411; 1854, 428 and 1257; 1855, 58 and 804; 1856, 59 and 866; 1857, 81 and 1181; 1858, 49 and 769; 1859, 71 and 1211; 1860, 39 and 496; 1861, 60 and 928; 1862, 37 and 607; 1863, 55 and 821; 1864, 53 and 981; 1865, 65 and 1206; 1866, 184 and 1036; 1867, 78 and 954. The high mortality from diarrhoea among children still continues. Of the 300 deaths registered in London during the week ending Saturday, July 11, 278, or 93 per cent, were those of children under two years of age. Of the nineteen deaths registered from cholera fifteen were those of children.

HON. EDWIN M. STANTON.—The New York correspondent of the Chicago Journal writes: "I learn through a private source that ex-Secretary of War Stanton is to take the stump for Grant and Colfax. Owing to the unfavorable condition of his health, he will be able, however, to deliver but few speeches. The first of these will probably be delivered at Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Stanton's friends are certain that he will occupy a position in President Grant's Cabinet. Cassin M. Clay, I learn, through a private letter, has abandoned his purpose of coming home and stumping Kentucky for the Republican ticket. This is some what of a disappointment to him, inasmuch as he is a great admirer of both Grant and Colfax, and his heart is in the cause. He forwarded to Washington many months since, his resignation as Minister to Russia. No successor has, however, been appointed, and no action taken in the matter. He, therefore, expects to remain at St. Petersburg until the expiration of the present administration next spring. His health has been much better of late."

EMIGRANT ARRIVALS AT NEW YORK.—The semi-monthly returns of the Commissioners of Emigration show that the falling off in emigration this year, so far, although not great, as compared with last year, is not likely to be lessened by heavier arrivals. The entire number of emigrants arrived to August 5, of this year is 132,875; to same date of last year, 154,289; and to the same date of 1866, about 160,000. Thus a steady decrease is shown, notwithstanding the increased German emigration. Ireland is evidently giving out as a source of emigration.

HONORED ABROAD.—Mr. William J. McAlpine, formerly State Engineer of New York, has received a Telford medal, one of the three highest prizes awarded by the Institution of Civil Engineers in London. Mr. McAlpine is a member of that institution, which annually offers prizes for the best papers on scientific subjects. His theme was "the supporting power of piles, and the pneumatic process for sinking iron columns, practised in America."

AT THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE Mr. McDonough's spectacle of the Black Orok is now fairly in good working order and every evening a large audience is drawn together to witness its performance.
