ADDRESS

TO THE NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED,

WHOSE SUFFERINGS HAVE BEEN PROTRACTED,

AND WHOSE CASES REQUIRE PROMPT TREATMENT

TO RENDER EXISTENCE DESIRABLE.

If you are suffering, or have suffered, what effect does it produce upon your general health?

Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired?

Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart?

Do you live or your kidneys frequently get out of order?

Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspnoea?

Are your bowels constipated?

Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head?

Is your memory impaired?

Is your mind constantly dwelling upon this subject?

Do you feel dull, listless, moody, tired of company, or life?

Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody?

Does any little thing make you start or jump?

Is your sleep broken or restless?

Is the lustre of your eye as brilliant as the bloom on your cheek as bright?

Do you pursue your business with the same energy?

Do you feel so much confidence in yourself?

Are your spirits dull and flagging, gives to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia.

Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, the organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that these organs are always those in whom these organs are in perfect health? You never hear of such men complain of being melancholy, or nervousness of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them.

DISEASES OF THESE ORGANS REQUIRE THE USE OF A DIURETIC.

HELMHOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU

IS THE GREAT DIURETIC,

And is a Certain Cure for Diseases of the BLADDER,

KIDNEYS,

GRAVEL,

DROPSY,

ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

FEMALE COMPLAINTS,

GENERAL DEBILITY,

And all diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female.

From whatever causes originating and no matter how long standing.

If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity may ensue. The remedy of the Zincum Sulphuricum and the medicinal use of Chininum are ample witness to the truth of these assertions.

In Linnæus's Anatomy the most melancholy exhibition appears. The countenance is actually sallow and gaunt, the mouth is either open or closed, and the eyes are either staring or closed, and the face is either pale or flushed.

Should a sound of the voice occur, it is rarely articulate.

FIRST EDITION STONEWALL JACKSON

The Morale of the Southern General and His Soldiers—His Proposed Night Attack with Rebel Troops.

FOREIGN.

To the Editor of the Savannah (Ga.) News.—Mr. Edward A. Pollard, in an article on Stonewall Jackson, published in Pullman's Monthly for December, states that the General "once recommended a night attack to be made by a volunteer corps of picked men, armed with bow-knives, suggesting that the novelty and terror of such an apparition would paralyze the enemy."

Many of the papers throughout the South, the papers of this city among them, have published about this assertion, and have accused the author of falsehood and of an attempt to slander the memory of the illustrious dead. The writer of this communication is not an apologist for Mr. Pollard, but he does not think it right that an assertion of this kind should be pronounced a falsehood without an inquiry being made regarding the truth of it; and the object of this communication is to show that if Mr. Pollard was not fully true in his assertion, he had some ground for it.

The occasion referred to was immediately after the battle of Fredericksburg, Va. On the 11th of December, 1862, the Federal army occupying the northern bank of the Rappahannock river, upon the eastern side of which Fredericksburg is situated, opened fire upon the town with 140 pieces of artillery. A majority of the inhabitants left town when the bombardment commenced. Early in the morning the enemy, who were in the town, were firing across the river. A few well directed shots from our artillery broke the bridge, and the boats floated down the river, the men to be drowned or to be killed by the enemy's fire.

At night another and successful attempt to cross was made below the city at Lee's run, and in a few moments thereafter the town was occupied by the Federal army.

The 12th was spent in making preparations for the battle of the 13th, the result of which is too well known to be detailed here. Suffice it to say, that by dark on that day the enemy's troops, to the number of 60,000, torn, bleeding, and thoroughly disorganized, were crowding in the town.

While this situation the Confederate chief of staff, General Lee, has been frequently asserted, and never until lately contradicted. General Lee stated that he thought the enemy would make another attack, not believing that they had suffered so severely as were so broken up as after the battle.

To this opinion General Jackson disagreed, and suggested that the artillery of the First and Second Corps, his and Longstreet's, should be collected upon the hills in front of the town, and a heavy fire be opened upon it, and that the men of his corps be stripped to the waist to distinguish them from the enemy, and under cover of the artillery fire force their way into the town, and then, when the enemy was in the town, and crossing at the fords, which doubtless they would have attempted had an attack been made, for there was only one point at the town, which would not have afforded egress for the enemy, to open a heavy fire upon the rear of the town, which would have secured and all communication with them and the town cut off at the first dash made by our troops.

It has been asserted by officers high in authority that the suggestion above mentioned was made and adopted, and that Jackson especially stipulated that his troops should not be allowed to fire, but should only use the bayonet. It is a well-authenticated fact that an attack upon the town was contemplated by our chief of staff, and that the plan of the artillery was placed upon the heights in front of the breastworks behind which they had fought during the day's battle, with instructions to await a signal, and then to open fire upon the town, and to continue the fire until further orders, or until the yell of our troops would show that they were in town, in a position to be endangered by our fire.

The infantry of the First Corps were posted to defend the artillery (it was afterwards told by men of the Second Corps that they had received orders to strip to the waist), but the signal for the bombardment was never given, and orders came to retire within the breastworks, as the Confederates were retreating, and the men of Lee, who feared that the numerous inhabitants remaining within the town would suffer alike with the enemy.

No one can describe the horrors and butchery that would have attended that night bombardment and attack, as suggested by the dead hero who believed that "war meant lightning and lightning meant killing." The town, which in its day was one of the most beautiful and fertile in 8000 inhabitants, crowded with artillery, wagons, and about 600 men, besides the wounded and non-combatants. The enemy quietly recrossed the river on the night of the 13th, leaving the Confederates to count and another day's victory. An examination of the town, after their departure, showed that the men had been so numerous that the houses were not sufficient to contain them, and that they had burned down the houses and railings, and that they had set fire to the town, in order to make life in the streets and yards.

The writer of this communication has a most profound respect for the memory of General Lee, and he is not prepared to believe, with others, that the assertion made by Mr. Pollard, that the illustrious hero desired to make a night attack upon the enemy with his troops stripped, is a slander upon his memory; but he does believe that the assertion is a slander upon the memory of the illustrious hero, and that it is a slander upon the memory of the illustrious hero, and that it is a slander upon the memory of the illustrious hero.

The Governor says, in a message to the General Assembly, that the report of the investigation in time for action by the present General Assembly. He also urges the importance of providing for a thorough and comprehensive geological survey of the State. Many years ago a partial survey was prosecuted under many difficulties and embarrassments, which was fruitless of valuable results.

It is beyond a doubt that such a work as it is now practicable to carry out will, by making known the mineral resources of the State, and their development to an extent which will, within a few years, amply reimburse the State for its cost.
