

THE ARMY REUNION.

Lieutenant-General Sherman's Address of Welcome.

A grand event transpired last evening in Crosby's Opera House, Chicago, it being no less than a grand reunion of the commanders and soldiers of the Army of the Ohio, Tennessee, Cumberland, Georgia, and the Northwest.

Lieutenant-General Sherman, who made an address of welcome, as follows:— Fellow-Soldiers!—It is made my pleasing duty to address you this evening with words of welcome for deeds that have been done before you, on the city and from the country, from the town and the village.

You have come together, the representatives of the grand volunteer armies which responded to the country's call in her hour of danger, and fought on battlefields sometimes side by side, and sometimes far apart, yet always in unison.

At her bidding you returned to your homes as farmers and as mechanics, as artisans and citizens, and after a brief rest you have gathered in a better way upon a pinnacle, to look back toward that vale wherein you struggled so long, to point out to each other the spots of the greatest interest, and to live over again those hours and days and months of deepest anxiety, or of joy, or of grief, that you have lived, and to share the feelings of animosity and anger which you may have entertained, and that you have dropped into oblivion the bitter jealousies and rivalries of the hour.

You have rather gloried in the right to defend the flag of your country and land and sea. You have fought for the Union of our fathers (cheers) and for the Union of our country (cheers). No more self-satisfaction now animates you, but just pride in your own actions, and a deep, intense love of the comrades who stood by your side in the hour of deadly strife, and shouted with you in the hour of triumph.

You were reared in a better school, and taught to revere the Constitution of the whole country, and to love the wise, rational influences under which are assured the largest measure of security and happiness consistent with the safety of the world.

We believe that the will of the majority should rule; we believe that in this we have discovered a panorama for the ill that have from the earliest history of the world, ravaged and subjected the human family; but we have no objection to the general rule that minorities will not always bow passively to the decision of the majority, and that we must maintain the privileges of our birthright by force.

You may search history for a more flagrant violation of the right of faith than that which resulted in our civil war; never were people more ruthlessly, more unwillingly dragged into a long and bloody conflict, never was a nation so abruptly unprepared for a more flagrant violation of the danger was called cowardice, and the whole civilized world was taught to believe that the broad stripes on our flag were to be trailed in the dust, the stars sunk forever from view, and that our fair flag of Union was broken in beyond recall; our attempts to reason were laughed at, our laws were derided to scorn, public property was seized, and a war begun.

Men wanted their eloquence in vain attempts to avert the hour of battle, and the exhausted peaceability, and not until this time was the last arbitressorted to. The volunteer soldier then stepped forth into the field, and offered his life and his service to defend and maintain the Government against all its enemies, and swore an oath that Rebellion and anarchy should not rule the land, but that liberty, justice, and law should be restored to their rightful throne.

Many a time and oft you have lain upon the bare ground, with no canopy above you but that of heaven, with its hosts of glittering stars, and I know you are thoughtful of the time to come when you will be able to rest in security, surrounded by admiring friends, you would be crowned with a tress of light such as now haunts you! Dream and enjoy the hour. Four of you, coming out from each of our armies, depicting the scenes of the war, will address you and tell you of the deeds you have done, give them a willing and attentive ear, and when you go back to your homes tell them all that these armies, though dispersed in the sky, yet live in the hearts of the people, and that in the four years ago, when in the very death-grapple with the enemies of your country and of civilization.

In the name of the committee that has made the arrangements I extend to you all a cordial greeting—to the veterans of 1861 and to the recruit of 1862; yes, to the converts of the very last hour of grace. In the name of the people of Chicago, who have provided the means, I bid you welcome, and assure you that a high regard for you at every residence, and in the name of every patriot in the land I give you welcome, and tell you the lightness of your service is not worth enough to satisfy the craving hearts to know what is done here in this city.

The presence of the men about me, their high office, and the duties they have left to be with you here, all attest the interest and grandeur of the occasion, and in their names, too, comrades all, I bid you three welcome. (Tremulous cheers.)

After addresses by Generals Belknap, Grant, Cox, and Cooper, representing the different armies, the audience dispersed.

Booth's and Brougham's New Theatres. There can be no doubt that Booth's will at once take the stand of the representative metropolis—the one which will be visited by every stranger coming to the city, as inevitably as every visitor to Paris goes to the Grand Opera. Here the much-talked-of "legitimate drama" will be heard, enhanced with all the best points of the sensational, in the way of scenery and costumes.

Several of the "legitimate" comedies will be given, and the "legitimate" drama will be heard, enhanced with all the best points of the sensational, in the way of scenery and costumes. Several of the "legitimate" comedies will be given, and the "legitimate" drama will be heard, enhanced with all the best points of the sensational, in the way of scenery and costumes.

Both American and foreign stage mechanisms. The theatre is now so completely equipped that it is possible to get a fair idea of its proportions and of the general effect of the interior. On entering, it strikes the spectator as being small rather than spacious; and from its vast height it has been compared to a well. It is only when in the centre of the parquet, at the orchestra, or on the stage, that the real size of the house can be appreciated. It can then be seen that the tiers extend far back, offering an immense number of seats for the spectators. Booth's will be the most striking and elegant theatre in the city. Already in its unfinished state it makes the other theatres seem tawdry by comparison.

There is yet a great deal of work to do, and scaffolding still blocks up the auditorium. The seats have yet to be put in, the wall frescoed, and in the lower parts faced with composition marble, and all the gas fixtures to be put up; nor can any definite idea yet be formed as to the appearance of the proceedings.

The theatre will be opened on or about the 15th of January, 1869, with Romeo and Juliet, with Booth, of course, as the lover here.

Already the management is in a quandary about the arrangements for the opening night. The applications for seats from Boston, Philadelphia, and Baltimore—not to mention a few even from Chicago—if they were responded to would not leave room for a single citizen of New York in the vast auditorium. It is estimated that some ten thousand people will wish to attend the opening performance at Booth's theatre, and thus, of course, at least six thousand are doomed to disappointment.

The management is anxious to keep the tickets out of the hands of speculators, and to afford the public every facility for gaining entrance at the regular rates; but on an occasion like that of the opening of the establishment, it is deemed wiser to have a plan of procedure which is only fair and sensible plan of procedure would seem to be the selling of the seats by auction to the highest bidder. This plan is in some respects objectionable; yet it is, after all, as simple as any other, and in the present imperfect state of human nature, it is the most perfect state of forwardness as Booth's.

The auditorium is complete as far as the heavy work is concerned, and now awaits the final touches of those members of society whose function it is to provide chairs for the theatrical public. Brougham's theatre is on a small scale as compared with Booth's, but is well adapted for the class of entertainment which it will be devoted to. Mr. Brougham is the moving spirit of the whole concern, and he has behind him the important material aid which can emanate from a well-known Wall street capitalist and Erie City banker.

The date of the opening of Brougham's theatre seems to be as undeniably as the locality of the Will-o'-the-Wisp, or the precise moment when we put our good resolutions into effect, or practically inaugurate the era of personal reform when smoking is to be permanently abandoned.

The day has fitted from month to month, as the bird with "the tallman's glittering glory" did from tree to tree. In the meantime, the members of the company have been deprived of the luxury of appearing before the public, though it is fair to presume that the liberal management has borne this fact in mind, and that the ambitious histrionics suffer only in vanity and in no more material point. The company, by the way, includes some excellent performers, Mrs. J. J. Prior, a conscientious and really good actress, will be the leading lady. Miss Kate Newton is also among the engagements, as well as Edie Gerson, Clara Fisher, Mrs. Eckhardt, Mrs. Winter, and the golden-haired California nugget, Annie Firman. Among the performers of the opposite sex are Mr. Edmonds (genre premier), Mr. Charles Hale, Mr. Arthur Mathison, Mr. Lamb, and, of course, Mr. Brougham himself. The leader of the orchestra is Mr. Eckhardt. The house will be opened, it is confidently expected, during the present century, with an original comedy by Mr. Brougham, and an extravaganza of a novel and highly pleasing character.
