

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT SUPPER TABLE SERIES

A Diet for Mental Dyspepsia—A Salve for Small Salaries, AND A SALVE FOR BAD CUTS. The whole carefully compounded and put up expressly for Family Use.

BY OUR SERIES EDITOR. NUMBER COXIV.

A NIGHT IN THE ENEMY'S CAMP

A TALE OF BOARDER LIFE

The Results to the Editor of the Prevalence of Party Spirit.

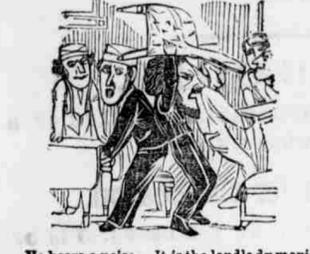

His Incarceration and Sufferings.

The Whole Illustrated with Cuts on the Parity.

Bound in Paper. 3mo. 13th.

The Series Editor is discovered writing up some new "Joe Millers." Let us have Peace.

He hears a noise. It is the landlady moving the furniture out of the dining-room. Signs of a coming party.

The confusion increases. Horrors! they are bringing in additional seats.

He looks out of the window. His worst fears are realized. The musicians have arrived.

And soon the guests begin to arrive. No mistaking the signs now. His article must go in type in the morning.

The musicians begin. The party spirit runs high. But the worst remains to be told. It is just underneath his room, and will not break up till morning.

The position of the Series Editor when last seen, having abandoned his writing, and trying to get asleep.

Why is a state horse heavy?—He is read (led). Why is a leaky barrel like a coward?—It runs. Why is a deal door like a fox's coat?—It is fir. Why is a jailor like a musician?—He flingers the keys.

Why is money like a whip?—It makes the mare go. Why is a blind beggar like a wig?—He is curled (curled).

What celebrated author does an infant remind one of?—Young. Why is a man on a gibbet like a watch?—He hangs in chains.

Why is a wainscoted room like a reprieve?—It saves hanging. Why is going to the play like last week?—It is past time (pastime).

What makes everybody sick but those who swallow it?—Flattery. Why is venison more costly than other meat?—It is always deer (dear).

When may we think a woman is past recovery?—When she is speechless. Why are slanders greater sufferers than other people?—They have most pain.

Why is the Czar of all the Russias like Christmas?—He is an enemy to Turkey. Why is a schoolboy who is beginning to read like learning itself?—He is learning.

What question is that to which you must answer yes?—What does Y E S spell? Why is a greedy man like another with a short memory?—He is always for getting (forgetting).

Why is a gallow's the last refuge of a condemned man?—He has nothing else to depend upon. Why is an incorrect writer like a peace-making man?—Because he rights wrong (writes wrong).

Why are fish in a hearty state like fish made to imitate them?—They are hearty fish all (artificial).

Why is it said, "It is better to have a bad wife than a good one"?—She brings one soonest to repentance.

Old Nickel is, as may be guessed, of a sulphurous origin. Zinc is very useful to literary men, for it's called that they write with. The oxyd of zinc is called calamine, for which reason, when it is dug up, a chorus of "My dear boys, it's a calamine!" is invariably sung by the miners.

Among all these minerals we have not mentioned the philosopher's stone, because it is a substance that has never been found in any mine, nor yet found out. Oceans of philosophers have tried to discover it, but in vain.

The Paris butchers sell everything—bear's meat, badgers, swans, cranes, owls, cormorants, and hedgehogs. Not content with this variety, one enterprising tradesman hung a monkey at his door.

"Is that animal good to eat?" asked a customer. "Capital: you never eat a better pasty than it makes?"

"But what does the meat taste like?" "Oh, whatever you wish—beef, pork, or mutton; the monkey imitates everything."

After a recent snow storm the following was perpetrated by a beginner in poetry:—

Sooty, sootily while we slept, Came the snow flakes gently down; Came and sorrowfully wove A shroud of white for the buried town; We rose with feelings grand and intense, And hired a middle-aged Anglo-African shoveller to clean our sidewalk off for fifty cents.

INQUISITIVENESS. We have a post office incident too good to omit. An up country girl stepped to the window of the post office in a Long Island village a few days since and asked for a letter.

"To what name?" was the inquiry. "What name?" inquired the damsel in a rage. "You're mighty inquisitive, to be sure!" and out she flounced.

"Oh, tell me where is fancy bred?" She asked; and getting bold, She placed her little darling head And chin upon my shoulder.

And I, with no more poetry in My soul than in a Quaker's, Replied, with blushing grin, "You'll find it at the baker's."

As a criminal was being led to the scaffold he stopped and asked the executioner what day of the week it was.

"Monday," was the answer. "O dear!" sighed the culprit, "that's just my luck: the week is beginning badly."

"Sambo, where's your master?" "Gone out."

"Has he left off drinking yet?" "Oh yes, he leave off two, three times dis mornin'!"

A new hand in a Boston shop made terribly rough work in shaving a customer. When the hairing ended the victim asked:—"Did you ever shave any body before?"—"Yes, sir."

"Ah! did the man live?" "A young girl once asked:—"Do tell me why it is Cupid continues, so long after his invention of gunpowder, to use arrows?"

"To avoid the report of firearms, which would attract the jealous," was the reply.

A RIDDLE. For'ted long ago, yet made to-day— I'm most in use when others sleep; What few would like to give away, And none would ever like to keep.—A bed.

The young lady who visited a photographer recently, and desired him to take her with an expression as if composing a poem, does not reside in this vicinity.

POSSIBLY NOT.—Is it an original remark that the "estate" of matrimony may be said to be in a "ring fence?"

The next style of bonnet to be a head and two inches of ribbon fastened with a bead-pin. The bonnet will be strictly for use not ornament.

CONSOLE NOT DISCERNIBLE.—Invisible green and blind man's buff.

LITERATURE.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

THINK AND ACT. A series of articles pertaining to men and women, work and wages. By Virginia Penny. Published by Claxton, Remsen & Haffelinger.

This volume is the work of a woman who is earnestly interested in the most important feature of the woman question—a feature, by the way, that some of the most ardent advocates of women's rights apparently consider as of secondary importance to some others; as the right of suffrage, for instance. Some time ago we noticed in these columns a useful work by Miss Penny entitled "The Employment of Women," which was designed to show women who complain that there are no fields of labor open for them, what had been done and what could be done by their sex. The work now before us has the same object in view, and it enters into a discussion of the whole subject of women's work and wages in a clear, practical, and common-sense manner. The subject is one that is forcing itself upon the attention of the public more and more every day, and upon a satisfactory solution of the social problem involved in it depends in a great measure the cause of virtue, religion, and morality. Miss Penny quotes freely from all authors who have said anything bearing upon the matter under consideration, and her evident desire has been to set forth her subject in the most forcible and impressive manner, rather than to win laurels for herself as an author.

The book is one that those who are interested in the welfare of the working women of the country—a large and constantly increasing class—should read; and although all may not agree upon every point with the author, her views and opinions are in every way worthy of respectful consideration. —From J. B. Lippincott & Co. we have received "The Gain of a Loss," a novel by the author of "The Last of the Cavaliers." Published by Leypoldt & Holt. This is a well-written and very interesting story of English life, which the admirers of good fiction will appreciate. A decidedly religious feeling pervades the work, the characters are drawn with much skill, the plot is well developed, and the moral is good.

The same house sends us "The Life of William Ewart Gladstone," one of Cassell's representative biographies. Published by Peit & Dillingham, New York. This work contains some particulars about the English premier which have never been published before, and in the space of 128 pages it gives all the leading events of his career as a scholar and statesman. Price, fifty cents.

—From Claxton, Remsen & Haffelinger we have received "Glennair, or Life in Scotland," by Helen Hazlett. This story is somewhat crude, but it shows decided ability and promises well for what the author will do in the future. Portions of it are very well written, but at times a desire to be forcible and an inclination for fine writing have tempted the author into exaggerations which mar the symmetry of the work.

Messrs. Claxton, Remsen & Haffelinger also send us "Out of the Streets," a story of New York life, by Charles Gayler; published by Robert M. De Witt, New York. This story originally appeared in Frank Leslie's Chimney Corner, when it was so successful that the author was induced to publish it in book form. "Out of the Streets" is addressed to a popular audience, and it will doubtless find a multitude of appreciative and not too critical readers.

—Turner Brothers & Co. send us "The Triumph of Criticism," by M. B. Craven; "Griffith Gaunt," by Charles Reade; and Our Boys and Girls, Oliver Optic's magazine for Saturday, March 20, 1867.

"The Triumph of Criticism" is a "critical and paradox work on the Bible and our theological idea of the Deity." Mr. Craven disputes the received doctrine of the Divine origin of the Scriptures, and he goes over the same ground, and in much the same manner, as other writers who have treated the subject from the same standpoint. He is particularly severe upon Moses, whose teachings and religious system he considers entirely obsolete and unadapted to modern civilization. Jesus Christ he admires as a reformer who overturned the Mosaic law, but whose teachings are, on the whole, not adapted to the requirements of this advanced age. Mr. Craven does not write as ferociously or as learnedly as some other authors who have preceded him in the same field, and it is doubtful whether his "ancestomous attack on our highly cherished and time-honored religious theories" will have the effect of utterly demolishing them and effecting a moral and religious revolution, as he seems to expect that it will. Unable to find a publisher who was willing to undertake the responsibility of his entire work, the author has concluded to hazard himself the publication of the "Prolegomena," or prefatory part of the work, as a sample of the whole.

"Griffith Gaunt," published by Harper & Brothers, is embellished with all the original illustrations, is nicely printed in clear, readable type, and is sold for the low price of twenty-five cents. Oliver Optic's magazine, Our Boys and Girls, is an attractive weekly, filled with entertaining stories, sketches, and poetry. Subscription price, $2.50 per annum. Published by Lee & Shepard, Boston.

—D. Ashmead sends us the first volume of the cheap edition of Sir Walter Scott's Poetical Works, published by W. W. Swayne, New York. The entire work will be completed in five monthly volumes at 25 cents each. The first volume contains "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" and "Marmion," with the author's introduction and notes.

"The House of Cards," received from the same house, is an interesting novel by Mrs. Cashel Hoey, which was first issued in America in Littell's Living Age, when it attracted much attention. Published by Little & Gay, Boston. Price 75 cents.

—From John E. Potter & Co. we have received "John Smith's Fanny Adventures on a Cruise," by A. F. Hill. Mr. Hill has written several popular works, and he now travels somewhat out of the usual line, and looks at the misfortunes of a gallant defender of his country from a comic rather than from a sentimental point of view. "John Smith" loses his leg at Antietam, but instead of repining he laughs at fate, and looks at life from a humorous point of view. Some of the adventures are ludicrous in the extreme, and they will doubtless serve to add to the already extended fame of the redoubtable hero, "John Smith."

—The University is the title of a new literary monthly devoted to the interests of the University of Pennsylvania. The editors are Henry Badd, Jr., and Charles F. Ziegler, and the magazine starts with an attractive series of articles, which are superior in merit to the majority of college literature. Professor Little contributes "A Memoir of Rev. William Smith, D. D.," the first Provost of the College of Philadelphia, the original name of the present University; "Antiquities of Bloomerism" is a learned and entertaining paper by Professor Morton; J. G. R. McKillop, A. M., inquires "What is Philology?" "In War Time" is a poem by G. P. A.; Henry Badd, Jr., B. A., discourses about "Types of the Devil"; and Professor Oswald Suidenstieker contributes a sketch of Dr. Augustus Schleicher, the eminent German philologist. The other articles are of interest, and the editors announce for the numbers that are to follow several papers by distinguished gentlemen. The object of the magazine is to promote the interests of the University, and we hope that it will be a pecuniary as well as a literary success.
