

NEWS SUMMARY.

The counsel for Dr. Schoeppe has applied to Chief Justice Thompson for a writ of error to the Supreme Court, that the testimony in his case may be reviewed. Attorney-General Brewster, while of opinion that no error had been committed by the Court which tried him, thinks the cause of justice requires that he should have an opportunity of being heard, and therefore consents to the issuing of the writ, returnable on the first Monday of January, 1870.

EGYPT.

The Viceroy Accepts the Turkish Ultimatum.—The Imperial Conditions. Paris, Dec. 8.—The Viceroy of Egypt has yielded to the ultimatum of the Sultan and accepted all the conditions it imposes.

To-day we submit to our readers the text of the Sultan's ultimatum. Previous to its reception the Viceroy wrote to the Grand Vizier of Turkey a note, in which he said:

Fully sensible of the successive favors he has received from the Sultan, he has always regulated his conduct according to the will and orders of his Majesty. The withdrawal of the Egyptian troops from Candia took place, he declares, because of the great expense, which Egypt could not afford, and as the result of understanding previously come to with the Porte. If he addressed invitations to a few foreign sovereigns to attend the opening of the Suez Canal, it was only in virtue of the high position which he fills under the gracious auspices of the Sultan, and the reception which he met with at the European courts was similarly due to the benevolent favor with which his Majesty has deigned to honor him.

As to his alleged disrespect towards the ambassadors of his Majesty during his recent tour, he entirely disclaims having been wanting in proper consideration to their Excellencies. The mission of Nubar Pasha is neither a new incident nor unknown to the Porte, which even furnished that personage with letters of introduction when he first set out. The development of Egyptian commerce and the settlement of a large number of foreigners in the country have led to frequent litigious disputes, and the object of Nubar's mission was merely to effect some modifications in the faulty system of jurisdiction now in force within the limits of the privileges accorded to Egypt by its gracious sovereign. Copying to the charge of having squandered the revenues of the country, his Highness compares the present situation of Egypt with that in which he found it on his accession to power, and argues that the result shows a sensible progress in all directions. He instances the creation of an assembly of native delegates to control the revenue and expenditure, and to supervise the administration; the numerous schools which have been founded; and of the youths whom he has sent to Europe to be perfected in the sciences, in literature, in arts, and in industry.

As to agriculture, this, he affirms, has prospered greatly; 320,000 feddans of previously untilled ground have been brought under the plow. The settlement of foreigners in the country, even so far south as the Soudan, and the increased activity in the old and new ports, all combine to show the progress which trade and agriculture have made, as also the general security for life and property which exists under his rule. Further, the heavy debts bequeathed to him by Saïd Pasha, the difficulties which have been occasioned by the payment of so many indemnities, the cost of constructing railways and telegraph lines, and the great outlay occasioned by the Suez Canal—all all these he considers, and if he be borne in mind at the same time that the charges of administration (salaries, etc., included) are regularly paid, it must be admitted that the finances are carefully managed, and that the population is not overburdened with taxes.

As to the increase of the armament, he merely wishes to keep this abreast of modern inventions, and the cost of doing this is well justified by his sincere desire to be in a position to prove useful to the empire—as his conduct during the Cretan revolt clearly proved. In conclusion, his Highness expresses the hope that these frank explanations will remove from the mind of the Sultan the unfavorable impression produced by wholly unjust accusations.

To this the Sultan replied by the despatch in the month of September last of the ultimatum which has just been accepted by the Viceroy. It reads thus:—

First. That the effective of the Egyptian army shall be reduced to the limits fixed by the firman of 1856, and that the uniform of the troops shall be in exact conformity with those of the Turkish army.

Second. That the breech-loaders ordered in Europe, or which have already been delivered in Egypt, as also all the iron-clad vessels of war, shall be sold or ceded to the Porte at their cost price.

Third. That the Egyptian budgets shall be submitted yearly for the approval of the Sultan.

Fourth. That no negotiations whatever shall be carried on by the Viceroy with the European powers, except through the Ambassadors of the Porte.

Fifth. That the Khedive shall contract no further loan without a special firman from the Sultan.

Sixth. That Tanzimat shall receive its complete application and execution in Egypt; and Seventh. That his Highness shall reduce the taxes to the figure at which they stood upon his accession to power.

The terms of this ultimatum, with urgent advice to accept them, were telegraphed to the Viceroy by M. Bourée, the French Minister in Turkey, even before Talaat Pasha had left Constantinople with the text of the document.

SAVONAROLA. A Monument in Florence to the Great Papal Antagonist. We have had translated for THE TELEGRAPH the following programme of an influential committee formed recently in Florence for the erection of a monument to Savonarola:—

"The 23d of May, 1498, burned in the flames which priestly wrath kindled Jerome Savonarola, the great reformer whom the Florentines revered as a father, loved as a son; and yet they let him burn; for Rome then had the power to so brutalize the people as to make them accomplices in their own greatest wrongs."

"Noble Florence respected, perished, applauded, the judgment given by a Robber-Poisoner-Pontiff, declaring faithless to the law of Christ the austere monk of the cell at San Marco, and his ashes were scattered to the winds, and after four centuries there was wanting a stone to prove him a traitor who so loved his country and died for it."

"Since tyrannies are all united, it is not without reason that despotic Rome has been made to sustain, unshrinking it, the glare of the King-Priest. When the poor friar spoke of political liberty, he called forth the thunder of the Church of Rome."

DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT REMEDIES.

WILL NOT ONLY CURE CONSUMPTION, BUT THEY WILL PREVENT IT.

When I assert that Consumption can be cured, I mean precisely what I say. It could be superfluous for me to argue that a lung cure is totally impossible, but I do hereby declare that many of the cases of Consumption pronounced hopeless and incurable by the faculty can be, as a matter of course, cured. In the course of many years, over a very extended practice, I have frequently had opportunities of verifying the truthfulness of this assertion.

Patients have applied to me for relief when physicians and friends had abandoned all hope, and though not always successful, it has been my fortunate lot to rescue many such from what appeared to be inevitable death.

Patients have been brought to me who were afflicted with violent racking coughs, heavy and exhausting night-sweats, which crept over the body and prostrated it, and depressed the mental faculties; with frames that were emaciated and weakened down almost to absolute prostration; with cheeks on which the hectic fever was always visible; with digestive organs impaired, and unable to perform their natural functions properly; with loss of appetite and voice, all unfavourably indicating the presence of deep-seated disease. These patients, however, were afflicted, and pronounced by their medical advisers to be in the last hopeless stage of Consumption, as indeed they were, have sought my counsel and my remedy. They were amiable spirits, and soon awakened the deepest sympathies of all who saw them.

Friends regarded them with mournful solicitude, and the stranger as he passed them would involuntarily exclaim:—"Alas! poor creature, he is not long for this world." For such far gone patients I have frequently been called upon to prescribe. When all other so-called remedies failed to check the onward march of the great destroyer, then SCHENCK'S PULMONARY PILLS, SCHENCK'S SWEETENED TONIC, and SCHENCK'S PILLS FOR BRONCHITIS were called for, and it is a heartfelt satisfaction to me to know that their help was not always sought in vain. If there be those who have doubts as to the truthfulness of these statements, let them read the following testimonials in my new pamphlet for 1870, just published, and furnished without charge to all who make application for them. These testimonials will be found the convincing statements of prominent ladies and gentlemen who, when all other medicines had failed to prove efficacious, had

THE COURAGE to try Schenck's remedies, and whose faith and courage were rewarded by a PERMANENT CURE. Some of these desperate cases, it is true, were not cured, but they were those who applied for relief when human help was unavailing, and nothing short of a miracle could have wrested them from the grasp of death.

UNSUSPECTED TESTIMONY of T. S. Shelton, of New York, page 23 of my new pamphlet; of Mrs. Lanning, of Philadelphia, on same page; and of Mrs. Charles Hill, of New York, on the same page, as well as of many others that precede and follow them, and then ask yourself whether CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED, or whether, as so many prominent medical men have boldly declared, it is incurable? Reader, let the fact be indelibly impressed upon your mind that Consumption is

AN INDISSOLUBLE DISKASE. It does not attack the system openly and boldly, but makes its advances by stealthy and insidious, but none the less certain, steps. Having SELECTED ITS VICTIM, it presses him with relentless hostility to the grave, unless such remedies are resorted to as will serve to check its destructive career. How few there are who can be made to believe that they are consumptive until the racking cough, the prostrating, emaciating, and wasting frame, hectic cheeks, wasted strength, lost appetite, and clammy night sweats declare by tokens too plain to be misunderstood that Consumption has laid its last and secured a firm foothold, which it determines to maintain to the last gasp of the unhappy sufferer! Its approaches are quiet and almost imperceptible; but they are steady and unrelenting. Step by step it makes its fell way into the system, and it is only when it has secured full and complete possession, and is throwing off its disguises, it presents itself in all its FEARFUL TRUTHFULNESS. If people would but for a moment reflect—if they would but endeavor to obtain a more thorough knowledge of their own physical system, and would pay close attention to its wants and requirements, how much less fearful and extensive would be the prevalence of PULMONARY DISEASE!

But the majority of people will not give this important subject more than a mere passing thought, and sometimes even not that. "Kiss my riverrun" is an ancient axiom which should be passing through every man and woman's heart, not merely in regard to the spiritual but to the physical nature also. How few there are, comparatively speaking, who have anything like a proper conception of either, and yet how vitally important it is that we should be familiar with both! Occasionally an individual is met with who has studied the wonderful construction of the human body, and who is familiar with not merely the location of the various organs, but with their functions also. Such persons, unless they are absolutely indifferent to their health and happiness, give heed to the warnings that nature gives. The short, hacking cough, one of the post-

PRECURSORS OF CONSUMPTION, instead of being regarded as a matter of trivial importance, becomes with them a subject of serious concern. They contrast its characteristics with those of the cough that results from a slight or even a severe cold, and their familiarity with the anatomy enables them to detect the marked difference, and unless they are reckless of the sad consequences, they at once

SEEK FOR A REMEDY, and where this is done, as it always should be, in the incipient stages of Consumption, promptly and judiciously, the evil is almost certain to be averted. This should be the course pursued by those who have NATURALLY WEAK BREASTS, who are liable, as people say, "To take cold easily," and whose physical conformation indicates a tendency to PULMONARY DISEASE.

Were this matter attended to as it should be, nineteenth of the cases of Consumption would be obviated, and the charge of the American people be shorn of its terrors.

ATTEND TO THAT COUGH, and note its progress. If it is dry and hacking, if the secretions of the mouth and throat are partially suspended, and the mucous membrane becomes swollen, its color redder than natural, and its sensibilities partially deadened, it is time to adopt precautions for its removal. As the cough progresses in severity, if there is a tendency to chilliness, and generally more or less fever, difficulty of breathing, a painful sense of oppression on the chest, constant coughing, and a light coating of the tongue, rest assured of the fact that you

HAVE NO TIME TO LOSE. When such a cough sets in, let it be your first object to remove it. Do not permit it to continue its course unchecked. You may recover without the use of medicines, but in this country the chances are that you will not, and this apparently trifling cough may carry you

TO THE GRAVE. In such cases those who will can always find a safe and sure remedy. Use Schenck's Pulmonary Syrup regularly in moderate doses, and a box of Schenck's Pills, and you will find relief. Use the Pills freely, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred

THE COUGH WILL BE REMOVED. Hundreds and thousands have tried these remedies and to-day are living, healthy witnesses of their efficacy. Columns could be filled with testimonials of THE WONDERFUL CURES performed by them. But this would be unnecessary. Be advised in time, and see to it that the rotten opportunity is not frittered away, and that the disease which is annually sweeping thousands to a PREMATURE GRAVE does not obtain such a foothold as will render its eradication almost or absolutely an impossibility. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. A cough that is fully removed by the use of Schenck's Pulmonary Syrup and Schenck's Mandrake Liver Pills will not, unless the individual is totally reckless and indifferent to his or her health, ever return, or at least not speedily, for the reason that the action of these thoroughly scientific medicines leaves the system in a condition which aims

BIDS DEFIANCE TO DISEASE. They fortify it by bringing the stomach and liver into such a perfectly healthy condition that the attacks of disease become powerless. Such are their peculiar merits, and I trust these merits have been offered to those who are suffering from incipient pulmonary attacks. Try them, and you will find that thousands have found relief before you, and thousands are doing so today.
