THE PARTY OR THE RING—WHICH?

For weeks past every Republican paper of any influence in this city has been urging the importance and necessity of making good nominations for the public offices to be voted for next October. The Inquirer, the North American, the Press, the Evening Bulletin, and THE EVENING TELEGRAPH have all represented in strong terms the dangers of defeat that would certainly ensue if the Republican ticket were to be made up of the names of well-known trading politicians who were most eagerly seeking the nominations, for there is every indication that the Democrats will put their best men forward and make a desperate effort to win a complete victory. Who the aspirants for the Republican nominations were was no secret, and it was neither necessary nor expedient to mention their names, it being sufficient that they and their backers should understand clearly who the warnings given were intended for. These warnings were understood, but in spite of the nearly unanimous protest of the Republican press of Philadelphia a complete "Ring" ticket was nominated yesterday. With one or two exceptions, there is not a single man among those nominated to represent the Republican party of Philadelphia who has not a well-founded reputation as a professional politician of the lowest class, who has not brought discredit upon the party and aided in destroying its influence. But for these men and others like them such a thing as a Democratic victory in this city could not even be hinted at, for the great principles of the Republican party are as dear to-day to the hearts of a majority of our citizens as they ever were; the work of the party is not yet done, and its ultimate triumph is certain unless it is deliberately destroyed by the iniquities of those who, about election times especially, profess to be its most ardent supporters. One of the individuals nominated yesterday, in the course of his speech to the convention which has placed him before the people as the Republican representative of law, order, and justice, uttered one sentence which we heartily endorse. He said:—"The Republican party is a thing of life and hope. Should any one attempt to put it down, down they will go." The Republican party most assuredly is a thing of life and hope, or it never would have survived the infliction upon it of such men as the speaker of the above-quoted sentence and others like him, and retained any expectation of securing the support of honest men in the future. Again and again has the party succeeded in at least partially freeing itself from the blood-suckers who were draining it of its vitality, and it will be able to do so again and again until its appointed work is accomplished, and there will no longer be a necessity for its existence. Those who seek to put the Republican party down will most assuredly destroy themselves in the attempt, but the real assailants of Republicanism are not the Democrats, who would be powerless but for the traitors in the Republican camp, are not those who in the darkest hour of our national peril loyally supported the great principles of the party, are not those who year after year urge that men of unblemished character, unimpeachable integrity, and first-rate ability shall be nominated as the Republican candidates for municipal, State, and national offices, but they are rather men who make a trade of politics, who have no principles except to gain office by any possible means, and to fill their pockets at the public expense. It is this class of men that obtained the nominations yesterday; and if they are the real representatives of the Republicans of Philadelphia, then it is time for the Republican party to die. They do not represent the Republican party, however, and the time has passed when the wire-pullers who manipulate primary elections and who manage nominating conventions can set themselves up as the masters of the independent voters who think for themselves, and who do not consider themselves acquitted of their responsibilities to themselves and the community at large by blindly casting their ballots without regard to the character of the names upon them. The delegate elections on Tuesday were notoriously managed in the interests of certain men. Those who voted did so for candidates who had already been determined upon by the "Ring," and both at the elections and in the conventions money was spent like water to accomplish the exact result now before the public. Notwithstanding these facts, one of the candidates—a man who was forced off the Republican ticket three years ago by indignant public opinion—had the assurance to say to the men who nominated him:—"You came here at the dictation of your own consciences and the votes of the people, who instructed you how to vote." Truly the farce would be exceedingly funny, if it were not for the tragedy in the background; if it were not that great political principles are being played with, if it were not that a scandalous attempt is being made to force the citizens of a great municipality to accept for their most important public officers a gang of men who are the associates of the lowest and vilest of the community; who are notorious alike for their corruption and their ineptitude, and who have absolutely no good traits whatever to recommend them. If the future of the Republican party depends upon the election to office of such as these, Heaven help it! It does not depend, however; and we ask timid-hearted voters, who may be disposed to support the ticket nominated yesterday, under the threat that if it is defeated next October Pennsylvania and Philadelphia will probably be lost to the Republican party at the Presidential election of next year, to earnestly and fairly consider for themselves whether the utter and total defeat of the "Ring" ticket this year will not in reality make the party stronger and better organized for the great contest of 1872? The contest now is not so much between the Democrats and Republicans as it is between the Republican party and the iniquitous ring of professional politicians who are determined either to rule or ruin, but the success of the ring will be the ruin of the party, and with the present nominees a Democratic victory next October, hard as it will be for the true supporters of Republican principles to stomach, will do more towards purifying the party and strengthening it for the great national contest of next year than anything that could happen except the enforced withdrawal of some of the candidates nominated yesterday and the substitution of better men in their places. The questions now presented for the consideration of the voters of Philadelphia are, Shall the public offices be filled with notoriously corrupt men? shall the Democrats be allowed to achieve a nominal victory because the Republicans do not care enough for their party to prevent it from being prostituted to the base uses of men who care nothing but for their own aggrandizement? shall the "Ring" or the party rule?—and upon the manner in which these questions are answered will depend not only the cause of good government in this city and in the State, but the future prospects of the Republican party, which next year will be called upon to fight for the preservation of the great national principles which it has upheld for the last decade against both open and secret traitors to the cause of democratic liberty. The Democratic party will neither this year nor the next be able to achieve success except through the corruption in the Republican party, and if the work of purification is to be done at all, now is the time to do it. The plain issue is before the citizens of Philadelphia—the Republican party or the "Ring"—which will they have?

FISK'S RELIGION.

One of the most profoundly pathetic things we have experienced lately came to us yesterday in the shape of a homely business telegram. Fisk, Jr., was the sender thereof, and in stating it we feel that the case may seem to be weakened at the start;—but the reader must not be too hasty. The precious ambergris is imbedded in the head of the whale, the costly pearl is nourished upon the breast of the unresponsive oyster, and why may there not be something good in Fisk, Jr.? These, at least, are the facts:—Mr. Fisk's gorgeous regiment is in Boston. The commander is in New York, having such multitudinous demands upon his time that he can devote but a portion of it to military affairs. But after he has deserted his command, and retreated in good order to the metropolis, there comes a wail from his adjutant, who is bearing the heat and worry of the day at the Hub. Fisk, Jr., is informed that his company of Erie Railroad employes is denied permission to worship in Boston next Sunday in any public place, except forthwith—the streets. Thereupon he writes in haste to the Mayor of Charlestown, detailing the awful thing that Boston has done, and praying that the regiment may be allowed to march into his (Charlestown's) "hospitable city," and that the men may there indulge in that worship of their Creator that has become such a necessity to them that they cannot and will not do without it. Here we see the result of early piety. Here the lessons taught Fisk at his mother's knee crop out, and in such tremendous devotional flowers that the eye aches in looking at them. Fisk's finance, railway management, and conducting of the naked drama are all wonderful, but his religion is the finest thing of all. It is so evident there is no humbug about it. He is so earnest, so straightforward, "I am only this moment informed"—he abruptly, but forcibly, commences, in speaking of the outrage to the body of religious men under his command—and the impetuosity of a noble nature may be recognized. An instinct tells him what to do. Those things hammered into him at his mother's knee come into play, and all in a white heat he writes. And yet we are at a loss to know what religion Mr. Fisk professes. From his connection with the military he may be a Fire-worshipper, but his patronage of leg theatricals leaves all in doubt. But it is a free country. The Irishman's religion was his mother's religion, and it was that she "tink whiskey in her tay," and it may very well be that Mr. Fisk's religion is that he takes brandy in his coffee. Of course Fisk, Jr., does not think it worth while to tell the Mayor of Charlestown why Boston desired to be excused from any exhibition of the regiment's religion. Probably a vast lot of marching and music and fess and feathers was insisted on. It will be difficult to make people believe that old Boston would deny a man, or a body of men, any reasonable liberty, and if it was any less a person than Fisk who said it they would scout the idea. As long as he has set these Sunday observances, however, he can do no less than attend them, and it might add to the attraction if he were to take with him some of his opera bouffe favorites.

MR. SUMNER AND THE GENEVA BOARD.

It is reported that the President is likely to appoint Mr. Sumner on the Geneva Board of Arbitrators for the settlement of the Alabama claims. A rather neat question is here presented to the administration, and the sequel will be awaited with interest. If the appointment is made, it may be taken as an attempt to heal dissensions in the Republican party, and to conciliate those individuals in it who felt aggrieved at the alleged indignity put by the President and his friends upon the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts. It is not easy to believe that Mr. Sumner could so influence any considerable number of Republicans, but we have been repeatedly assured that such is the case, and the President, in his very uncertain hold on public favor, may think by this movement to arrest a serious disaffection in his ranks. On the other hand, it is quite clear that if the distinguished Senator is put on the board, he will undoubtedly knock it so high that nothing will afterwards be seen of it. His systematic and well-known opposition to the treaty, as well as the perhaps unreasonable but undoubtedly sincere dislike of the English people to the Senator, alike insure this effect. Such is the interesting dilemma. Shall the contrivance we intimate be invited for the sake of making up with the Summer faction? Most sensible men would answer very decidedly in the negative, but there is such weakness in the management of our public affairs that it is impossible to say what may or may not be the result.

NOTICES.

A "NEW DEPARTURE." A "NEW DEPARTURE" is nothing remarkable at Oak Hall. Every day many suits of our fine clothing make "new departures" in directions in which they have never travelled before, until now Oak Hall Clothing is known and worn in every State, if not in every city and town, from Maine to Mexico. We often make a "New Departure" in the matter of prices, leaving the old figures and the current prices, and selling at many per cent. below other clothing houses; in fact, such a "New Departure" we have just now made to sell of our enormous Summer Stock. Whenever we see a chance to make an improvement in styles, materials, or work, we immediately make a "New Departure" in that direction. We are now receiving large lots of elegant White Marseilles Vests, Linen Coats and Suits, Duck Suits, Alpaca Coats, Drap d'ete Coats and Suits, Thin Cassimere Suits for Gents', Youths', Boys', and Children's Summer Wear. Linen Busters by the Thousand or in quantities to suit purchasers. WAREMAN & BROWN, OAK HALL, THE LARGEST CLOTHING HOUSE IN AMERICA, S. E. CORNER SIXTH AND MARKET STREETS.
