I CANNOT CALL HER MOTHER.

BY MISS SARAH T. BOLTON.

The marriage rite is over, And though I turned aside, To keep the guests from seeing The tears I could not hide, I weep'd my life in spilling, And led my little brother, To greet my father's chosen, But I could not call her mother.

She is a fair young creature, With a meek and gentle air, With blue eyes soft and loving, And silver sunny hair— I know my father gives her The love he bore another, But he was more an angel I could not call her mother.

To-night I heard her singing A song I used to love, When its sweet notes were uttered By her who sings above; It pained my heart to hear it, And my tears I could not smother, For every word was hallowed By the dear voice of my mother.

My father, in the sunshine Of happy days, was wont to send me to the doctor to prescribe for him, who ordered him to take an ounce of brandy per day—The old chap overhauled his arithmetic and found, in the table of apothecaries weight, eight drams make an ounce—“Mine,” says the Doctor, “let the doctor prescribe for me; I didn't get but six drams before and now I get eight!”

From my mother's picture I've my accustomed place, And set beside my father's—A younger, fairer face! They were made her dear old chamber The boudoir of another, But I will not forget thee, My own, my angel mother.

Editorial Change.—Mr. P. E. Jennings, late of the Iberville Gazette, has retired from that paper, to be succeeded by Dr. S. E. McKinley.

An old Dutchman, who had recently joined the Temperance society, was taken sick, and sent to the doctor to prescribe for him, who ordered him to take an ounce of brandy per day—The old chap overhauled his arithmetic and found, in the table of apothecaries weight, eight drams make an ounce—“Mine,” says the Doctor, “let the doctor prescribe for me; I didn't get but six drams before and now I get eight!”
