Is neither prim nor burly. He is a man of large frame, over which a loose ofack coat is carelessly buttoned. Complexion light, eyes bine, hair, once black, now pepper and salt, whiskers voluminous, eyebrows black and thick, good forehead, and the lower face ample. This conveys no better idea of the man's appearance than a French passport. But the truth is, Sue's countenance and figure have none of those peculiarities which make description possible. He looks, in his portrait, like a comfortable, careless elderly gentleman, taking his ease in an easy chair and easy coat. He does not look like an author—authors seldom do. His sir is rather that of a prosperous citizen. Sue is only forty-five years old but he has lived fast, and looks like fifty-five. Lamartine is sixty-three, and would pass easily for fifty-three.
