OH IF IT IS ONLY TRUE!

Perfect Cane Harvester the Claim of Hadley of Indiana.

If the cane planters of the state had one desire above another, it has been for the perfection of a cane harvester. The matter of harvesting is the greatest expense in connection with the culture of cane. Not only is it the most expensive item, but it is also the most exasperating, because of the usual scarcity of labor and the unusual inferior quality of that that is obtainable.

Consequently, the information given before a meeting of the Louisiana Sugar Planters' association last week in New Orleans, by A. N. Hadley of Indianapolis, Ind., to the effect that he had perfected a cane harvester, is welcome news to every grower of cane. Mr. Hadley is the millionaire inventor of the corn harvester and corn shucker, and said he would have three of the machines in the cane fields of Louisiana during the coming fall. In the meantime, the famous inventor will take his experimental machine to Cuba, where he will conduct a series of tests in the cane fields of that country.

"I believe that Mr. Hadley has perfected a cane harvester," said Prof. H. P. Agee, assistant director of the experiment station, who has been the only member of the Sugar Planters' association who has watched the experiments conducted by the inventor during the past year.

According to the description of the machine given by Mr. Hadley in response to questions by John Dymond, Sr., Prof. W. C. Stubbs and others, it cuts the cane at the bottom, strips it, tops it, bundles it, and dumps it into accompanying carts. The experimental machine, now at Audubon park, where the experiments were conducted, weighs 6,500 pounds. The motive power of the experimental machine is gasoline, but an oil engine will be used in the perfected machine, and the required engine is now being constructed. The machine is double ended, and thus does not have to turn around to run back on the next rows. Its capacity, Mr. Hadley says, is an acre of cane an hour. It is operated like an automobile, with a driver and with a second man attending to the topping. The machine can be turned in a circle of thirty feet; can pick up prostrate cane; can cross rows angling, and has blades twenty-six inches long.

Did the Best He Could.

In the absence of the regularly appointed spokesman, Mr. Makinbrakes had reluctantly consented to make a presentation speech.

"Miss Higham," he said, "unfortunately it is my—er—fortunate lot to fulfill the embarrassing—the pleasant duty of—of inflicting a few remarks upon this occasion—which is highly appreciated, I assure you, and by none more so than myself, for the reason that—in short, as I may say, it falls to my lot to convey, so to speak, the assurances of—that is, with the assurances of those to whom—to whom I have occasion to refer to—more or less—in this connection, together with the best wishes, if I may so express myself, of those who have clubbed together—who have associated themselves—not that you need anything of the kind, of course, but as a token of—as a token of—with which few remarks, Miss Higham, it is my—my pleasant surprise to hand you this gold watch and chain. I—I thank you."—Chicago Tribune.

Returned by the Glacier.

One of the first instances on record of a body returned by a Swiss glacier is that of the Hamel accident, which took place in 1820. Several guides were swept down by an avalanche and buried into a crevasse. Hamel prophesied that the glacier would yield them up again in the course of a thousand years, but Dr. Forbes believed that the end of the glacier would be reached by the fifties in forty years. This statement was considered bold, but its accuracy was borne out by the event. In forty years the flow of ice brought the bodies to light.

In 1896 Henry Arkwright was lost in a glacier. In just thirty-one years his brother received a telegram from the mayor of Chamouli that the body was found. Every article of clothing was intact. His name and regiment could be read clearly on his handkerchief, and his gold pencil case opened and shut as easily as when he last used it three decades before.—"True Tales of Mountain Adventure."

Shakespeare and the Actors.

Why do we call Garrick a great actor? Because the box office of his time acclaimed him one. Davies tells us how his first performance of Richard III, was received with loud and reiterated applause. How his "look and actions when he pronounced the words," were so significant and important from his visible enjoyment of the incident that several loud shouts of approbation proclaimed the triumph of the actor and satisfaction of the audience." A modern purist would have walked out of the playhouse when his ear was insulted by Cibber's tag, but from a theater point of view it is a good tag, and I have always thought it a pity that Shakespeare forgot to set it down himself and left to Cibber the burden of finishing the line.—Judge Parry in Cornhill Magazine.

"Off with his head; so much for Buckingham,"

Why the Earth Cannot Explode.

The theory is frequently advanced that planets and even suns sometimes explode and that the earth may some day blow up like a bombshell. No celestial body the size of the earth could possibly explode. If the entire molten interior of our globe could be replaced with nitroglycerin and detonated the explosion would not lift the earth's crust. In other words, if we assume that the crust of the earth is from fifty to a hundred miles in thickness it would require something much more powerful than even nitroglycerin to burst the shell. It is necessary only to do a little figuring to see that the pressure of the earth's crust at a depth of from fifty to a hundred miles far exceeds the pressure exerted by the most powerful high explosive.—Hudson Maxim.

Too Literal.

"Well, yes," said old Uncle Lazenberry, who was intimately acquainted with most of the happenances of the village, "Almira Stang has broken off her engagement with Charles Henry Tootwiler. They'd be goin' together for about eight years, durin' which time she had been inculcatin' into him, as you might call it, the beauties of economy. But when she discovered just lately that he had learnt his lesson so well that he had saved up 217 pairs of socks for her to darn immediately after the wedding she 'peared to conclude that he had taken her advice a little too literally and broke off the match."—Puck.
