HOUMA:

THURSDAY, October 3, 1855.

A friend, from the country, stepped in to look upon the wonders of a printing office, and while here, accidentally stuck his elbow into a galley of type, squabbling the same so as to render the whole unfit for use at present. This will account for the meager appearance of our columns this week. Among the articles piéd was the details of the Fall of Sevastopol. While upon this subject, we would ask our friends, who call upon us, to be careful where they place their hands or elbows, as a little carelessness on their part gives us a mint of trouble.

We understand that another grand American Barbecue is to come off in this parish during the present month. Gov. P. O. HERBERT, Gov. A. B. ROMAN, R. HUNT L. DUVIGNEAUD, D. G. KENNER, J. NICHOLAS, Judge CAGE, and others will be present. The time has not yet been determined upon, but due notice will be given. Great preparations are making and a grand turn out of the 'dear people' is anticipated.

Mr. A. S. ROSE, of Thibodaux, intends being with us in the course of a few days. He is now making preparations to remove his carriage manufacturing establishment to Houma, and within the next fortnight he will have fully established himself, and will be ready to accommodate the people of the parish with every thing in his line, in the shape of buggies, carriages, harness, &c., &c.

Mr. Rose's establishment will be quite an acquisition to our town, and we hope he may meet with the success his energy and perseverance so justly deserves. The business qualifications of Mr. Rose and his indomitable energy, and skill as a workman, will insure him success, wherever he may cast his lot; and we bespeak for him the confidence and patronage of the community.

FALL OF SEVASTOPOL.

Don't be alarmed, gentle reader! It may be a mistake. We would not advise you to shout before you are out of the woods. We have already conflicting accounts in regard to this affair, and it may all turn out to be a hoax. Every paper (or nearly so) that we received last mail had a column headed, in large capitals, "One week later from Europe!—HIGHLY IMPORTANT NEWS!!—THE FALL OF SEVASTOPOL!!—FLIGHTFUL SLAUGHTER!!—Defences Blown Up!!—SHIPPING BURNED!!—PLACE EVACUATED!!—30,000 LIVES LOST!! And then, again, we have one or two which contain contradictions. We have always heard it said that good news flies faster than bad, and this instance is tolerably good evidence of the truth of the saying. We do not believe that the sympathies of the American people are enlisted on the side of the Russian despot, but on the contrary, we believe that a majority of the American people would be rejoiced to hear of the triumph of the Allied Army. There is too much English blood flowing in the veins of the American people for them to wish that England and France should be defeated. The American people think they have the exclusive right of thrashing England, and know themselves fully competent to discharge that duty, should occasion require it, (which God forbid,) and they wish no one, much less Russia, to interfere upon their right.

A detailed account, which we take from the New Orleans Picayune, may be found in another column of to-day's issue. We publish both sides, that the reader may draw his own conclusions. Something has been done, at any rate, as the Russian view of the affair admits that the Allies had possession of the South, while the Allied accounts go to show that the whole of Sevastopol was in their possession.

The Police Jury, of this parish, in the Court-House, in this place, on Monday last, and after electing officers, appointing committees, and transacting most important business, adjourned on Monday night at the 22d inst.

About nine o'clock, on Sunday night last, the citizens of our generally quiet village were aroused by an alarm of fire—something very unusual, and very alarming, to us, from the fact that we are so very badly prepared for the reception of such a visitor. The fire took place in the foundry and machine shop of Mr. W. H. H. RIDER, and caught from a furnace in which Mr. R. had been melting brass. Not much harm was done, however, owing to the timely warning given, and the extra exertions of our citizens, in subduing the flames.

While upon this subject we would suggest that some preparations be made for an emergency of this kind, in the shape of ladders, hooks, buckets, &c. From what we can learn, there are not more than half a dozen ladders in the place, and in case a fire should break out, we would not know where to find them. And it is too great a tax upon our merchants to have their new buckets used on such occasions. People are too reckless, on such occasions, to be entrusted with the light pine buckets which are kept in the stores. Fire buckets should be purchased, ladders and hooks should be made, and kept in some secure, though accessible, place, and used only on such occasions. If a fire should break out anywhere in the neighborhood of Lester's Corner, there would be no alternative but to let the most valuable portion of the town burn to ashes, whereas if we were well supplied with the articles above mentioned, the greater part of it might be saved.

What say our citizens, in regard to the purchase of four or five dozen buckets, and as many ladders, hooks, ropes, poles, &c., as would be necessary on such occasions? The importance of these suggestions cannot fail to be evident to all who own property in our town. Let some one start the thing, and we believe that in less than forty-eight hours, enough money can be raised, by subscription, to purchase all these articles.

COMMUNICATED. FROM THE CROSSING.

Friend Ceres: You were kind enough to publish and eulogize a few lines I wrote you a few weeks since, I propose again to trespass upon your columns with a few observations upon the same subject therein discussed. And firstly let me tell you that to-day or to-morrow certain, the last rail will be laid on the Opelousas road between New Orleans and Tigerville. This is a most complete fulfillment of Mr. Bailey's promise to the company and to the public that he would have it finished thus far by the first of October, and will make the unexampled distance of about eight miles of laid and finished Railroad track, in Louisiana or the South, in a little over thirty one days. If the public will now come to the rescue, and do what each can do towards pushing on the work with "material aid," the present able and persevering Board of Directors will push it on to the banks of the Berwick's Bay at once.

Since writing you before, I have had ample opportunity to witness the value of the Terrebonne Canal between the Railroad and Houma, and upon that subject I propose to say a few words. If the present Canal Company is insolvent and cannot or will not make the necessary repairs to secure a free navigation for flat and tow-boats, why not petition the Legislature, the coming winter, to dissolve the present violated charter, and make appropriations for cleaning it out, building, say two locks, and raising all the plantation bridges, so as to admit the passage beneath of the class of boats now navigating the canal? It would be one of the most used and useful works of the kind in the Southern Country, and if the State would give the people of Terrebonne such a work, there would be no grumbling at the imposition of a fair tonnage duty to keep the work in repair, and add to the revenues of our beloved Louisiana. It is my impression that two locks would so divide the current and fall of water as to render the Bayou navigable the whole year.—Another plan permit me to submit to your readers. It is this: Form a Houma and Thibodaux Shell Road and Canal Company, and petition the Legislature to convey to said company so much of the Terrebonne Canal as lays between Houma, lower line, and the upper line of Terrebonne parish. Then repair first the canal and use its revenues for building a shell-road along its banks. You might build one, two, or perhaps six miles of shell-road in one year; at any rate, you would gradually work it out, and at last have two splendid sources of profit on all you might invest in it. Look at the new Canal and Shellroad from New Orleans to the Lake. It has been to the original shareholders a mint of money. One great advantage you would have in adopting this plan would be the immediate source of revenue from the canal, and then let each man, planter and merchant come up and subscribe what he or she can to aid these improvements along. The canal could not fail to be a source of revenue at once, whilst the road would in two or three years also be a fine source of profit.

There are other suggestions which I will make in another communication. C. Terrebonne Crossing Sept. 28th.

COL. THIBODAUX'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.—Below we publish the letter of Col. Thibodaux, accepting the nomination of Senator for this district:

TEREBONNE, 27th Sept. 1855.

Gentlemen:—I have the honor to acknowledge the reception of your communication of the 25th, announcing my nomination, by the American party, as their candidate to fill the vacancy in the Senate, occasioned by the death of our most esteemed citizen, the late Col. P. B. Key.

This unsolicited, and I may say, unmerited favor, coming from the young, vigorous and patriotic American party, is a temptation too great to be resisted. Let us prepare, gentlemen, for the approaching contest. Our cause is just; our bond of union is the love of our native land. Our first struggle may meet with defeat; but the time is not far distant when our cause shall triumph.

For my part, gentlemen, whatever may be the fate of the election, I shall ever be proud to have been the American nominee for the Senate of Louisiana.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

H. MICHEL THIBODAUX.

Capt. B. G. Darden, and Col. Jona. C. White, Committee.

AN IMPERIAL BOUDOIR.

A Paris correspondent of the New York Herald, furnishes the following description of the boudoir built for the Empress, at the Exhibition:

"The door opens on a little salon, which the fairies might have chosen for their court of audience. A carpet of white silk receives the imperial foot, and a canopy and six fauteuils in dead gold, and covered with needle work from the hands of the famous Madame de Maintenon. Oh! if, in the palmy days of her liaison with Louis the Fourteenth, the grand monarch, she could have dreamed the use to be made of her handiwork—more there for the imperial repose. The walls are panelled in white and gold, the centres being filled with the same needle work which covers the chairs, and the ceiling is formed into a large oval medallion, on which angels floating among azure clouds are beautifully painted, hovering around the two letters N. and P., artistically combined, as if to protect the imperial humanity whose names they indicate, from every breath of taint or injury. A small door-way on one side of the fireplace, draped over with a curtain of white silk and golden fringe, conducts you to a species of tent chamber from the half spiral plafond of which fall all over the walls, rich blue silk hangings, relieved with embroidered silver. Over the mantelpiece is a mirror from Venice, whose beautiful from at once bespeaks its origin; and in the corner, placed on a toilette table, covered with Honiton lace, is a dressing glass, from the house of Star & Mortimer, London, framed in silver, of the most elaborate workmanship. In expectation of the Empress's immediate arrival, two of the imperial domestics, in state liveries, entered this little room while I was there, and spread on a small table of inlaid Parian marble, supported on a golden pedestal, formed of Lilliputian fingers, whose illustrative character I had not time to examine, a tray of refreshments such as Venus herself might have tasted, and still remained an ethereal goddess, I was given to understand that the fittings of this luxurious retreat were all made so as to be removable at pleasure, and may be adapted to any other abode in which it may be the imperial will to transport them. Indeed, they have nothing of a temporary character about them. For the present no place could have been more appropriately selected in the Place de Industrie, embossed—if I may say so—as it is in silks from Lyons, of such surpassing beauty, such overpowering richness, that any attempt to describe, them would be more than futile. It is sufficient to say that no other loom than that of this far renowned province of France could come within a league of such productions as are now offered to the gaze of the wondering visitor, as he strolls along the galleries of the Paris Exhibition."

Marrying Under Difficulties.

A runaway couple, "true lovers" of the most fervent Yankee stamp, arrived at a small inn near Boston, and wanted the landlord to send for a minister to "splice 'em," and to "be quick about it."

The Landlord complied, and the "licensed minister" came.

"Be you the minister?" asked the bridegroom.

"I am," replied he.

"Oh you be, eh? What's your name?"

"Stiggins."

"Wal, now, Stiggins," said the Yankee, "do it up brown, and your money is ready," and forthwith the reverend gentleman commenced:

"You will please join your hands."

"The Yankee stood up by his lady-love, and seized her fervently by the hand."

"You promise, Mr. A——" said the parson, "to take this woman—"

"Yaas!" said the bridegroom.

"To be your lawful and wedded wife?"

"Yaas—yaas!"

"That you will love and honor her in all things?"

"Sart'n—yaas, I tell yer!"

"That you will cling to her, and her only, as long as you both shall live?"

"Ya s, indeed—nothin' else!" continued the Yankee, in the most delighted and earnest manner.

But here the reverend clergyman halted, much to the surprise of all present, and to the especial annoyance of all present, and to the especial annoyance and discomfort of the ardent bridegroom.

"One moment, my friend," responded the minister slowly; for it occurred to him that the laws of his State did not permit this performance without the "publication" of the 'banns' for a certain length of time.

"What—what—what in thunder's the matter? Don't stop here! Put her thru! What's split, parson? Any thing gin out?"

"Just at this moment, my friend, I have remembered that you cannot be married in Massachusetts, as the law—"

"Can't! Wot in natur's the reason? I like her—she likes me; what's to hinder?"

"You have not been published, Sir, I suspect."

"That's a fact; ain't a-goin' to be, nuther; that's the reason why we crossed over into your 'little Rhody.'" (the scene was on the border of Rhode Island,) "on the sly, you see, parson."

"I—really—Sir—" said the minister.

"R-a-c-e-l-y!—wal, never mind; go on. 'Taint fair—don't you see 'taint! You've married me, and haint tetched her! Now don't stop here! 'Taint the fair thing; by gracious 'taint now, and—and yeou know it!"

"I will consult—" said the minister, hesitatingly.

"No, you won't—no, you don't! You don't consult nothin' nor nobody, until this 'ere business is concluded!" And with this he turned the key, and put it (amidst the titterings of the witnesses whom the landlord had called in) in his pocket.

Seizing the hand of his trembling bride, he said:

"Go on, now, strait from where you left off; put us through, and no dodging. It'll all be right; if it ain't right, we'll make it right in the morning, as the saying is."

After reflecting a moment, the parson concluded to run the risk of the informality; so he continued:

"You promise, madam, to take this man to be your lawful husband?"

"Yaas," said the Yankee, as the lady bowed.

"That you will love, honor and obey him?"

"Them's 'em," said Jonathan, as the lady bowed again.

"And that you will cling to him as long as you both shall live?"

"That's the talk!—stick to one another allers!"—and the lady said 'yes' again.

"Then in the presence of these witnesses, I pronounce you man and wife."

"Hoorah!" shouted Jonathan, leaping half way to the ceiling with joy.

"And what God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

"Hoorah!" continued Jonathan. What's the price?" (The parson seemed to hesitate.) How much! spit it out! Don't be afeared. You did it like a book. Here's a V. Never mind the change. Send for a hack, landlord. Give us your bill. I've got her! Hail Columby!"

The poor fellow seemed entirely unable to control his joy; and ten minutes afterwards he was on his way to the railroad depot with his wife, "the happiest man out of jail," said the eye-witnesses who described the scene.

THE FEVER AT NATCHEZ.—A telegraphic dispatch to the Vicksburg Whig, dated the 24th inst., states that the fever is increasing very rapidly at Natchez—fifteen deaths had occurred during the last two days. It is said to be less fatal than in 1853.

The Louisville Courier says that at least one slave per day effects his escape on the cars of the New Albany and Salem (Ind.) railroad.

Judge Haliburton is said to have repudiated the authorship of "Sam Slick in search of a Wife," just published.
