

DAILY DEMOCRAT

Official Journal of the State of Louisiana. Official Journal of the City of New Orleans. Office, 109 Gravier Street. GEORGE W. DUPRE & CO. PROPRIETORS.

THE STATE VS. DIBBLE.

In another column we print a letter from Judge Dibble, addressed to the editor of the DEMOCRAT, in reply to our comments on his recent arrest on the charge of embezzling public funds while he was Assistant Attorney General. Judge Dibble's defense of himself is scarcely worthy of his reputation for ingenuity in argument and audacity of statements in a bad or difficult cause.

There is not a man who has acted in public life "during," to use Judge Dibble's language, "times of almost universal corruption," who would not enter a general denial of any charge of corruption that might be made against him. If we are to receive the assurances of the men who for eight years have oppressed and plundered Louisiana, we should canonize Warmoth as a saint and hold up Kellogg as a paragon of the loftiest political virtue; even Twitthell would be a martyr to patriotism, and the fugitive Wickliffe would return to the bosom of a repentant and admiring people.

the ranks of the most corrupt and profligate politicians and highwaymen. We have never had social relations with the class of men to which Judge Dibble belongs, but if report be true, the profligacy and extravagance of their living will better account for the impetuosity of any of them than the honesty of their dealings.

And now, as to the pending charges, Judge Dibble concedes that he, with public funds, cashed warrants for the government, and the profit that he presumes was made, was used in the political struggle then pending. As the criminality of Judge Dibble, in a transaction in relation to which he makes this concession, is to be determined by the court, we need not discuss it at length.

That he did not use the money, as he alleges, for himself personally, does not in the least affect the criminality of the transaction; but that he gave the money of the people to be used against them by their bitterest enemies and most relentless oppressors and plunderers, aggravates his crime and places him beyond the pale of mercy, and the law should do its best to bring him to justice.

We have only space to briefly refer to the Judge's concluding observations. He says: "I have not been engaged in plundering the State or the people, as you charge." We could not expect Judge Dibble to confess his crime, but we might attach more weight to his earnest denial of guilt if Mr. Kellogg, whose friend, associate and appointee he was, had not distinctly declared, early in 1876, that Judge Dibble was a defaulter.

"In conclusion," says the Judge, "permit me to express the belief that I will not be convicted of crime, as you predict." Perhaps our prediction was premature. Judge Dibble and those with whom he is associated have for eight years had possession of all the archives and records of the State; they are shrewd and able men, and there is little doubt that they have taken such care to cover up their tracks that it will be difficult to obtain evidence sufficiently strong to convict them.

But Judge Dibble claims exemption from attack on the ground that he and his party "are defeated." Our attack upon him, he says, is ungenerous, because he is routed. This is a new theory of politics and law.

If, however, Judge Dibble means only that we are under a sentimental obligation not to attack a defeated—a routed—enemy, he ought to have pointed to us some one instance at least, in which he and his party exhibited any consideration for, or generosity toward, the more than four hundred thousand white citizens of Louisiana whom they had not only routed, but held as it were under their feet with the bayonets of the Federal government.

We have on our table, through the courtesy of Gen. Early, several numbers of "The Southern Historical Society Papers." This publication is issued by authority of the society under the direction of the executive committee. Rev. J. William Jones, D. D., an accomplished scholar, is the editor.

That Judge Dibble has lived in Louisiana fourteen years we freely concede. But we have never heard that any period of residence in this State was calculated to strengthen a man's moral nature and render him incapable of corruption. Alas! we have too many notorious instances in our midst of men who were born and have lived in Louisiana all their days who have been among the foremost to engage in the ruin of her prosperity and to plunder her treasury.

Foreigners must imagine that Ohio is the chief part of this country. Last year from June to October the Ohio election was the absorbing political question and the chief topic of American journalistic discussion. Now it is prominent as a good hot-bed to grow officeholders, and for the next four months we will have that biennial Ohio election to read about and hear of till the ear is weary and one wishes the State had been called Billialensylvania, just so both the most pleasant sounds of the State and its politics might always rise in the same sentence that one might be spared the double infliction.

Metereological changes and terrestrial convulsions have been unusually frequent during the present year. Within two weeks we have had heavy tidal waves and earthquakes among the islands of the Pacific, and extensive tornadoes in our own country, while several of the principal volcanoes in the world have suddenly assumed an actively eruptive state.

From Mr. D. B. Morey, general passenger and ticket agent of the great Jackson route, we learn that the overflow which heretofore caused a suspension of travel between Monroe, La., and Vicksburg, Miss., has subsided and that the trains over that road have been resumed. The sale of tickets to Monroe, via Jackson and Vicksburg, has, in consequence, been resumed at the office of the great Jackson route, corner Camp and Common streets.

The New York Chamber of Commerce denounces the Naval office in the Custom-House as a costly annoyance and recommends its abolition. If a policy of civil service reform and retrenchment is in order, and the Naval office could be dispensed with, the press would at least be saved some telegraphic expense in this part of the country.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, in His infinite wisdom it hath pleased God to take from our midst our comrade and brother, ST. CLAIR JOHNS, Captain of Company G, Fifth Louisiana Regiment of the late Army of Northern Virginia, U. S. A.;

And whereas, by his death, society has lost a useful and efficient member, and his family have been bereft of a beloved and loving husband and father;

And whereas, his old comrades in arms, having known him in times and under circumstances that tried men's souls, and under every circumstance knowing him to have been faultless in his bearing as a man and in his deportment as a soldier;

Wherefore, be it resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with his family in their great bereavement; and, for ourselves, we mourn his death as that of a brother, comrade and friend, whose loss to us is irreparable.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the daily papers of this city.
