SO IS THE STORY TOLD.

A fair head meekly bowed, A shy glance coming after, A shy glance coming after,
Voices not over loud
And a low, sweet laughter;
So is the story told,
Up in the cottage old
Under the smoky rafter.

A fair maid flushing red
With an unknown feeling,
But shamed to bow her head
For all her lover's kneeling;
No is the story told
Down' mid the white and gold
Under the painted ceiling.

SOUTHERN SUMMERING PLACES

Their Advantages in Cheapness, Comfort Rtc., Over Northern Watering Places.

[N. Y. Tribune.]

Ric., Over Northern Watering Places.

(N. Y. Tribune.)

It would be of advantage to the whole country if a part of the great current of tourist travel rushing now here and there through the North could be diverted to some of the summer resorts of the South. The good effect of the President's proposed visit would be greatly strengthened by a cordial, social intercouse between the educated classes of both sections, and, under the circumstances, the first advance should be made from our side.

At a watering place where every man pays his own scot, there is a freedom from obligation, a lazy good humor, a holiday zest, which is much more conductive to good fellowship and friendly feeling than are the relation of host and guest. It may seem a reversal of things to go South in summer. But the Sulphur Springs of Virginia are delightfully cool, and this summer the hotels are better kept, as a general rule, than for many years. The wealther classes of Virginia resort there now, as before the war. There is, of course, less display of substantial family equipages, servants and diamonds, but there is just as much state, and as solid a conviction that when Virginia makes a joke all the world laughs. There is really a little too much vaunting of poverty, perhaps, for sound common sense. The younger generation show themselves too apt to sit down on "the fortune lost in the war" as a pedestal quite sufficient for present and future glory. Intercourse with Northerners would probably suggest to their minds that twelve years is enough for an energetic man, in possession of education and influence, if not to make a fortune, to lay the basis of a comfortable competency. Southerners are not slow in receiving such practical hints. It is curious to observe how they have been incoulated with a good many work-day ideas by the very Federal soldiers whose presence was so sore a grievance among them.

The whole mountain region, from Upper Virginia to South Carolina, offers the very Federal soldiers whose presence was so sore a grievance among them.

The whole mountain region, from Upper Virginia to South Carolina, offers temptations such as are not to be found in the Adirondacks to sportsmen of every kind. Bears, welves, deer and the smaller game are to be found in all the ranges below Christiansburg. In Southern Tennessee every farmer in these mountain regions will "take in folks" for prices absurdly low, and furnish, as a rule, good butter, coffee, and hot bread and chicken ad nauseam. There are quiet little watering places, too, much smaller than the Virginia Springs, to which the best classes of the Carolinas, Georgia and the lower Guif States resort, and where Northerners receive an exceptionally cordial welcome. Board at these places—substantial, good and well served—ranges in price at from $9 to $10 per week. There are quaint little inns, too, in villages lying literally above the clouds, where the same kind of board costs but from $5 to $5 per week; where bear-steaks and venison-coliops appear for breakfast; where spring chickens are sold at eighty cents per dozen, and mountain trout at five cents per pound. We know of no such paradises for artists and epicures as these almost inaccessible North Carolina hamlets. In South Carolina the principal place of resort is Gesar's Head, a mountain summit over 4000 feet above tide-water, from which can be seen the vast valley of Carolina and Georgia, and where winter clothes and fires are necessary just now. There are houses furnishing comfortable and very cheap accommodations here also. We know, in short, no better field for exploration open to artists, lovers of the picturesque, or students of human nature, than these remote Southern watering-places. The scenery is the most magnificent in the whole Appalachian range, and the social world—the thought, manner and character of the people—are totally different once began to improve it. Hundreds of these Amazons congregated in the vicinity of Twentieth and Fisk streets. The nearest factory from that corner was the Goss & Phillips place. The crowd rapidly increased. Women with babies in arms joined the enraged female rioters. The streets were fluttering with calico of all shades and shape. Hundreds were bareheaded, their disheveled locks streaming in the wind, Many were shoeless. Some were young, scarcely women in age, and not at all in appearance. Dresses were tucked up round the waists. Open busts were as common as a barber's chair. Brawny, sunburnt arms brandished clubs. Knotty hands held rocks and sticks and wooden blocks. Female yells, shrill as a curlew's cry, filled the air. The swarthy features of the Bohemian women were more horrible to look on in that scene than their men in the Halsted street riots. The unsexed mob of female incendiaries Female yells, shrill as a curlew's cry, filled the air. The swarthy features of the Bohemian women were more horrible to look on in that scene than their men in the Halsted street riots. The unsexed mob of female incendiaries rushed to the fence and yards of Goss & Phillips' manufacturing company. The consternation which this attack created extended to Twenty-second street, at that hour very quiet. A crowd of men gathered on Flak street to witness this extended to Twenty-second street, at that hour very quiet. A crowd of men gathered on Fisk street to witness this curious repetition of the scenes of the Parisian Commune. The fence surrounding the yard gave way and was carried off by the petticoated plunderers in their unbridled race. There was fear for a little while that the Ama zonian army would continue their depredations. Word was dispatched to the Hinman Street Station, and a force of officers under Lieutenant Vesey pushed down to the corner of the contest. The women hissed as they saw the blue-costs march along. Some of the less valorous took to their heels incontinently. Some developed into wonderful athletes, and citches were danced over as though they were the floor of some popular ball room. Others stood their ground. A shower of missiles greeted the boys as they came smiling along, left front into line. One woman pitched a couple of blocks at the heads of the officers, and then moved on to attend to her family duties. The men were weak in the strength and forcefulness of their language compared with these wretches. Profanity the most foul rolled easily off their tongues with horrid glibness, expressions were made use of that brought the blood mantling to the check of the worst-hardened men in the crowds of spectators. It was awful. Several shots were fired, by whom was not known. The police soon restored order and drove the women back, and finally scattered them. This most disgraceful of occurrences is the most d

AN ORIENTAL DOCTOR.

Mr. Oscanyan, in his book "The Sultan and his People," tells the following anecdote of a Turkish physician.

A person exceedingly ill of typhus fever called in one of these medical gentlemen, who, although he considered the case quite hopeless, prescribed for his patient and took his leave. The next day, in passing by, he inquired of a servant at the doer if his master was not dead.

"Dead! No; he is much better."

Whereupon the doctor proceeded up stairs to obtain the solution of this miracle.

stairs to obtain the solution of this miracle.

"Why," said the convalescent, "I was consumed with thirst, and I drank a paliful of the juice of pickled cabbage."

"Wonderfui!" quoth the doctor. And out came the tablets, on which the physician made this inscription: "Cured of typhus fever Mehemed Aghg, an upholsterer, by drinking a paliful of pickled cabbage juice."

Soon after the doctor was called to another patient, a yaghlikee, or dealer another patient, a yaghlikee, or dealer in embroidered handkerchiefs, suffering from the same malady. He forthwith prescribed a "paliful of pickled cabbage juice."

On calling the next day to congratulate his patient on his recovery, he was astonished to be told that the man was dead. The Oriental Æsculaplus, in his bewilderment at this phenomena, came to the safe conclusion and duly noted it in his memoranda, that "although in cases of typhus fever pickled cabbage juice is an efficient remedy, it is not, however, to be used unless the patient be by profession an upholsterer."

A very intelligent reader, who was born toward the close of last century, and who still takes a deep interest in things new and old, sends us the following, copied from the (British) National Gazeteer:

CHICAGO VIRAGOES.

A Feculiar Scene of Thursday's Ferocleus Outbreak.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean, July 27.]

Women first came to the front as rampant rioters yesterday. The taste of blood which the men had had in the early part of the day seemed to have inflamed the women. The night before last there were a few, half crazed with liquor and smarting under their real or fancied wrongs, who were bold enough to yell for pillage. Yesterday there was a ripening of this sentiment, and the result was an Amazonisn outbreak in the afternoon. In the neighborhood of West Twenty-second and Fisk streets there are a number of planing mills, sash, door and blind factories and lumber yards. Just northeast of this are the homes of many of the most restive of the rioters. These men run down ha few minutes to Maisted street through alleys, open backyards, etc., and disappear as suddenly in the event of an attack from the police. The men were glutted with their encounters of the forenoon. Now was the women's opportunity, and they stone began to improve it. Hundreds of these Amazons congregated in the vicinity of Twentieth and Fisk streets. The nearest factory from that corner was the Goss & Phillips place. The crowd rapidly increased. Women with babies in arms joined the enraged female rioters. The streets were fluttering with called or all shades and shape. Hundreds of the server was the coss & Phillips place. THE PROPLE'S BANK.—Passing the corner of Decatur and Oustombones streets yesterday, we noticed that the People's Bank was moving into the new edifice at that corner. The banking room is really a gem and may be called one of the handsomest business rooms in the country. The freecoing was done by Mesers. Schubert and Harry Dressel, and represents Justice and Commerce, with a railroad and steamboat on either side, and medallions in the corners bearing the pelican, bee-hive, anchor and crescent. Altogether the decorations are admirable in their kind and most artistically executed.
