

DAILY DEMOCRAT.

Official Journal of the State of Louisiana.

Office, 109 Gravier Street.

GEORGE W. DUPRE & CO., PROPRIETORS.

GEORGE W. DUPRE, JOHN AUGUSTIN, A. J. HEARSEY, ALBERT G. JANIN.

E. J. HEARSEY, EDITOR.

NEW ORLEANS, OCTOBER 21, 1877.

The people of the city and throughout the State will find a statement of the Treasurer, on the third page of this issue of the DEMOCRAT, very interesting.

The report of the commerce between the United States and Mexico shows that this was $28,110,119 in 1865, $25,161,776 in 1871, $22,809,388 in 1873, and only $18,713,925 last year.

The official returns from Ohio, with the exception of three counties, make the following showing: R. M. Bishop, Democrat, 281,101; W. H. West, Republican, 242,976; S. Johnson, Greenback and Workingmen, 15,736; D. H. Bond, Workingmen, 12,480; H. A. Thompson, Prohibition, 4639; total vote polled, 556,932.

The colored brother is badly treated in the Forty-fifth Congress. Only three negroes present any real claim to seats in this Congress, Rainey, Smalls and Cain of South Carolina, and all of these seats are contested by Democrats.

Two amendments to the constitution regulating the judiciary and permitting free banks were submitted, but were both voted down by immense majorities.

WHAT IS "THE POLICY?" Our special from Washington this morning states, that the Republicans in both branches of Congress are actively engaged in an attempt to secure such modifications of the policy of the Administration as will enable them to harmonize their party.

Was it comprised in the order to withdraw the troops from the capitols of Louisiana and South Carolina? Is it the appointment of Anderson, Wells and their tools to Federal offices, and of a second class Kentucky politician to the Supreme bench?

To the Administration and its supporters belong all the honor and glory of the two latter constituents of this most incongruous and extraordinary scheme of pacification.

As for Louisiana, the repudiation idea has not even taken root here. Our debt amounting to twelve millions will not oppress our people, and the vast and developing wealth of the State will admit of its easy payment.

THE ARMY AND ITS REDUCTION. Thirty-two millions of dollars for an army of less than twenty-five thousand men is the most expensive military establishment in the world.

Such men for the Southern policy so far as the whole country is willing to concede the device and conduct of it to the President and his friends.

If there is any man illustrious in the Republican party entitled to the credit of ending the rule of the bayonet in this State and South Carolina, that man is Gen. Grant.

who counted in Mr. Hayes' that prevented the execution of that order. But in truth, the credit is due to the American people, who pronounced in thunder tones at the ballot box against Grantism; to the Democratic House of Representatives, which refused to vote a dollar for the support of the army unless a proviso was attached to the appropriation that the troops should not be used to sustain governments in the Southern States, and finally and immediately, to the rifle clubs of South Carolina and the White League and similar organizations in Louisiana.

When the American people had pronounced at the ballot-box, by an overwhelming majority, against the Republican policy of upholding carpet-bag government and usurpation in South Carolina and Louisiana, and stood ready to appeal to arms to sustain their judgment, and when the House of Representatives refused to vote a dollar for the army unless that policy was abandoned, even Grant quailed, and when Mr. Hayes assumed his ill got authority he found the policy of coercion broken down, and the army virtually disbanded; nay, he found the people of South Carolina and Louisiana, rendered desperate by their oppression, armed and organized to maintain their liberties or plunge the country into a tremendous revolution.

Even then Mr. Hayes seemed reluctant to adopt a policy of conciliation. He bartered, promised, delayed and hesitated until he was forced to choose between justice and war; and, impotent for the latter, he chose the former. Senator Wade, we presume, is good authority on this question. He came to this State in the interest of Mr. Hayes; he was one of the patriots who stimulated, encouraged and sustained the Returning Board and helped Sherman and Stanley Matthews to canonize Eliza Pinkston. He participated in every phase of the villainy by which the Louisiana election was reversed, and thoroughly learned the temper of the people of this State and the situation of affairs pending the electoral controversy.

THE STATE DEBT. In another column we print a correspondence from a prominent Philadelphia Republican and ex-Gov. Hahn, of this State, at present a Republican member of the Legislature. The queries of the Philadelphian are pertinent, and we think the response of Mr. Hahn correctly represents the views entertained by nine-tenths of the people of Louisiana as to the State debt.

projudice, as alien to the whole spirit of republican institutions, and only needed to support monarchical systems and defend dynasties in the old world.

The characteristic of our political system is the supremacy of the civil over the military power; of the will and liberties of the people against every form of that absolutism which is inseparable from the maintenance of what is known as a military establishment. The idea of a regular army was borrowed in the Christian nations from the Ottomans when they invaded Europe, and after the overthrow of the feudal system, Charles VI of France was the first Christian monarch to organize an army of regular soldiers, enlisted and placed under the absolute command of the king.

When great wars arose with other nations, the armies called into the field were composed of volunteers and citizens, not mercenary or regular soldiers. But in time of peace, the regular army has always adhered to the Monarch, rather than to the people or the country. The obedience and discipline of such a military force has always assumed the strictest subordination to the will and command of the Monarch. This sentiment of obedience to commanders, has been an essential feature of the system.

But our Democratic system rests upon the subordination of all power, and of all officers and agents of the government to the will of the people, to the constitution and the laws, and does not permit any of the servants of the people to obey the orders of any commander while they violate the laws and infringe upon the rights of the people.
