

THE REVENUE AND ASSESSMENT LAWS.

Our country exchanges throughout the State, almost without exception, insist upon a constitutional convention, and the relegation to it of the financial difficulties of the State for final adjustment.

There can be no disputing the justice of the complaint, but we do not see what relief the present Legislature can afford by the enactment of a new assessment law, that is, if a constitutional convention is to be assembled within the present year.

The rates of assessment throughout the State are by no means uniform, nor is there any method provided in our State statutes for securing such uniformity.

Another source of relief would be in the increase of the license tax on many vocations, and notably in the repeal of the Moffatt register law and the substitution of a much larger license tax on retail liquor dealers.

We do not see that by licensing gambling it will be encouraged. On the contrary, we believe it would operate just the other way, and, at the same time, subject all such establishments to the supervision of the lawful authorities.

In any event provision must be made to carry on the functions of government for the year, and such legislation as we have suggested, which would not operate any additional outlay or material alteration of the laws, might be passed without any serious prolongation of the session.

When Ben DeBar was manager of the St. Charles Theatre in New Orleans about seven years ago, he was frequently annoyed by the passage of cats across the stage during the performance.

O dear, what can the matter be? Matter enough, I should think when a man is tied down hand and foot almost and kept from his business by fever and ague, to say nothing of shaking the buttons all off his coat. That is matter enough surely, but let him use Beed's Gilt Edge Tonic and he will find immediate relief. It never fails in such cases, and is equally good in all malarial or bilious fevers.
